LAWRENCE JOHNSON.

Born, January 23, 1801.
Died, April 26, 1860.

This account of the Johnson family is affectionately dedicated to my father, Lawrence Johnson, with feelings of veneration and admiration, which mature years and time only tend to enhance. The flattery and exaggerated style so often used in memoirs caused me to hesitate, but the recording of the deeds and noble character of ancestors has been acknowledged in all ages as a duty and a natural instinct which compel recognition.

The success of Lawrence Johnson in life was the natural outcome of a remarkable combination of high personal qualities, united with industry and energy. Strict and accurate in all particulars, he was also genial in manner and always most retiring and modest. His business sagacity and ability to promptly see a point at issue were frequently remarked by his contemporaries. He was dignified in bearing, and in person and habits scrupulously neat. Delicacy of feeling was shown in an unusual degree and anything like display avoided.

His charities were so unobtrusive that those who afterwards examined his affairs were astonished at their magnitude. In home life, his unchanging devotion as husband and father brought into play qualities of gentleness, goodness and truth, strengthened by firmness and coupled with a delicate sense of humor. He devoted much time in a most self-sacrificing manner to the development of character and the religious training of his children.

ROBERT WINDER JOHNSON.

Robert Winder Johnson was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, May 7, 1854, son of Lawrence Johnson, the leading stereotyper and type-founder of his day, who was from Hull, England, his ancestors having lived in and near Barrow, Lincolnshire, for centuries. Mr. Johnson's mother, Mary Winder, was of Bucks County, Pennsylvania, descended from Quakers and early Dutch settlers of New York.

Robert Winder Johnson was educated at Mr. Gregory's school, on Market Street, near Eleventh, and entered the University of Pennsylvania in 1870, but left in the spring of 1871, and accompanied his mother to Europe, where he studied and travelled until late in 1874, and after returning to America, again travelled abroad in 1875 and 1876.

While in England, with his mother and youngest brother, in 1874, he visited Kingston-upon-Hull in Yorkshire and Barrow-upon-Humber in Lincolnshire, and Robert Winder Johnson there began the pursuit of genealogical researches and enquiries, developing a taste for this study, which was ever after followed.

During a portion of the summer of 1875, before going abroad, and again in the summer of 1876, he drove about Bucks County, Pennsylvania, searching church and meeting records, and studying local history. Later he pursued similar investigations in the country about Hull and Barrow, in England. For more than thirty-five years, he devoted much time to the collecting of information relating to the ancestry of himself and his wife. These researches were made not only in the United States and England, but also in the West Indies, Belgium, France, Holland and Germany. The results have appeared in, "Winders of America," 1902; "The Ancestry of Rosalie Morris Johnson," 1905; "The Ancestry of Rosalie Morris Johnson, Volume II", 1908; and at his untimely death, 1910, he had the material for this book almost ready for the press. In his genealogical work, as in all things, he was thorough and accurate. He became a member of The Historical Society in 1874, and was also a member of The Genealogical Society, The Colonial Society and The Netherlands Society, all of Pennsylvania.

PREFACE

MOST OF the material for this book was collected by my uncle, Robert Winder Johnson, over a period of many years. On his first visit to Hull, England, in 1874, he became interested in his English ancestry. He was desirous of pursuing this line of investigation, and was most fortunate in securing the services of a young clergyman, the Reverend C. W. Foster, Vicar of Timberland, a small parish in northern Lincolnshire. The valuable and interesting data unearthed and collected by the Rev. Mr. Foster was, with the help of the late William M. Mervine, a most eminent genealogist of Philadelphia, collated into a genealogy of the Johnson Family. The manuscript was about ready for press in 1910, when Mr. Johnson suddenly and tragically met with death. The work was then laid aside. As Mr. Mervine had died in 1914, and Mr. Johnson's house, "Barrow", was sold, the material gathered for the proposed book became scattered and disarranged.

In 1929, it was decided to have the book published. The undersigned assumed sponsorship of the enterprise, with certain other members of the family pledging their coöperation and support. The services of Miss Mame Ellison Wood, a genealogist who had been associated with Mr. Mervine for some years before his death, were engaged to arrange and compile the new data that had been assembled in the meantime.

Upon inquiry it was happily learned that the Rev. Mr. Foster, now Canon of Lincoln, to which office he had been raised in 1920, was still living and occupying the vicarage at Timberland, near the city of Lincoln. Fortunately, too, Canon Foster had been giving much time to the genealogical records of the county of Lincoln, and had collected, edited and published many volumes of ancient annals of the shire. He was and still is recognized as the outstanding authority on Lincolnshire history and genealogy.

Mr. Johnson had not used all of the material that Canon Foster had sent to him. When securing data on the ancestry of Mary Winder, his mother, he had met with a disturbing experience. He had offered a financial reward to anyone who should send him the record of the marriage of a certain member of the Winder family. Upon receiving a copy of such a record, he paid the reward. On his next visit to England, however, when he visited the little church of the parish from which he record was sent, he found that the parish register had been tampered with and a name had been changed to look like the one of which he was in search. This regrettable experience increased Mr. Johnson's habitual extreme caution, and thereafter he would accept no lineage unless it were proved by actual documents of which he could secure a certified copy.

This proper caution would eliminate much valuable and interesting data procured by Canon Foster, and would debar the use of strong or even convincing and unassailable circumstantial evidence, on which so many early lineages are based. It was therefore decided that, since Mr. Johnson had spent so much time and funds in his quest, this non-documentary, but most probably pertinent, data should be used. Moreover, such additional source material as had been secured since Mr. Johnson's death, has been assembled and collated. But, whenever this information is not vouched for by document, though it is amply backed by circumstantial evidence, it is indicated by a modifying phrase, such as "probably", "no doubt", "apparently", and the like. These lineages are here given as a matter of record. Some one, sometime in the future, may come across the actual record of proof, as new data and material are constantly being discovered and published in various English genealogical and kindred publications.

In addition to Mr. Johnson's work, the services of the Rev. Canon Foster, Miss Anne H. Cresson, the well-known genealogist, now deceased, the late William M. Mervine and Miss Mame Ellison Wood have been invaluable. Particular thanks are due to the following members of the family who have assisted in bringing the records up to date, and who, by financial support, have made this publication possible:

Robert Winder Johnson, Jr.,
Lawrence Edward Johnson,
Mrs. Rosalie Johnson Crocker,
(children of R. Winder Johnson);

Russell Hampden Johnson, Jr.,
Lawrence Johnson, Jr.,
Rufus King Lennig,
Mrs. Elizabeth Elmslie Dunn,
Lawrence Johnson Mead,
William Stuart Morris,
I. Wistar Morris,
(nephews and nieces of R. Winder Johnson).

Every effort has been made to gather all the available material and to avoid errors. These efforts, I trust, have not been in vain.

INTRODUCTION

IT HAS BEEN the aim of the compilers of this genealogy to preserve, as far as possible, the original form of the records and chronicles quoted; therefore many have been printed without alteration and with the exact spelling which occurs in the original manuscripts.

In reading these ancient records, a few words of explanation as to the spelling and other peculiarities may not be amiss.

The valuable treatise of Dr. Roemer on the origins of the English people and the English language is most illuminating, as he so clearly and interestingly explains and describes the evolution of the English language, both written and oral. Since his explanation and description of ancient written records, as well as of the origin of English words, both of place and family, will prove most helpful to the present-day descendants in visualizing and more fully understanding the life and environment of their ancestors in that remote age, the present compilers have taken the liberty of quoting freely from this excellent and comprehensive work.

Owing to the frequent invasion of Britain by alien hordes, the ancient English (Celtic) language came under the influence of the Roman, Saxon, Dutch, Danish and Norman invaders and settlers, who introduced their own words and idioms into every province and every town. But it was the Normans who added most to the enrichment of the English language by the addition of French barbarisms by the English, and all the Saxon barbarisms uttered by the Normans, in their endeavor to understand each other. In the mouth of the poor and lowly, English became so diversified in form and in utterance as to be hardly understood from one district to another.

It is a very common error to look upon the spelling of Old English as utterly lawless and unworthy of notice. On the contrary, Old English spelling was conducted on an intelligible principle, in that it was intended to be phonetic. Bound by no particular laws, each scribe did the best he could to represent the sounds which he heard, and the notion of putting in letters that were not sounded was, except in the case of the final "e", almost unknown. The very variations are of value, because they help to render more clear, in each case, what the sound was which the scribe was attempting to represent. To bear in mind that the spelling was phonetic is to hold the clue to it. Scribes differed in their mode of spelling for several reasons. Most of them were guided by the pronunciation of the dialect of their places of residence, and dialects were then numerous. Some were more ignorant than others, whence the exceptional badness of the spelling. Changes in spelling took place more slowly than changes in pronunciation, and were often a little behind it. The most marked instance of this is in the case of the final "e", which was retained in spelling after it had ceased to be pronounced, so that the spelling of "serche" for instance, indicates that the word was formerly a French one, pronounced serchè. Unfortunately, one result of this was that the silent "e" was often ignorantly added, as in the word "kynge", which is often rightly spelled "kyng" on the same page.

In many instances, it will be noted that a word is incomplete, that either the final syllable, or even whole syllables within the body of the word, had been omitted. This was due to the tendency in English to give each word its chief accent at or near the beginning, and to suffer the concluding syllables to fall into obscurity, and may be traced to Danish influence. But even long before the Norman Conquest, forms which had strong and distinct terminations appeared with these endings levelled into something like a silent "e", but during the illiterate period of the language, after the Conquest, this careless obscuring of the terminal vowels rapidly increased and by degrees became universal. Then, as the English people began to speak French, there was more or less corruption of both languages. Laying, as in English, the stress on the first part of the word, the immediate consequence was the contraction of words and the omission of certain vowel sounds which, in French, are pronounced.

Then, often, one finds in these manuscripts, "yᵗ" where the " y " means " th " and the " a " is only indicated by the " t " being a little above the line, hence yt, ye and yis, which are to be read—that, the and this. The characters " v " and " u " require particular attention. The latter is freely used to denote both the modern sounds, and the reader must be prepared, at any moment, to treat it as a consonant. Thus the words haue, leue, diuerse, are to be read—have, leve, diverse. The " v " is used sparingly, but sometimes denotes the modern " u ", chiefly at the beginning of a word, such as vse for use,—vp for up,—vpon, upon,—and the prefix " vn " for " un ". Occasionally, even " w " is used for " u ", hence swe, remwe, for sue, remue. The letter " j " is very rare, and is generally denoted by the capital "I",—Ieoperdie for jeopardy,—Iourney, journey.

The reader will also observe that proper names frequently begin with a small letter. The letters " a ", " i ", " r " are frequently written as capitals at the beginning of words in ancient manuscripts. Marks of punctuation are very rare in these manuscripts, as, frequently, one finds only the mark / for a comma, with occasional full stops and colons.

All local names were once words, generally picturesque or descriptive of that natural phenomenon which would be most certain to impress the imagination of a rude people. The appellations of the chief centers of population and of natural landmarks, rivers and mountains, are constant reminders of the original owners of the soil. The Roman officials, caring but little for foreign geographical etymologies, or mistrusting, perhaps, their ability to pronounce Celtic words correctly, wrote down the local names as best they could, invariably Latinizing their form so as to make them pronounceable in their own language, or else replacing them by other names. But such is the persistency with which popular and descriptive names adhere to the soil, that almost all sites named by the Britons are still called by the same names which they bore at the first dawn of Celtic occupation, with little variation. The name London, for instance, is now, in all probability, pronounced exactly as it was at the time Caesar landed on the coast of Kent.

Of proper names, descriptive of geographical localities, the nationality is easily ascertained. The Norse and Danish names, still found scattered all over England, will often even supply the means of ascertaining facts which history has left unrecorded. By the aid of such local names, it is possible not only to define the precise area which was ravaged by the Scandinavians, but in many instances to detect the nature of the invasion, whether for purposes of plunder, trade, or colonization.

The Roman " strata ", or paved roads, became the " street ", and this word " street " is often indicative of the lines of Roman road which, straight as an arrow-course, connect the chief strategic positions of England; and the Danish invasion of England left its indelible imprint upon the eastern coast of the island by the Scandinavian word " by ", which, as a suffix, outstrips all others, both in number and its exclusively national character. This word originally meant a dwelling or a farm, and in course of time came to denote a village or a town. In England, it always denotes Danish colonization,— a permanent abode, inasmuch as in places visited only for purposes of trade or plunder, no dwellings would be required. There are scores and scores of names ending in " by " all over England; in Lincolnshire alone, there are more than a hundred. Thus we have Grimsby, Ormsby, Whitby, Colby, Maltby,— all family names indicating the original owner of the farm, or founder of the village. Saxby, Frisby, etc., show that the name was applied originally by the Danes to the farm of some Saxon or Friesian living in their districts. Other Danish names, such as Kirkby and Crosby, show that, at the time these names were given, the Christian bishop had driven out the heathen priest, and that the Christian Church and cross had succeeded the pagan altar. Kirkby means church-village, and the Kirkbys which are dotted over East Anglia and Northumbria recall the time when the possession of a church by a village community was the exception, and not, as now, the rule.

The word " toft " is definitely Danish and East Anglian. It signifies a homestead or inclosure, and it always denotes the fixed residence of a Danish population, as Lowestoft, etc.

The Anglo-Saxon " yard " and its Norse equivalent "garth", both indicate some place fenced in or guarded, conveying the notion of inclosure, or protection, showing how eager every man was to possess some land which he could call his own and guard from the intrusion of others.

A word denoting the occasional presence of the sea-rovers is " ness " or " naze ", which means " nose ", a promontory of land, hence Holderness.

The ancient name " burg " or " burgh ", so frequently found in all Teutonic countries, originally meant a small, fortified height, and is found in England as Yarborough, etc. "Brough" is merely a contraction of " borough ".

The Swedish word " holm " means an island, almost always an island in a lake or river, hence " Axholme ", which is surrounded by four rivers.

Although the Anglo-Saxons had no regular system of family nomenclature resembling that of the Romans, or that which we now possess, there was nominally among them something like an attempt to show derivation and family relationship by the use of similar personal names, such as " Wymund, Wighelm, Wiglaf ", or Beomric, Beomheâh, Beomhelm. Thus, in one family, we find, in succession or simultaneously, such names as Oslaf, Oslac, Oswald, Oswin, and in the genealogical table of the progeny of King Alfred, Eddweard, the elder, Eddward, Eddmund, Eddred, Eddgar, Edwith, Eddgyth, Aethelgaed, and Aethling. These, however, were all Christian names.

The precise period at which second names became stationary, or, in other words, to descend from father to son, it is impossible to show. Camden says that " about 1000 A.D. surnames came to be taken up in France, and in England about the time of the Conquest, or else a little before, under King Edward, the Confessor, who had spent much time in France, and introduced the French language into his Court upon his coronation as King of England. It is very doubtful that any surnames descended to posterity before that time, as there are no deeds or donations before the Conquest, but what are subsigned with crosses and single names without surnames, in this manner: EGO EADREDUS CONFIRMANI."

The Norman Conquest wrought many changes in the English system of nomenclature, particularly in reference to proper names. The great mass of English Christian names went out of use, and those of the Norman came to be almost universally adopted.

Under the feudal system, the great barons assumed as surnames the proper names of their seignories; the knights who held under them did the like, and these in turn were imitated by all who possessed a landed estate, however small. Camden remarks that there is not a single village in Normandy that has not surnamed some family in England. The French names introduced at the Conquest may generally be known by the prefixes "de", "du", "des", "de la" and "st". In some cases, the Normans preferred the surnames derived from their ancient patrimonies in Normandy; in others, they substituted one taken from the estate given them by the Conqueror and his successors. This may have been the case with the Morleys of Morley. In a few instances, the particle " de " is still retained, but generally speaking, it was dropped from the surname about the time of Henry VI, when the title "Esquier" among the heads of families, and " gentylman " among younger sons, became pretty generally to be substituted.

As most people were not distinguished by the possession of landed estates, it is interesting to notice the sources from which English names have been generally derived. In the first place, for want of being able to use the prefix " de " in the sense of ownership, it was quite natural for people, in order to avoid confusion, to name the place they came from. Thousands of English surnames are derived from villages and obscure towns, such as Clayton, Preston, Kingston, etc. Numerous as are the surnames thus derived, those borrowed from manors, farms and single houses are very much more so. Hence the surnames of local origin in England may be counted by thousands. Most of them are descriptive, and their meaning can be readily understood.

Others, not being possessed of any landed property and having no such surname to take, were in the habit of taking their father's name instead, and thus the son of John or William, became Fitzjohn or Fitzwilliam, if of Norman descent, " fitz " being a corruption of fils, in Latin, filius (son);

Johnson or Williamson, if of English or Danish descent. This primitive custom of making the father's Christian name the surname of the child to distinguish him from other persons bearing the same appellation, finds its origin in the highest antiquity. From Henry or Harry, we have Hall, Harrison, Harris, Herries; from John, — Jones and Johnson; from Lawrence, — Larry, Larkins, Lawson; from William, — Williams, Williamson, Wilson, etc.; from Richard,—Richardson.

Some counties and districts have peculiar surnames which are rarely found beyond their limits. They generally belong to the local class of names, and the tenacity with which these cleave to the soil which gave them birth is something truly remarkable. We can trace to many parts of England the original Danish names which were almost always those of early Danish settlements, such as Althorpe, Kirby, Grimsby, Armsby, Holmes.

The termination " wick " is found in both Anglo-Saxon and Norse names. In Saxon England, it is always an abode on land,—a hamlet or a village. With the Northmen, it is a station for ships, hence a small creek or bay. The sea-rovers derived their very name of vikings, or creekers, from the wicks or creeks in which they anchored. In the north of England, the form wick prevails—such as Sedgwick, and other such proper names.

While the French names introduced by the Conqueror may generally be known by the prefix " de ", " du ", " de la ", it must not be concluded that every name with a " de " prefix is of Norman origin, for in course of time, many families of Saxon lineage, upon acquiring wealth, copied the example of their conquerors in this particular. In this case, we might cite the Westbys, de Westby,—the Anlabys, de Anlaby. Often, moreover, the " de " was of no account whatever, and instead of indicating the ownership of great landed estates, mainly referred to the town or district the person originally came from. This is believed to have been the case with the Fulstow family. The Norman " le " added to names denotes trade and business occupations.

While surnames, as a whole, were derived from various sources, such as Christian names, local names, names of beasts, birds, fishes, trees, plants, etc., most others are descriptive of the industrial occupation of the original bearers.

"Touching such as have their surnames of occupation", remarks Verstegen, "be they French or English names, it is not to be doubted but their ancestors have first gotten them by such trades, and the children of such parents being contented to take them upon them, their after-coming posterity can hardly avoid them, and so in time cometh rightly to be said:

> From whence comes Smith, all be he knight or squire,
> But from the smith that forgeth at the fire.

"Neither can it be disgraceful in any that now live in very worshipful estate and reputation that their ancestors in former ages have been, by their honest trade in life, good and necessary members of the Commonwealth, seeing all gentry hath first taken issue from commonalty."

The root of this term is the Anglo-Saxon Smitan, "to smite", and was therefore originally applied, not merely to smiths alone, but also to wheelwrights, carpenters, masons, and smiters in general. Among other English surnames derived from other trades and occupations, we have Chapman, Sergeant, Reader.

As in England, so in France. Many names of trades and occupations existed as French surnames in England as far back as 1200, thus Le Walékur, Waliker, or Walker, which meant "fuller". To this we might add Le Garde, the guard, le Sergaunt, and le Harpur.[1]

The Anglo-Saxon custom of the use of similar personal names to show derivation and family relationship, although falling into disuse after the Conquest, seems to have been revived in the repeated use of the same Christian names through succeeding generations of a family. Particularly is this true from the thirteenth century on. This habit of repetition has proved to be of inestimable value, as it often furnishes a clue whereby several families of the same surname may be identified and linked together as branches of the same parent stem.

In 1535,[1] by virtue of an Act of Supremacy, Henry VIII issued instructions that a book and coffer with two locks should be provided for each parish in England and Wales, and the parson of the parish was ordered to write every Sunday in the presence of the church wardens, or one of them, and record in the book all the baptisms, marriages and burials of the immediate preceding week.

In 1597, a Constitution issued by the Archbishop, bishops and clergy of Canterbury, and approved by Queen Elizabeth, directed that a more careful preservation of Parochial Registers be kept, and enjoined that a copy of the records should be sent annually, within a month after Easter, to the register of each diocese. These were the Bishop's Transcripts and are of particular value, as frequently copies of the original are no longer in existence.

Prior to 1752, the calendar year began on March 25, hence March was generally known as the first month of the year, while January and February fell into the preceding year, as the eleventh and twelfth months respectively. In 1752, the new year was changed to January 1, it then becoming the first month. This new order naturally led to confusion when reference was made to dates prior to the change, and in order to overcome this, it became customary, when mentioning any time between January 1 and March 25, to use the double date, as, for instance, January 1, 1648/9, March 24, 1648/9, then March 25, 1649, and so on.

DESCENT CHART

JOHNSON OF SEARBY, GRASBY AND BARROW-UPON-HUMBER, LINCOLNSHIRE, ENGLAND, 1590-1801.

Richard Johnson, born circa 1550-1555, the earliest known ancestor of Lawrence Johnson of Philadelphia bearing that surname, was married at Grasby, Parish of Lindsey, Lincolnshire, November 25, 1576, to Ann Sympson, the marriage being entered upon the parish register of Grasby thus:

> 1576 Ryc' Johnson and an symson was marid ye xxv day of Novembr a° 1576.

From 1593 to 1602, he is designated as of "Searby", a village immediately adjoining Grasby, but from 1607 until his death in 1612-13, he resided in the latter place.

Richard Johnson had a brother, Thomas, who lived in Grasby, and a sister Alice, but there is no indication that there was a Johnson family in Grasby before the settlement there of the two brothers, and perhaps their sister. However, there were a number of that surname residing at Searby as early as 1558, when the parish register commences, and evidently much earlier than that, but unfortunately the register begins just a few years too late to record the births of Richard, Thomas and Alice, if they were born in that parish. The ancestry of the Searby Johnsons is at present unknown. This surname is derived from the Christian name of John, as, for instance, Richard son of John, or Richard, John's son, hence Johnson. As John was a most common name, it is almost impossible to trace this family, especially in endeavoring to carry the line back beyond the keeping of church records.

Altho Richard Johnson was married at Grasby, his children by Ann Sympson were all baptized at Searby. The Sympsons must have been of Grasby, for Henry Hargrip and Elizabeth Sympson were married there October 14, 1565, and had a son baptized at the same place in 1569. Henry Hargrippe was buried at Goxhill,[1] October 1, 1611. Henry Hargrip, Jr., was a witness to Richard Johnson's will, 1612-13.

There was a William Johnson buried at Searby on August 24, 1580, who may have been the father of Richard, Thomas and Alice, since Richard named both of his sons William, the eldest boy dying in infancy, and Thomas also gave his eldest son the same name. It would therefore seem reasonable to assume that both brothers wished to perpetuate their father's name. The very early parish registers do not give any indication as to whether a burial is that of an infant or an adult, nor do they, in many instances, give the names of the parents when the child was baptized. Among these early Searby records, we find:

Edward Johnson, bap. 20 Feb. 1558-59; bur. 20 Nov. 1580.
Ann Johnson, bap. 20 June, 1562; bur. 20 Feb. 1589-90.
William Johnson, bur. 24 Aug. 1580.
Elizabeth Johnson, bur. 30 Nov. 1588.

All the later Searby entries have been identified.

Another Thomas Johnson of Searby was married there on March 22, 1572-73, to Katherine Emerson. She was related in some way to a Richard Emerson of Grasby, the latter being called "my kinsman" in the will of Bartholomew Johnson, son of Thomas and Katherine, who was buried in Searby churchyard January 26, 1618-19. After 1600, nearly all the Searby-Grasby Johnson entries relate to the descendants of this Bartholomew. The Emerson family was also related to, or connected with, that of Richard Johnson in some way yet undiscovered.[2]

[1] Goxhill Parish Register.

[2] There was a Christopher Johnson in Nettleton, a village only two or three miles south of Grasby, who died and was buried in the churchyard there. His will, dated 24 August 1592, was proved at Market Rasen 20 October of the same year, and in it he described himself as "of Nettleton and a labourer", naming wife Elizabeth, two sons, Richard and Thomas, and appointing his daughter, Alice, co-executrix with her mother. (Lincoln Consistory Court, 1592, No. 86.)

This Christopher might have been the father of Richard, Thomas and Alice, of Grasby and Searby. The Christian name of Christopher appears among the descendants of Bartholomew Johnson of Searby.

There was also a Christopher Johnson in Wootton as early as 1573, Thomas Johnson, brother of Richard, was of Grasby. He was church-warden 1593-1594, and buried in the churchyard March 6, 1595-96.

[2] There are two villages named Owmby in Lincolnshire; the other is south of Market Rasen, near Saxby.

The other entries of this surname are those of the family of Bartholomew Johnson,—children, grandchildren, etc.

As shown by the above entries, there were six children born to Richard and Ann Johnson in Searby and baptized there, five of whom were living in 1593, when an outbreak of the plague almost devastated the whole of the northeast section of Lincolnshire, and all five children, and perhaps the wife and mother, were buried between June 21 and August 13, four of the children being interred, one each, on July 17, 18, 19 and 20. An Agnes Johnson was buried on June 21, and another Agnes Johnson on August 13, and one of these might have been the mother, Ann, as she was dead before December 2 of that year. The names Agnes and Ann, or Annes, were often used interchangeably.

On December 2 of the same year, 1593, Richard Johnson married, for a second wife, Agnes (or Ann) Smythe, the widow of Ralph Davison of Croxton,[1] and daughter of Robert Smythe of Croxton. She had a brother, Dennis Smythe, who had amongst others, two daughters, Isabel and Esther, or Hester, who were therefore nieces of Agnes. Here again we have the confusion and interchange of the names Agnes and Anne. The marriage is entered upon the Croxton Parish Register, where she is distinctly called Agnes,—yet in his will dated just before he died in 1712-13, Richard distinctly names his wife as Ann, who is living, and mentions her two nieces,—kinswomen—Isabel and Esther Smythe.

Richard and Agnes (or Annes) Smythe (Davison) Johnson had two children born at Searby, Jane, baptized May 16, 1595, and a son, William, baptized March 2, 1599-1600.[2] This was his second son whom he had named William.

Agnes Smythe married first at Croxton, on October 25, 1590, Ralph Davison, and had two children baptized at Croxton, Martine, on September 12, 1591, and John, on May 29, 1593, and we learn from the Croxton records that Martine, the little two-year-old son, and the father, Ralph, both died of the pestilence, the little boy being buried on the 18th or perhaps the 19th of May, on which day the father's funeral took place. Six months later, Richard Johnson and Agnes Smythe Davison were married at Croxton.

Between 1602 and 1607, Richard Johnson removed to Grasby where we find him a churchwarden, 1607-08, his brother Thomas having been churchwarden, 1592.

Richard Johnson was surety for the administration of the goods of Dennis Smythe, his brother-in-law, in 1602, acting as guardian of the two daughters of Dennis, Isabel and Esther, whom he named in his will as "my wife's kinswomen". He died at Grasby and was buried there February 3, 1612-13. His will dated January 30, 1612-13, just a day or two before his death, directs that he be buried in the churchyard at Grasby. To his only son William he leaves his dwelling-place and other lands after the death of his wife, Ann, the son, however, to receive a property called "Holme Close", when he became of age. To his only other surviving child, a daughter Jane, he bequeaths one-half of all his goods, to divide with her mother.

The burden of execution was committed to Anne Johnson the widow and relict.

The widow Agnes, or Anne, married for a third husband, May 8, 1613, John Baker, one of the witnesses to Richard's will. She was buried November 8, 1619, at Grasby.

7. Jane Johnson, baptized 16 May, 1595; perhaps same who married 28 July, 1616, John Watson, or Ralph Broxholme, 6 May, 1621.
8. WILLIAM JOHNSON, baptized 2 March, 1599-1600; buried 10 April, 1671; married 1st, MARY (Neile, of Waddington?); buried 22 July, 1655; married 2nd, 9 February, 1655-56, Elizabeth Massam.

WILLIAM JOHNSON, second of that name and only surviving son of Richard Johnson, was born in Searby, Lincolnshire, and baptized March 2, 1599-1600. He was the youngest of eight children, his mother having been Anne (Agnes) Smythe (Davison). When he was quite young, his parents removed from Searby to Grasby. The father died when William was about thirteen or fourteen years of age, and being the only son, he was bequeathed the house and close in Grasby in which the family lived, as well as another property in the same village known as the "Holme Close", when he became of age, the mother to remain in possession of the homestead as long as she lived.

William Johnson's first wife and the mother of his children was Mary, but her maiden name has not been ascertained. It is possible, tho we have as yet no direct evidence, that they were the William Johnson and Mary Neile who were married on October 18, 1632, at Waddington,[2] a village situated about ten miles southwest of Grasby. The Waddington baptisms do not show any children born to this couple nor are their deaths recorded; apparently they resided elsewhere. It is quite plausible that William went to Waddington to marry, taking his wife back to Grasby, where their four children, William, Robert, Mary and Elizabeth were born, but only the baptism of the youngest is found on record. Mary was buried on July 22, 1655, and on February 9, 1655-56, William married Elizabeth Massam, who, on March 9, 1658-59, was buried at Grasby. There were no children of the second marriage.

William Johnson And Elizabeth massam were married the ninth day of february, 1655.[2]

William Johnson witnessed the will of Margaret Emerson, of Grasby, in 1630. He certified his attachment to Protestantism at Grasby, March 11, 1641-42. A copy of this oath is here given, with the signatures which are of especial interest, as these signers were all either immediate ancestors or closely related to Lawrence Johnson.

The following protestation[3] was reported and agreed to in the Commons, and ordered to be made by every member of that House on the 3rd of May 1641. It was agreed to by the Lords, and ordered to be made by every member of their House on the following day. On the 5th of May the Commons ordered the protestation and preamble to be printed, the copies to be attested by the clerk, and then sent by the members to their several counties and boroughs, with an intimation "with what "willingness the members of this House made this pro-"testation, and as they justify their taking of it in them-"selves, so they cannot but approve it in them that shall "likewise take it." Subsequently it was resolved that the protestation is fit to be made by everyone, and that what person soever shall not make the protestation is unfit to bear office in the Church or commonwealth, and that it is a "Shibboleth to discover a true Israelite":

"I.A.B., do in the presence of Almighty God, promise, "vow, and protest to maintain and defend, as far as

William Johnson's name also appears as a resident of Grasby in 1661, in the list of "A free and voluntary subscription of his Majesty's subjects as agreed upon at a meeting held at Caistor 23 Oct. 13 Car. 2."[1] He was also one of the sidesmen of Grasby Parish in 1665.[2]

In July, 1905, Mr. Johnson and his oldest son[3] visited Grasby and a number of other parishes in Lincolnshire with which his Johnson ancestors had been connected. On most of these trips, he was accompanied by the Rev. (now Canon) C. W. Foster, of Timberland, Lincolnshire. They were kindly received by many of the clergy and inspected entries in several church registers which were of special family interest.

The Vicar of Grasby showed the old registers which he kept in the vicarage and gave the party of visitors afternoon

[1] Lay Subsidy Roll, 140/749, Public Record Office, London.

[2] "The origin of the sidesmen is somewhat uncertain. They were probably men sworn at the synods of the Bishops and Archdeacons, that is, the courts which those persons or their officers held, in the several rural deaneries or districts of the diocese. It is supposed that their name is derived from that circumstance, that is, that 'sidesmen' is a corruption of 'synodsmen'. Their work was to assist the churchwardens, who had many more duties in the olden days, such as presenting to the Bishop and Archdeacons, people who were guilty of a large variety of offences. Sidesmen are often appointed now, and their work is to assist the churchwardens in looking after the people in church collecting, etc." (Rev. Canon C. W. Foster, Lincolnshire, May, 1909.)

tea. From thence they walked by a path across the fields to Searby vicarage. On this walk a stop was made at the farm house of Mr. Benard, close by the way, where they were hospitably received by the owner, who farmed about six hundred acres of land. He produced an iron box full of old title papers referring to his land, and amongst them was found a deed of 1671 in which the bounds were described and mentioned as adjoining land owned by William Johnson.

Again in July, 1910, Mr. Johnson visited Grasby and other parishes in Lincolnshire, accompanied by Canon Foster. When in Grasby, they called upon Mr. Benard, whose house is in Searby parish on a road leading from Grasby to Searby. He again showed his title papers, and among them were two deeds in which the bounds are described as adjoining "a Little Close of William Johnson."

As William Johnson's land was in Grasby parish, this identified the position of the property as in Grasby, but adjoining the parish of Searby. The land was fertile and on the slope of a hill, with a beautiful view overlooking miles of cultivated country and pasture.

"Grasby,[1] Domesday Book, Grassby, Grosebi, Geresbi; Hundred Rolls, Grayshaby; Old Norse, Ready Fell, is a name which exactly represents what, in former days, must have been the most characteristic feature of the spot. The present village lies upon the lowest slope of the wold,[2] with rich grass fields stretching westward into what was once fen, but long since has been drained and turned into arable land. Thus, then, the name Grasby preserves an essential feature of the country as it appeared to our ancestors, when the hills that rise to the east and the lowest slopes were clothed with rich pasture * * *."

Mr. Benard kindly lent the two deeds to Canon Foster, the abstracts of which are printed below.[3]

[1] G. S. Streatfield: Lincolnshire and the Danes, p. 232.

[2] A plain open country; a down.

[3] The above account of his visit to Grasby was written by Mr. Johnson shortly before his sudden death in 1910. Since then, the father of William has been identified as Richard, who had originally owned and occupied one of the two houses and close which he bequeathed to his son William.

His will, dated March 3, 1711-12, proved at Lincoln, March 20, 1711-12, appointed Mr. William Knight, of Kingerby, executor and sole legatee for the benefit of the testator's children, Robert and Mary; or, in the event of their decease, to his nephew Robert, son of Robert Johnson of Barrow. To his "son-in-law" George Wilkinson he devised a chest. Will witnessed by George Ransom, Curate of Kingerby, ——— Osgodby and W. Musgrave[2]
2. ROBERT JOHNSON, of Barrow-upon-Humber; married 1st, at Grasby, April 15, 1676, Anne Palmer; married 2nd, in 1684, MARY LEGARD, widow of John Hall, Jr. Buried at Barrow, September 30, 1713.
3. Mary Johnson, married at Grasby, May 2, 1671, Anthony Moore, a churchwarden of Grasby in 1672. She was buried at Grasby, September 26, 1677. Anthony Moore married 2nd, at Grasby, July 7, 1678, Ursula Hudson, widow, who was buried at Grasby, August 25, 1685; married 3rd, at Grasby, April 20, 1686, Mary Stephenson, who was buried at the same place, ——— 16, 1686; married 4th, at Grasby, November 19, 1687, Jane Tuckey, who was buried there April 14, 1702. Anthony Moore seems to have taken a fifth wife, as Mary, wife of Anthony Moore, was buried at Grasby, March 13, 1712 or 1713. He had issue by his second and third marriages.
4. Elizabeth Johnson, baptized at Grasby, September 3, 1654; buried there in October of 1654.

ROBERT JOHNSON of Barrow-upon-Humber, Lincolnshire, yeoman, younger son of William and Mary Johnson of Grasby, married first, at Grasby, April 15, 1676, Anne Palmer, baptized at Bilsby, January 9, 1651-52, daughter of Edward Palmer, Vicar of Bilsby, by his wife, Troth Newcomen.[3]

The marriage of Robert Johnson appears in Canon Maddison's Lincolnshire Pedigrees, Volume III, pages 751 and 755, where the Palmer coat of arms is described.

"Robertus Johnson Filio Wilielmi Johnson de Gresby et Anna Palmer Filia Edwardi Palmer de Billesby clerici, nupti fuerunt decimo quinto die Aprilis Anno P'dicto" (1676).[1]

Robert Johnson seems to have resided in Grasby in 1676, 1677 and 1680, but later removed to Croxton, where he was living in 1684-1686, being a churchwarden of Croxton in 1685. In the summer or early fall of 1684, he married second,[2] Mary Legard Hall, baptized at Goxhill, October 25, 1645; buried at Barrow, January 9, 1720-21; daughter of Edward Legard and Elizabeth Hall of Long Riston in Yorkshire, and widow of John Hall, Junior, of Barton, to whom she was married at Long Riston.

Since the footnote below was written, additional information regarding Mary Legard and her first husband has come to hand. As it all has bearing upon the following data regarding the various suits at the Manor Court of Barrow in right of Robert Johnson's wife, Mary, widow of John Hall, this additional data is given.

Court of Pleas-Queen Henriette Maria
20 August, 19 Charles II (1679).

John Hall, the elder, of Barton, and Elizabeth, his wife, and John Hall, the younger, son and heir apparent of said John the elder and Elizabeth, surrenders one messuage in Barrow called Wilson's House, 2½ oxgangs of land in a place called great Ings, to use of said John Hall, the younger, and Mary Ledgard, one of the daughters of Edw. Ledgard of Long Riston in Holderness, Co. York.

[2] In view of the fact that the actual marriage record has not been found, it is of interest to note that John Hall, Jr., the first husband of Mary Legard was buried October 27, 1683, and as Robert Johnson did suit at the Manor Court of Barrow in right of his wife, October 7th, 36th year of Charles II (1684), it is evident that Robert Johnson married Mary Legard (Hall) in 1684. Their daughter Elizabeth was baptized April 12, 1685.

Robert and Mary Johnson before Edw. Sergeant, Copy Holder, house and close in Barrow adjoining Wm. Smyth to use of Robert Johnson and Mary his wife, and Lawrence Johnson, their son.

On October 7, 1684, while of Croxton, Robert Johnson appeared at the Manor Court of Barrow and did suit in right of his wife Mary. Some time after 1686, he removed from Croxton, and as a tenant of the Manor of Barrow did suit at the Manor Court on the following dates: October 1, 1696; October 19, 1699; April 18, 1700; October 24, 1700; May 8, 1701; October 2, 1701; October 15, 1702; October 14, 1703; April 5, 1704; April 20, 1704; and October 23, 1707. With his wife, Mary, he surrendered lands in Barrow, April 18, 1700, to his wife's daughters, Anne and Mary Hall.

Robert Johnson was a churchwarden of Barrow in 1702, and one of the sidesmen in 1703. On December 20, 1711, he surrendered, in right of his wife Mary, nineteen-and-a-half acres of land in Barrow, to the use of the said Mary and their son, Robert, and on the same day surrendered a house, close, orchard and three stangs[1] of land called East Hann, in Barrow, to their son, Lawrence. On November 12, 1712, with wife, Mary, and son, Robert, he surrendered nineteen-and-a Barrow is a large but irregularly built village, in the hundred of Yarborough and division of Lindsey, about two miles eastward from Barton. "About a mile north west of the village, in a marsh, stands a large earth work, called the castle, which according to tradition, was erected by Humber, when he invaded Britain, in the time of Trajan Brutus. Stukely conjectured it to be 'an alate temple' of the Britons, and placed it in the third class of his 'druidical buildings'. Its features however are more of a military than a religious kind and it was probably an entrenched camp of the Britons, who in many instances preferred such inundated situations. Adjacent to the foundations are several tumuli, or long barrows, in some of which human bones, ashes, urns and other relics have been discovered.[1]

"About the middle of the seventh century, Wulfere, King of the Mercians, gave to the pious man Cead or Chad, the land of fifty families, to build a monastery at this place, some appearance of which is mentioned by Bede as remaining in his time. A district of houses, situated in the common parlance of the villagers, 'at the back o' the church', is still called St. Chads, and so called, perhaps, from the time to which legal memory does not extend."

The following extracts from the Domesday Record, are the next authentic proof of the antiquity of this township. "Land of Drogo De Beurere. Manor in Barewe (Barrow), earl Morcar had nine carucates[2] of land and two oxgangs[3] to be taxed. Land to eighteen ploughs and a half. Drogo de Beurere has there four ploughs and fifty sokemen[4] with two carucates of this land, and seven villanes with eight ploughs, and one mill of thirteen shillings and fourpence. Value in King Edward's time, thirty-two pounds. Tallaged at one hundred shillings."

1 The prehistoric Aryans buried some of their people with great care and distinction, and made huge heaps of earth over their sepulchres. These are the barrows which contribute a feature to the European, Indian and American scenery to this day. In some ancient Aryan burial mounds, the urns containing the ashes of the departed were shaped like houses. There were both long and round barrows. (H. G. Wells: The Outline of History.)

2 Carucate: As much land as could be ploughed with a team in a year, said to be about one hundred acres.

> "The hide was a measure of land in the Conqueror's reign; the carucate, that to which it was reduced by the Conqueror's new standard. Twelve carucates of land made one hide. It (the carucate) must be various, according to the nature of the soil and custom of husbandary, in every county." (Kelham: Domesday Book, p. 168.)

3 Oxgang: About twenty acres.

4 Soke, Old English Law. A franchise, privilege or liberty; jurisdiction. A. S., contend.

In the year 1149, Hubert de Quinton gave his estate of Stainton and some lands in Barrow, to the Monastery of Thornton Curtis, which is six miles from Barrow. In 1228, the patronage of the church of Barrow, and in 1262, a confirmation of the church of Goxhill, were given to the same monastery.

"The church of Barrow is a neat Gothic structure and consists of a nave with aisles, a chancel, with a tower at the west end. Four of the arches on the north side of the nave are circular, which shows the church to have been originally a Saxon or Norman structure. The tower is the best part of the church and is of a good shape. The top is embattled and has pediments at the angles. It contains a fine peal of musical bells, which are much esteemed. They were cast at Barrow, by Harrison, who carried on a bell foundry in the place.

"One of the chief ornaments of the township is a spacious area, nearly in the centre of the village, designated the Cross Hill. A market cross still remaining to account for the name.

"Barrow formerly possessed a seat of the ancient and celebrated family of the Tyrwhits, of Cornwall. The hall, in the possession of Charles Uppleby, Esquire, [1835] is a neat structure, but far from an extensive building. A beautiful spring of water rises in the village, called Barrow Beck, pursuing a meandering course for about a mile, when it falls into the Humber at Barrow Haven." [1]

In July 1905 Mr. Johnson, accompanied by his son Morris, spent a portion of three days in Barrow. The vicar and his wife were most kind, invited them to the vicarage and placed the old registers upon the table of the study for examination. The original entries of baptism, marriage and burial of numerous ancestors were inspected, some of them running back into the Sixteenth Century.

On this occasion, the warden of the parish explained to Mr. Johnson the duties and formalities attached to his office. In former years a processional staff was carried and placed by the pew of the warden. Within the recollection of the warden the interior woodwork of the church had been removed and modern pews put in, and at that time the panel bearing the names of those who were wardens of the church when the previous repairs had been made, was removed. Mr. Johnson, some years before this visit, was fortunate enough to secure this panel, which is inscribed: "Robert Scoffin. Lawrence Johnson."

Lawrence Johnson was churchwarden in 1720, 1721 and 1722, and during these years the panel must have been placed in the church. Five generations of the Johnson family lived in Barrow, ending with Edward Johnson, who removed to Hull about the time he was of age. For three successive generations these ancestors were churchwardens. Mr. Johnson, with his son, attended Sunday morning service in Holy Trinity Church, and it was brought to his mind that in so doing, eight generations of Johnsons in direct succession had worshipped there, including Lawrence Johnson of Philadelphia, who frequently visited Barrow in his youth. Within a few weeks thereafter, Mr. Johnson caused to be placed upon the wall of the edifice, a memorial tablet commemorative of loyal service rendered by his ancestors to the church and parish.

freeman of Hull December 8, 1709, and was living there December 9, 1713, when Henry Scoffin of Barrow surrendered land in Barrow to the use of the said Robert and his wife Hannah. Robert Johnson received land in Barrow by surrender from his parents, December 20, 1711.[1] He was mentioned in the will of his uncle, William Johnson of Kingerby, March 3, 1711-12.

6. LAWRENCE JOHNSON, of Barrow, yeoman, baptized at Barrow, August 17, 1690; buried November 5, 1737. Married 1st, in St. Peter's, Barton, July 25, 1715, ANNE PAGE; married 2nd, at Saxby, May 27, 1736, Catherine Marris, widow of Benjamin Wilkin.

LAWRENCE JOHNSON of Barrow-upon-Humber, Lincolnshire, yeoman, son of Robert Johnson and Mary Legard Hall, was baptized at Barrow, August 17, 1690.

1690 Aug. 17 Laur: filius Rob't et: Marie Johnson.[2]

He was appointed sole executor of his father's will, dated August 28, 1710. By surrender of December 20, 1711, he received from his parents a house, close, orchard and three stangs of land called East Hann, in Barrow.

He married first, at St. Peter's, Barton, July 25, 1715, Anne Page, baptized at Goxhill, February 17, 1694-95, daughter of Robert Page and Anne Richardson of Goxhill. The marriage-allegation bond, dated July 24, 1715, filed at Lincoln, describes him as of Barrow, aged twenty-four years, and Anne Page of Barrow, aged twenty-one years. Thomas Wright of Barrow was surety on the bond.

Lawrence Johnson was Churchwarden of Barrow, 1720, 1721 and 1722. He was a juror at the Manor Court of Barrow, May 4th and October 4th, 1723; April 22 and October 9, 1724; April 9 and December 8, 1725; May 2 and October 22, 1726; April 25 and October 18, 1727; May 30 and October 14, 1728.

Anne, the first wife of Lawrence Johnson, was buried at Barrow, December 16, 1732.

BURIALS, 1732.

Dec. 16 Ann, wife of Lawrence Johnson.[1]

On May 10, 1736, Thomas Dawson and Susannah, his wife, had surrendered a cottage and orchard in Barrow to Lawrence Johnson, and on May 13, 1736, the latter surrendered a house, close, orchard and land in Barrow to Catherine Marris, widow of Benjamin Wilkin, with whom he intended marriage, and to his son, John Johnson. He married Catherine Marris Wilkin at Saxby, May 27, 1736.

Mr. Johnson and Canon Foster called upon Mr. Mason, a leading attorney-at-law of Barton, at his home. Mr. Mason, a descendant of Edward Johnson of Barton, who was the son of Robert Johnson of Barrow, still occupied the house which had come to him from his Johnson ancestors.

They made their headquarters in Barton for several days in July of 1905, seeing that town and the neighboring parishes of South Ferriby, Horkstow, Saxby, Bonby, Worlaby and others. The parish register of St. Peter's, Barton, was examined and the entry of the marriage of Lawrence Johnson and Anne Page, July 25, 1715, seen. On the floor in the chancel of St. Mary's, Barton, slabs bearing the names of Johnsons who were descendants of Edward Johnson of Barton were noticed.

As an evidence of the pestilence that visited this part of England during the reign of Elizabeth, the register of St. Peter's, Barton, shows that two hundred and twenty-five burials occurred in 1593, whereas in the following year there were only thirty-two burials.

Catherine Marris, second wife of Lawrence Johnson, married first, at Elsham, on March 31, 1717, Benjamin Wilkin, a churchwarden of Barrow. He was the son of Benjamin and Mary Wilkin, baptized at Barrow, April 10, 1694, and buried there March 4, 1734-35. Letters of administration on his estate were granted to his widow, Catherine, June 6, 1735. John Sergeant of Barrow, farmer, and Thomas Scamon of same place, were sureties on her bond.[1] Benjamin Wilkin and Catherine Marris had three children; Benjamin, who married Anne Skinner; George and Anne.

After the death of Lawrence Johnson, his widow, Catherine, married third, at St. Peter's, Barton, May 25, 1738, Michael Hall, of Barton, by whom she had a daughter, Catherine, baptized at Barrow, December 19, 1741; buried there October 10, 1742. Catherine was buried at Barrow, March 16, 1741-42. Michael Hall married second, at Barrow, June 17, 1745, Isabella Watson, and had issue.

1. Mary Johnson, baptized at Barrow, October 23, 1717; received £8 under the will of her great aunt, Susannah Empringham of Barton, 1739, and an annuity of £10 from the will of her brother, Edward Johnson of Hessle, dated 1799. She married first, at Wootton, February 12, 1737-38, John Foster, who surrendered land in Barrow to Thomas Dawson and wife, June 1, 1741. Mary Johnson married second, at Barrow, August 19, 1776, William Sergeant, who was buried at Barrow, November 15, 1788. She was buried there May 6, 1807.

2. John Johnson, baptized at Barrow, April 13, 1720; buried there November 25, 1788. Married Isabell Fulstow.
3. Robert Johnson, baptized at Barrow, October 7, 1723; buried there May 31, 1729.
4. Edward Johnson, baptized at Barrow, February 3, 1725-26; described as of Hessle, Yorkshire, gentleman, in a survey made to him March 4, 1791 by George Uppleby of Barrow, for eleven acres of land there. With the latter he surrendered the same land to John Uppleby of Wootton, January 24, 1798.

   "Edward Johnson, of Hessle; Joseph Dickinson, of Beverley; and Peter Nevill, of Riston Grange, gentlemen, were appointed commissioners to carry into execution 'an act for dividing, allotting, and enclosing the open fields, ings, marshes, and common pastures, and other common and waste lands and grounds, within the lordship of Barton-upon-Humber, in the county of Lincoln.' They were invested with ample powers for the purpose, but as what they did is given, it is unnecessary to set out these powers. Their remuneration was fixed at two guineas each per day while actually engaged in their labours. John Wilbar of Barton, and John Dalton of Hessle, land surveyors, were authorized by the act to make a survey and plan of the entire lordship, and their allowance was fixed at 1s. 6d. per acre. The survey and plan were completed in October, 1793, and the commissioners immediately commenced the task assigned them, the magnitude of which will be gathered from the following statement:"[1]

   Edward Johnson was buried at Hessle, July 26, 1801. The will of "Edward Johnson of Hessle in the County of York the Town of Kingston-upon-Hull, Land Surveyor," dated August 28, 1799, proved at York January 29, 1802, bequeathed to his niece Isabella, the wife of Richard Enderby of Barrow, £300; to each of his grand-nephews, Edward and Lawrence, sons of his nephew Robert Johnson, he devised £200; to his grand-niece Catherine Johnson, daughter of nephew John Johnson, £200; to his sister Mary Sergeant, an annuity of ten pounds. The residue of his estate he bequeathed to his wife, Mary, and appointed her executrix. Witnesses, John Spicer and Thomas Robinson.

   Mary, the widow of Edward Johnson was buried at Hessle, April 2, 1805. They left no issue.
5. Ann Johnson, baptized at Barrow, February 6, 1727-28; buried there May 23, 1729.

Child of Lawrence Johnson and 2nd Wife, Catherine Marris:

6. Grace Johnson, baptized at Barrow, June 20, 1737; buried there June 26, 1737.

[1] "They set out the Barrow, Brigg, Caistor, Ferriby, Horkstow, Saxby, Town-end, and Waterside roads, as Public highways, and in doing so, followed nearly the same lines which had been used for centuries before.

JOHN JOHNSON of Barrow-upon-Humber, Lincolnshire, yeoman, son of Lawrence Johnson and Anne Page, was baptized at Barrow, April 13, 1720. On November 23, 1737, proof of his father's death was presented at the Manor Court of Barrow and John Johnson was declared the eldest son. He was named as a legatee in the will of his great-aunt, Susanna Empringham of Barton, sister of his grandmother, Mary Legard, dated March 1, 1739-40.

They set out the Ings, Dam, Fore ings, Gravel pit, West field, Bradwell close, Acridge, Tofts, Waterslacks, Butts, Marsh, Pasture, North pasture, Middle pasture, South pasture, Intack and East field roads, as private ways for the use of the owners and occupiers of the adjacent lands, and they directed that the said private roads should be for ever kept in repair by the surveyors of Barton, by a rate on such owners and occupiers. The entire length of all the roads exceeds 20 miles.

"They caused to be made, the Pasture, Butts, Beck, Ings, Blow wells, Dam, Bowman dale, and Waterslack drains, with the Butts clough, the Ings clough, the Staunch near the dam bridge, and serveral tunnels.

"They caused the Humber bank, extending from the lordship of Barrow to the lordship of Ferriby, to be made of the following dimensions,—23 ft. at the base, 5 ft. in height, and 3 ft. wide at the top, to protect the low lands from inundations from the Humber, and they directed that the haven, public drains, banks, cloughs, staunch, and tunnels, should be cleansed, supported, and kept in repair by an assessment upon the lands enclosed, which for that purpose they divided into 4920 shares, rateably amongst 137 proprietors, according to their several interests. The lands used for the roads and drains comprised 101a. 1r. 15p.

"They set apart eight stone-pits, one acre each in extent, for the future repair of all the roads, viz: the Barrow road, Brigg road, Caistor road, Ferriby road, Gravel, Horkstow road, Saxby road and West Field road Pits.

" They directed the herbage of the private roads and pits to be let annually, and the rent applied towards the repair of such roads.

"They investigated the accuracy of 232 claims, made by 139 claimants. These were for 729 beast gates, 878 horse gates, 8860 sheep gates, 343 oxgangs of land, (appurtenant to each oxgang were one horse gate and a half, one beast gate, and twenty sheep gates,) and 212 rights in respect of freehold and copyhold properties, and having done so,

"They allotted to the impropriators 66a. 1r. 24p. in lieu of glebe land, and 289a. 3r. 15p., 161a. 2r. 2p., 357a. 2r. 9p., and 91a. 0r. 14 p. in lieu of great tithes.

"They allotted to the vicar 3a. 3r. 34p. in lieu of glebe land, and they secured his corn rent upon allotments of 84a. 2r. 6p., which they made to George Uppleby, Esq.; 91a. 3r. 4p. to Marmaduke Nelson Graburn, Esq.; and 84a. 2r. 30p. to Wm. Graburn, Esq.

He married Isabell Fulstow, baptized at Goxhill, July 13, 1718, daughter of Robert and Arabella Fulstow, of that place, who was buried in Barrow, July 21, 1796. On June 1, 1741, John Johnson surrendered to Thomas Dawson, a cottage and orchard in Barrow. He was elected Dike-reeve[1] of Barrow Manor, May 3, 1748; Ale-taster, October 23, 1750, and Constable, April 17, 1751. He was a juror in the yearly view of Frankpledge with the Great Court leet and Court Baron regularly from April 29, 1756, to April 20, 1762; and again May 6, 1763.

"They allotted to his majesty 35a. 2r. 34p. as full compensation for his interest as lord of the manor in the waste lands, such allotment being equal in value to one twentieth part of the entire waste lands. They also allotted to his majesty three other allotments, amounting to 51a. 1r. 26p., in lieu of his other property. These allotments are crown lands.

"They allotted to the parish clerk and his successors 7a. 2r. 16p. in lieu of his open field lands, and the yearly sum of 2d., then payable in respect of every oxgang.

"They allotted to the trustees of the land devised by the will of Wm. Tripp, 64a. 2r. 24p. This property belongs to the Blue Coat Charity. And they allotted to the trustees of the Poors' mill 1a. 3r. 34p. This allottment is the land near the toll-bar, the rent of which is annually spent in coals for the poor.

"Having thus compensated the claims of those officially interested in the soil, and thereby divested themselves, so to speak, of 1437a. 1r. 23p. of land, the commissioners allotted the remaining 4483 acres and 35 perches amongst 131 proprietors, in allotments varying from 308 acres to a few perches each, according to the interest which the allottee had in the lands to be inclosed; and they also prescribed who was to make, and for ever maintain, the fences of every allotment.

"The commissioners were engaged nearly three years in their labours; their award is dated the 12th August, 1796. The ability and judgment which they displayed in the disposition of the lordship has been frequently and deservedly extolled, and their work remains as a monument of the prudence, care, and wisdom which they brought to bear on its execution.

"The Inclosure was a most important epoch in the history of Barton. Regarded merely as the conversion of 5920 acres of open land into compact farms, and distinct closes, it was a great accomplishment; but when the permanency of the change effected, the alteration which it caused in the mode of cultivation, and the enhanced value it conferred upon the land, with all the incidental advantages which ensued, are taken into account, it is difficult to over-estimate the importance of the event.

"Barton, on the map has not inaptly been said to resemble in shape a wedge. It is bounded on the north by the Humber, on the east by the lordship of Barrow, on the south by the lordship of Burnham, and on the west by the lordships of Ferriby, Horkstow, Saxby and Bonby. It is about three miles in breadth along the banks of the Humber, and about four miles in length from its northern to its southern extremity. It contains in round numbers 6240 acres, whereof 240 acres are absorbed by the town, and the various roads and drains, leaving 6000 acres under profitable cultivation. The high character of the farming has won for the place the poetical title of the 'Garden of North Lincolnshire.' In 1792, the estimated rental of the land used for agricultural purposes, was £2000; and the present rental of the same land is estimated at £12,000.

"Prior to the inclosure, the lordship south of the town, embracing about 4500 acres, (Beaumontcote and Warren farm excepted,) was open arable land, divided by landmarks, protected as were the landmarks of the Israelites of old. The lordship north of the town was principally open meadow and pasture land, known as the Cow pasture, and the Horse pasture. The extent of old enclosure was about 250 acres.

"For some time preceding 1793, the expediency of inclosing the lordship occupied the attention of Marmaduke Nelson Graburn, William Graburn, William Holgate, Thomas Scrivener, William Bygott, James Bygott and Thos. Marris, jun., then the leading land owners in the town, and having arranged with George Uppleby, Esq., and Sarah his wife, owners of the rectory impropriate, for the commutation of the great tithes for 900 acres of land; and with the Rev. Wm. Uppleby, vicar, for the conversion of the vicarial tithes into a corn rent of £150, variable according to the average price of wheat once in ten years; they, in that year, applied to parliament, and obtained the act above mentioned. The act recites that the king was seized of the manor of Barton, and also interested in the soil of the waste ground, and seized of other lands within the manor; that George Uppleby, Esq. was lessee of the manorial courts and crown lands: that Thomas Cotsworth was parish clerk, and as such entitled to certain lands in the open fields, and also to the yearly sum of 2d., payable at Easter, for every oxgang of land. The act also recites the arrangements respecting the rectorial and vicarial tithes, and that the open lands belonging to the several proprietors lay intermixed, and in small parcels, and in that state were incapable of much improvement." Robert Johnson, of Barrow-upon-Humber, Lincolnshire, second son of John Johnson and Isabell Fulstow, was baptized in Holy Trinity Church, Barrow, on September 29, 1747, and was married there, on May 21, 1771, to Catherine Hill, who was baptized at West Halton on May 2, 1748. She was the daughter of George Hill and wife, Elizabeth Jackson, of West Halton, a village about seven or eight miles west of Barrow, near the mouth of the river Trent.

Robert Johnson resided with his father, in the house which had been occupied by his grandfather, Lawrence Johnson, and where his great-grandfather, Robert Johnson, lived when he came to Barrow from Croxton, about 1686. Robert Johnson was buried at Barrow, December 3, 1774.

Catherine, widow of Robert Johnson, married at Barrow, May 21, 1782, John Aby of Thornton Curtis, but died the same year and was buried at Barrow, November 4th. John Aby married again, at Barrow, September 4, 1783, Ann Gilliot.

Edward and Lawrence Johnson, sons of Robert and Catherine Johnson, thus left orphans at an early age, were brought up by their grandmother, Isabella Johnson, and by their aunt, Isabella Johnson Enderby. In 1797, Edward Johnson, as the eldest son of Robert, conveyed his right in the homestead to his aunt, Mrs. Enderby. This house is on the main street of Barrow, a few yards from the southern gate of the churchyard. According to Mr. Brian Cooper of Barrow, the Johnsons lived in the northeast end of the house and the Enderbys in the southwest end. Later, when the whole house belonged to the Enderby family, Edward Johnson Enderby kept a school in the northeastern part, which Mr. Cooper attended. The southwest end was rebuilt by William Enderby some years ago. The walls of the northeastern portion are of considerable antiquity; Mr. Cooper says it was an old house seventy years ago. It has been renovated and furnished with a new roof and new windows; originally the roof was thatch, as most of the Barrow houses were in former times.

The old house has remained in the possession of John Johnson's descendants and when visited by R. Winder Johnson in 1905, it was owned by William Enderby of Hull, a grandson of Isabella Johnson Enderby.

CHILDREN OF ROBERT JOHNSON AND CATHERINE HILL:

1. EDWARD JOHNSON, baptized at Barrow, February 29, 1772; died in Cayuga County, New York, U. S. A., April 9, 1843. Married at Caistor, Lincolnshire, October 17, 1796, ANN CLAYTON, baptized October 17, 1773; died in Cayuga County, New York, July 1, 1855, daughter of James Clayton and Anne Crow.
2. Lawrence Johnson, baptized at Barrow, July 30, 1774; died March 13, and was buried in Drypool Parish Churchyard, Hull, March 18th, 1838. Married at Sculcoates, Hull, February 25, 1811, Mary King, daughter of Robert King, barrister, by Mary Appleby, his wife, who died December 5, 1863; buried at Preston-in-Holderness. No issue. In Drypool Parish Churchyard, Hull, to the right of the main walk from the gate to the church door, is the grave of Lawrence Johnson, marked by a headstone with this inscription:

Sacred To the Memory of Lawrence Johnson who departed this life March 13th 1838
Aged 60 years.

The will of Lawrence Johnson[1] of the Town of Kingston-upon-Hull, shop-keeper, dated October 7, 1826; proved April 10, 1838, devised all his messuages, tenements and dwelling houses in Wentworth street, in the parish of Drypool in Holderness, county York, or elsewhere in England, and all other real and personal estate, to his wife Mary Johnson. Witnessed by William Pexton, John Maw and George Tindall.

Edward Johnson, son of Robert Johnson and Catherine Hill, was baptized at Barrow-upon-Humber, Lincolnshire, England, February 29, 1772. When he was about three years of age and his brother Lawrence four months, their father died, and eight years later, their mother's death occurred. The two boys were cared for by their aunt, Isabella Enderby, and their grandmother, Isabel Johnson, of Barrow. When he became of age, Edward Johnson removed to Kingston-upon-Hull. He married at Caistor, Lincolnshire, October 17, 1796, Ann Clayton, born October 13, 1771, and baptized at East Halton, Lincolnshire, October 17, 1773, daughter of James Clayton and Anne Crow. At the time of his marriage, Edward Johnson was a resident of Holy Trinity Parish, Kingston-upon-Hull, Yorkshire.

On October 18, 1797, Edward Johnson surrendered to his aunt, Isabella Enderby, his right to the cottage and land she then occupied in Barrow, which had descended to him from his father and grandfather, Robert and John Johnson.

He received, under the will of his great uncle, Edward Johnson of Hessle, Yorkshire, who died 1801, the sum of two hundred pounds. In 1813 and 1817, Edward Johnson resided in Myton, Hull, where he was a bookseller, representing Brightly and Childs, printers and publishers, of Bungay, Suffolk, with which firm his son, Lawrence, learned the printing business. Edward Johnson owned the house in Spencer Street, Hull, in which he lived, and also an adjoining house which he rented to tenants.

Influenced by his sons, who were eager to go to America, Edward Johnson sold his Spencer Street properties and disposed, by public sale, of his household goods, including an old standing clock which had belonged to the family for several generations, and the father and mother, with their ten children, sailed from Great Grimsby, July 4, 1818, on the brig General Ripley, commanded by Captain Drew. The vessel was of two hundred and fifty tons burden and carried thirty-one passengers, and landed in New York on the evening of the 28th of August. Notice of the arrival of the brig appeared in The New York Evening Post, Friday, August 29, 1818.

Having arrived too late to pass the Custom House, the official entry of arrival was not made until the following day. The records of the New York Custom House show that "the Brig General Ripley, Drew master, arrived at this port on August 28, 1818, from Grimsby, with thirty-one passengers, having been fifty-six days making the voyage".[1]

Edward Johnson and family remained in New York one night. Impressed by the pale appearance of the people, and fearing it was not a healthful location, he decided to go farther into the country. They sailed for Albany on the 29th of August, a trip which, owing to the small size of the boat and adverse winds, required several days.

Edward Johnson remained in Albany several months. He purchased one hundred and twenty-five acres of land at Ira, Cayuga County, New York, from a man in Albany, and on Christmas Day, 1818, removed thence with his family, excepting Edward, Lawrence and Robert, who had secured positions. This land cost seven dollars an acre, and was in a very thickly populated district. There was only a small log house on the place, and not an acre had been cleared of timber. It was necessary to rent a few adjoining acres for the cultivation of vegetables until some land could be cleared and a new house built. Added to these difficulties, it was soon found that the title to the property was defective and additional payment must be made. Lawrence Johnson, in this emergency, helped his father in securing a clear title to the land. The deed for the final settlement was dated December 30, 1833, in consideration of Seven Hundred and Fifty Dollars, and was from Ralph Pratt, Mary his wife, and William Durant of the City of Albany, for one hundred and twenty-five acres and twenty-two rods of land in the town of Ira, part of a great lot numbered forty-five, now township of Ira, and being a sub-division of the said lot as described in a survey and map made by George H. Carr, October 1, 1828.[1]

Edward Johnson died near Ira, April 9, 1843, and was buried in Ira Cemetery. His widow, Ann Clayton Johnson, died July 1, 1855, and was buried in the same place. Soon after her death the farm was sold.

Robert Johnson, third son of Edward Johnson and Ann Clayton, was born in Hull, England, November 21, 1802; baptized in Holy Trinity Church of Hull, February 24, 1803. He accompanied his father to America in 1818, and after remaining in a position at Albany about six months, joined his father at Ira, New York. He continued on the farm about three years and then went to Philadelphia, where he was employed in the type-foundry of his brother Lawrence. Returning to Ira, he later purchased a farm near his father, on the opposite side of the road, and spent the rest of his life there. The farm passed into the possession of his daughter, Lucy S. Burritt, who sold it in the spring of 1908. The place had been in the possession of the family sixty-four years. He was appointed Commissioner of Excise of Ira by Judge George Humphreys and Justice Alfred Lester.

Robert Johnson married, January 1, 1830, Mary Earl, born June 27, 1803; died September 29, 1873; daughter of Reuben Earl and Susannah Carey. On October 12, 1876, while visiting at "Lansdowne", Bucks County, Pennsylvania, Robert Johnson related to R. Winder Johnson some interesting facts concerning his father's home in England, their voyage to America, and settlement in New York State. He remembered Isabella Enderby, his great aunt, as an elderly widow, and recalled going to Caistor, when a child, to see his grandmother, Ann Clayton. The only uncle remembered was John Clayton, who came to America about 1820 but returned in a year. His parents, Edward and Ann Johnson, were not inclined to go to America, but assenting at last to the wishes of their children, Edward sold his house in Hull, and, a few days before departing, disposed of all the household goods by public sale held at their home in Spencer Street. Among the furniture was an old hall clock which he said belonged to his great-grandfather and had been in the family at least one hundred years.

His mother was ill during the entire voyage, but the father and children soon recovered from seasickness and enjoyed the trip.

The boys often climbed in the rigging, and one calm day young Edward Johnson and some other passengers bathed in the ocean and swam so far from the brig that those on board became alarmed. On their seven days' trip up the Hudson from New York to Albany, the boat was anchored each night and the boys would row ashore and take walks through the country and get melons. The inhabitants along the river were mainly Dutch, and sour bread only was obtainable, which his mother could not eat. While the family resided in Albany, Lawrence Johnson skated down the Hudson several times from Troy, where he was employed. When Edward Johnson, Senior, was quite old, he often spoke of the good cakes his grandmother had made, and teased his wife by saying she was not so good a cook.

Robert Johnson died May 1, 1886, and was buried beside his wife in Union Hill Cemetery, Cato, Cayuga County, New York.

1801, March 2 Lawrence, son of Edward Johnson.[1]

He was educated in Hull and in Bungay, Suffolk County, England. At the early age of twelve, he was sent to learn the printing and publishing business with the firm of Brightly and Childs, which was represented in Hull by his father, Edward Johnson. This firm, which operated a paper mill and an extensive printing office and stereotype foundry, was established in 1795, and was for many years among the largest printers and publishers of periodical works in the kingdom.[2]

It has been said of Lawrence Johnson that "while a mere boy, he exhibited in his studies that industry, energy and quickness of perception which characterized his whole after life."[3] He remained with Brightly and Childs until a short time before sailing with his parents for America in 1818.

After arriving in Albany, New York, with his father and family, Lawrence Johnson, early in September of 1818, secured a position in Troy, in the office of The Northern Budget, a Republican paper published weekly. That winter was very cold, and before his family removed to Cayuga County in December, he skated down the Hudson to Albany several times.

In the spring of 1819, he went to New York and found employment in another printing office, where his ability and industry gained the confidence of his employer to such an extent that, when the latter found it necessary for his health to spend the winter in the south, he entrusted Lawrence, despite his youth, with the entire charge of the business. He was for a time in the printing office of a Mr. Gray, and while there engaged, boarded in the house in which the office was located, and devoted himself to his business with such untiring assiduity that, as he himself assures us, he did not go out of doors from Monday morning till Saturday night.[1]

Desiring a knowledge of the art of stereotyping, which he had seen operated in England, where Brightly and Childs of Bungay had been among the first to adopt it, he entered, in 1820, the employ of B. & J. Collins, "who, with the Bruces, did nearly all the stereotyping in New York at that time."[2]

Lawrence Johnson was elected a member of the New York Typographical Society, March 2, 1822, and his certificate of membership, now in the possession of his family, is signed by Hugh Pattinson, Secretary, and Mortines Swaim, President. During this time, he managed to help his father make the [2] Isaac Collins, printer, was born in Delaware in 1746. He began business at Burlington, N. J. in 1770, and in 1777, started a newspaper. He afterwards removed to Trenton, and there prosecuted his business for a number of years. Was printer to the State, and at Trenton printed a handsome and very correct quarto edition of the Bible. Removed to New York about 1795 and continued in business for ten years, then retiring. His sons were partners in the firms of B. & J. Collins, stereotypers, and Collins and Hannay, publishers, and sons and grandsons continued business in New York till about 1880. He died in Burlington, N. J. in March 1817. second payments rendered necessary by fraud, to secure a clear title to the farm in Cayuga County.

Having learned stereotyping, he selected Philadelphia for the establishment of his business, and went there in 1823. He made application for naturalization in Philadelphia July 15, 1823, and on June 19, 1828, he was admitted to citizenship at the Mayor's Court. In 1825, his name appears in the Philadelphia Directory as follows: "L. Johnson, stereotype foundry, 17 Cypress Alley, dwelling house, 47 Spruce Street." Cypress Alley ran from Third to Fourth Streets, between Spruce and Pine Streets.

"In the latter part of the year 1815, Jedidiah Howe, of Connecticut, a shrewd and energetic New Englander, hearing of the success of the Bruce brothers in the newly invented art, came to New York, and commenced a stereotype foundry on Thames Street. Mr. Howe obtained his fair proportion of the limited and uncertain stereotyping of that early day. But in the course of eight years, other foundries having started, and an exceedingly keen competition following, Mr. Howe removed his establishment to Philadelphia in August, 1823. Lawrence Johnson had removed to that city about the same time, having commenced his stereotype foundry about the year 1822. Adding typefounding to stereotyping, Mr. Howe formed a partnership with Mr. Johnson, which continued until the death of the former in 1834. Although partners, the two foundries were carried on by the new firm as if they were separate establishments. The publishers of Philadelphia had, previous to the arrival of Mr. Johnson, sent their orders for the few books they ventured to subject to this process to the New York firms. Bibles and school books were the first to be stereotyped, and then gradually came books of great and continued popularity, including the English classics in prose and verse and the books of popular authors like Washington Irving and J. Fenimore Cooper. The slow and cautious manner, however, in which American publishers availed themselves of this new invention was rather discouraging to the beginners. Gradually, however, the booksellers were led into the stereotyping, though at first not very profitably; for the first large work stereotyped by J. Howe for W. W. Woodward,

Scott's Commentary on the Bible, in five quarto volumes, proved so heavy an undertaking that Mr. Woodward broke down under it and left the plates on the hands of Mr. Howe, to his great embarrassment. Mr. Johnson was more fortunate in stereotyping a book not very dissimilar in character and magnitude,—Henry's Commentary on the Scriptures,—undertaken by Tower and Hogan, and carried on successfully to a remunerative result.'' [1]

Though imperfectly acquainted with the details of this new business, Mr. Johnson's excellent tact soon enabled him to overcome the obstacles consequent to this lack of experience. With many a hearty laugh was he wont, in after life, to describe the awkward positions in which he sometimes found himself. Nothing daunted, however, he pushed forward until complete success crowned his efforts and he became established as a stereotype founder.[2]

In 1828 and 1829, the foundry was at 6 George (now 606-608 Sansom) Street, where it remained during his life and afterwards, until June of 1906. The Johnson heirs sold the property 606 to 614 Sansom Street, in March of 1906, to the Curtis Publishing Company.

Mr. Johnson added type-founding to his business, and in 1833, with George F. Smith, bought from Richard Ronaldson, The Philadelphia Type Foundry, established by Archibald Binney in 1796. With the introduction of the new art of electrotyping, Lawrence Johnson surpassed all rivals by the production of a new quarto specimen book that has, even to the present day, no superior in the world of typography.[3]

George F. Smith retired from the business in 1843, and in 1845 Lawrence Johnson associated with himself, under the style of L. Johnson and Company, Thomas MacKellar, John F. Smith and Richard Smith (sons of George F. Smith), all of whom had been in his employ for many years and who, after his death, still continued the business. A branch foundry was established in Cincinnati about 1855. In April of 1855, L. Johnson and Company began the publishing of the "Typographic Advertiser", one of the early printers' papers, edited by Thomas MacKellar.[1]

After Mr. Johnson's death, Peter A. Jordan became a member of the Company, and in 1867, the title of the firm was changed from L. Johnson and Company to MacKellar, Smiths and Jordan. In 1885, it became The MacKellar, Smiths and Jordan Company, and so remained until 1892, when it was incorporated with the American Type Founders' Company.[2]

[1] The Typographic Advertiser of April, 1860, contains the following:

"'Look to thyself and take care of thyself', is the true doctrine, when rightly understood; for he takes best care of himself who has also a care for the well being of others. This fact has a striking exemplification in the case of an old friend, with whom we have had a close companionship for more than a quarter of a century, and on whose head time's silvery snow has fallen without chilling the warm affections of his heart. We are his junior, but, in the sovereignty of editorial prerogative, we have written this much without his privity; and now, without his permission, we copy a graceful and discriminating compliment from the Lancaster Daily Express: 'To what perfection have we come at last! we involuntarily exclaimed, as we opened the current issue of the Typographic Advertiser, published by our old friends, L. Johnson & Co., the eminent type founders. This paper, generously published for the use of the craft, is the most perfect specimen of plain typography we have ever seen; and it is so highly prized by the printers, that, if its publication were discontinued, a beautiful star would fall from the printers' galaxy. This firm stands at the head of type founders in this country, their establishment being at once the oldest and most complete. Mr. Johnson is the Helper, not of the Republican, but of the Publishing party, but differs from that well-advertised individual in being always successful in getting his party, (which is decidedly national, extending from Maine to California, and from 606 Sansom Street to the isles of the ocean), out of many an impending crisis. Nearly twenty years ago he furnished the press and types on which the Express was started, his only security for payment being the industry and his faith in the integrity of the publisher. In this, and in many other ways, Mr. Johnson has literally grown gray in the service and venerable in the affections of the printers of the country; and yet, the last time he visited our sanctum, a year ago, he looked as young and seemed as active as when we first knew him, a quarter of a century ago.' So much for knowing how to live, and living according to knowledge." (American Dictionary of Printing and Bookmaking, p. 313.)

Lawrence Johnson resided at 47 Spruce Street in 1825, and in 1831 at 199 Spruce Street, which was on the north side and east of Seventh Street. In 1837, after his second marriage, he lived at 275 Pine Street, now known as 919 Pine, and in 1848 he moved to 727 and 729 Pine Street, where he resided until his death.

In the spring of 1851, Lawrence Johnson purchased "Lansdowne", a farm and country seat on the Neshaminy Creek in Bristol Township, Bucks County, Pennsylvania, where he lived in summer, and which is still owned by members of the family. A painting of "Lansdowne" hung in the house for many, many years at the top of the first stair-landing. The name of the painter is unknown, but it is recalled by Dr. Russell H. Johnson that he came and lived in the house while occupied on this task. Since Dr. Johnson was then a small child and barely remembers the incident, it must have been painted in the neighborhood of the year 1855. The young ladies grouped on the right side of the picture were the Misses Annie, Mary Ella, and Caroline Johnson. The figure in the center of the driveway is the old family nurse, Nancy Smylie, who subsequently married a well-to-do tailor in Philadelphia by the name of Carnahan. The child standing in front of the perambulator, and the infant in same, though unidentified, are doubtless two of the younger sons, perhaps Lawrence and Winder.

Lawrence Johnson married first, May 3, 1825, Sarah Bacon Murray,[1] born December 19, 1808; died August 21, 1834; daughter of James Murray and Jane Doane of Philadelphia.

> Married on Tuesday evening last by the > Rev. Mr. Furness, Mr. Lawrence Johnson > to Miss Sarah B. Murray, all of this city.

James Murray was of a Virginia family and a descendant of Pocohontas.[2] Jane Doane was related to Bishop Doane.

Lawrence Johnson's second wife was Mary Winder, daughter of Aaron Winder and wife, Sarah Van Horn, of "Winder Green", Lower Makefield Township, Bucks County, Pennsylvania. They were married in Philadelphia, on May 29, 1837, by the Honorable John Swift, Mayor of the City.

MARRIED

On the 29th ult., by John Swift, Mayor, L. Johnson, of this City, to Mary B., daughter of the late Aaron Winder, of Bucks County, Pa.[1]

In 1837, when Lawrence and Mary Winder Johnson began their married life at 919 Pine Street, this house was the last to the west on the north side of the street.

In 1847, after a severe illness, a change of air being advised, Mr. Johnson sailed from New York, June 7th, on the packet ship Henry Clay, accompanied by his son, Edward Winder Johnson, and a friend, James McMillan, who had married Rachel Murray, the sister of Lawrence Johnson's first wife. They landed at Liverpool June 24, and traveled in Ireland, Scotland and England,[2] and on the Continent.

Lawrence Johnson was interested in numerous enterprises in Philadelphia and elsewhere, including the development of coal lands, building of street-car lines, etc. He was president of the Commonwealth Bank of Philadelphia; a director of The Green and Coates Street Passenger Railway Company, and of the Philadelphia City Passenger Railway Company; of the Philadelphia Coal Company, the Barclay Railroad and Coal Company and of the Empire Coal Company. He was an incorporator of The Equitable Insurance, Life Insurance, Annuity and Trust Company, and of the United States Insurance, Annuity and Trust Company. The Union Academy of Philadelphia was chartered in 1851, located at Eleventh and Market Streets. Lewis R. Ashurst was President of the Board of Trustees; S. Morris Waln, Treasurer; Eli K. Price, J. Rodman Paul, M. D., Professor John C. Cresson, Lawrence

[1] The Public Ledger and Daily Transcript, Philadelphia, Friday, June 2, 1837.

[2] Mr. Johnson found Mr. Childs, his former employer of Bungay, well and looking almost as young as when last seen by him nearly thirty years before. Mr. Childs referred to Edward Johnson, the father of Lawrence, as one of the best men he ever knew and said he often mentioned him as a standard of character and delighted to think of him.

Johnson and others, Trustees. Thomas D. James was Principal in 1852. He became a member of the Franklin Institute October 17, 1825, and a life member in 1835; was a member of the Typographical Society of Philadelphia and of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, May 8, 1854. Was elected a member of the Philadelphia Society for the Establishment and Support of Charity Schools in 1852.

Mr. Johnson was stricken with apoplexy and paralysis, while at a business meeting in Philadelphia, on Tuesday afternoon, April 24, 1860. He was taken home, but lived only a short time, passing away about 2:20 A. M., April 26th. He was buried in Woodlands Cemetery, Philadelphia, until the lot in Mount Vernon Cemetery could be put in order and a vault and monument constructed. On October 9, 1905, his body, with those of other members of the family, was removed from Mount Vernon Cemetery to St. Thomas' Churchyard, Whitemarsh, Montgomery County, Pennsylvania.

Lawrence Johnson "was ever a patron of improvement, and encourager of the mechanic and artisan, and to his honor be it spoken, he was never known to appropriate to himself, by electrotyping, the labor of the artist, but acquired the matrix by purchase; indeed one of the last acts of his life, in conjunction with other leading founders of this City, was to procure by petition to Congress, such a modification of the copyright law as to afford protection to letter-cutters, engravers and originators of designs."

"A friend, who for more than thirty years enjoyed his uninterrupted friendship, traveled with him, at home and in foreign lands, and for months was his only companion, has furnished the following excellent analysis of his character and tribute to his worth: 'Mr. Johnson's mental character was strong and well balanced. He possessed a vigorous understanding, great mental resources, remarkable powers of concentration and abstraction, and a well cultivated mind. In his active and useful life he studied men and things continually, and was a precise and logical reasoner. Those who had intercourse with him cannot but have noticed how largely decision of character was developed. His mind was not only rapid in its operations, but of great grasp. While listening to the recital of anything in which he was concerned, his opinions (which he rarely found it necessary to change) were made up, so that when the statements were finished he was ready to act in the matter on hand at once, although involving large interests.'

"He was a liberal and benevolent man. After his decease it became the duty of the writer to examine critically his books and accounts and papers. The goodly array of figures of his charity account, abundantly attests that with his increasing means his charities extended. There was no ostentation in his benevolence. He was a just man; while he expected and insisted on punctuality and strict probity from others, he was prompt and scrupulously exact in rendering to every man his due. All who knew him relied implicitly on his word, from which he was never known to swerve. Where his confidence was reposed, no amount of misfortune or difficulties could shake it; but when once forfeited by trickery, breach of faith, or otherwise, it could never be regained. The many corporations and societies in Philadelphia with which he was connected, have spread on their minute books the same estimate of his value as a citizen, and expressed the personal loss they sustained when his wise counsels were withdrawn."[1]

A meeting of gentlemen representing the publishing interests of Philadelphia, was held immediately after his death, in the private office of the establishment of J. B. Lippincott & Co., to express esteem for the memory of Lawrence Johnson, and regret for his decease. The following gentlemen were present: Henry C. Carey, G. W. Childs, of the firm of Childs & Peterson; E. H. Butler, J. B. Lippincott, John Fagan, Chas. Megarge, J. Grigg, Uriah Hunt, W. S. Martien, Theo. Bliss, of the firm of Peck & Bliss; R. Lindsay, of the firm of Lindsay & Blakiston; and T. Parry, of the firm of T. & J. W. Johnson. Mr. Henry C. Carey was called to the chair, and Mr. G. W. Childs elected Secretary.

Mr. Carey said: "Gentlemen, though I have been long disconnected with the book-publishing interests of the city, I am glad to be with you today to pay regard to the memory of Mr. Johnson. I have known him, perhaps longer than any of you; one of his first business operations was undertaken for me. I have found him in all his relations honest, intelligent and upright. We could scarcely find a better man, and I have no hesitation in saying that he was as worthy as any man I ever knew."

The following resolutions were then submitted by Mr. Lippincott:

> "Resolved, that we have received with emotions of profound sorrow the sad intelligence of the death of Lawrence Johnson, with whom we have been so long pleasantly associated, not only by the relations of business, but by the more endearing ties of friendship.
>
> Resolved, that in his decease the community has lost one of its worthiest citizens: for with an unsullied personal integrity, and a heart of the kindest promptings, he united clearness of judgment, activity of enterprise, faithfulness and diligence in an extensive business, and thus presents in his finished character a union of qualities rarely combined, which we shall ever cherish as an incentive and an example.
> Resolved, that as a further testimony of our respect we will attend the funeral of the deceased, and that a copy of these resolutions be communicated to his family."

Mr. E. H. Butler, in seconding the resolutions, said: "I have known Mr. Johnson twenty years. I have found him in every relation of life upright, efficient, prompt, enterprising, and sagacious. The number of individuals in our calling is very limited. We feel the ravages of death more keenly than the members of larger circles, and the loss of a co-worker like Lawrence Johnson comes home to us as a solemn warning. If we shall leave as clear an account when the summons comes to us, our lives will not have been in vain."

Resolutions of Condolence passed at a special meeting of the Directors of the Commonwealth Bank.

> "Whereas it has pleased Almighty God to call from our earthly sphere of activity and usefulness, one of our most respected fellow citizens, Lawrence Johnson, Esq.
> And whereas the deceased was known to us as manly, honorable and high-minded, one who discharged with the strictest fidelity all the duties that were confided to him, and mingled in his character the Christian, the gentleman, the patriot and the man of business:

Resolved, that as Director of the Commonwealth Bank his conduct was marked by all that was just, generous, upright and disinterested.

Resolved, that we regard his death as a public loss, and that we deeply sympathise with his bereaved family, to whom, it is hereby directed that, a copy of these resolutions shall be sent, signed by the officers of the Bank.

Mr Thomas M'Kellar

Dear Sir.

I am just in receipt of yours of the 26th announcing the sudden death of my old and highly esteemed friend. I cannot by words express my regret, or the influence which this sudden and unexpected intelligence excited.

I have known Mr Johnson for upwards of 30 years, through him I came to this City in 1833, and from that period, our intimacy commenced, but more especially, since I commenced business in 1837, from that period, up to the present, our business relations, and friendship, have continued uninterruptedly, and I feel great pleasure now in taking a retrospective glance, at our intercourse for the last 23 years, to bear testimony to the uniform courtesy and kindness that has distinguished his intercourse and friendly feelings towards me at all times, but more especially when I commenced business. When I was young and inexperienced, when my friends were few, and my means limited. It was then that I had an opportunity of experiencing his friendly counsel, his generous friendship, and the noble traits of character, by which he was distinguished.

I have always felt grateful, and shall ever feel a grateful recollection of the memory of the man, whom I have in a measure looked to as a father and a friend. Most sincerely do I tender my condolence to his family in their bereavement, and to you, and his partners in business, in the great loss that you and every one connected with the business in this country, have sustained.

Yours sincerely,

J. Murphy.

Mary Winder, the second wife of Lawrence Johnson, was the daughter of Aaron Winder and wife, Sarah Van Horn. She was born July 18, 1814, at "Winder Green," the farm of her father in Lower Makefield Township, Bucks County, Pennsylvania. This was part of a six-hundred acre tract on the main road between Newtown and Yardleyville, bought in 1727 by her great-grandfather, Thomas Winder of Hopewell and Amwell, Hunterdon County, West New Jersey.[1]

Her grandfather, John Winder, settled on this tract about the time of his marriage, or about 1732. Aaron Winder, her father, was born there September 14, 1759, and in 1790 built a house on the portion of the land which he acquired.

Mary Winder was but ten years old when her father died, July 2, 1824. She attended a private school on her father's place, and in 1830 was sent to the Moravian Boarding School at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, in accordance with wishes expressed by her father, who had visited and been pleased with this school. While at the Bethlehem School she formed a friendship with Amanda Howe,[2] daughter of Jedidiah Howe, stereotype-founder of Philadelphia, and after leaving school Miss Howe spent her summers at "Winder Green," while Mary Winder visited the Howe family in Philadelphia during the winters. Lawrence Johnson's business relations with Mr. Howe made him a frequent visitor at the latter's house, and he thus made the acquaintance of Mary Winder. Later during his courtship he visited her at "Winder Green."

Among the incidents of her life at the Moravian School was the visit of a gypsy "fortune-teller" who said that she would become very fond of coffee, would travel in Europe and have much baggage. These statements seemed unlikely of fulfillment. Under medical advice she drank no coffee for about forty years and did not travel in Europe until 1871. Both predictions were, however, later fulfilled, for while in Germany she became fond of coffee and when returning home had over twenty trunks. While abroad she recalled the gypsy incident with much amusement.

[2] Amanda Howe married in 1837, Charles Adams of Germantown, Philadelphia.

Mrs. Johnson sailed from New York in April, 1871, and remained in Europe until October, 1874. Her sons, Russell H. and Alfred C. Johnson, accompanied her part of the time, and R. Winder Johnson during the entire period, except while he was on excursions of a few weeks duration to Russia, Spain and Portugal. Two winters were passed in Dresden, where she studied German and took lessons in drawing and painting which had been neglected since schooldays. Pieces of china decorated at this time were given to the family. The various countries in Germany were visited, also Switzerland, Austria, France, Italy, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Belgium, Holland, Great Britain and Ireland.

She was left a widow with ten children before reaching her forty-sixth year. Having been cared for and protected in every possible manner by a devoted husband, she was without business knowledge and quite unprepared for the cares and duties which her position suddenly required. She, however, assumed these responsibilities, and in the most unselfish manner devoted herself to her family. Religious by training and temperament, she was guileless, and seemed to pass through life unspotted by the world, dispensing good to all who came within her influence.

Mary Winder's father was a birthright member of the Society of Friends, but when he married a Presbyterian and refused to express to the Meeting his regret for this act, he was disowned by the Society. Mary Winder was brought up a Presbyterian, although she occasionally attended Quaker Meeting. All her married life she was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, Washington Square, Philadelphia, and was sincerely attached to the Rev. Albert Barnes, a most scholarly man.

Mary Winder Johnson died at 727 Pine Street, February 16, 1877, and was buried February 19th in the family vault in Mount Vernon Cemetery, Philadelphia. On October 9, 1905, her body, with those of other members of the family, was removed to St. Thomas' Churchyard, Whitemarsh, Montgomery County, Pennsylvania.

At his death, Mr. Johnson's estate was appraised at over $800,000.00. A few years later, his children entered into an

SARAH MURRAY JOHNSON, daughter of Lawrence Johnson and Sarah Bacon Murray, was born in Philadelphia, March 27, 1826. Her mother was the daughter of James Murray and Jane Doane, of Scotch lineage, descended from Pocohontas, and related to the Randolphs of Virginia. Sarah Murray Johnson was remarkable for rare spiritual and intellectual qualities, developed at a very early age, and well illustrated by extracts from her letters, poetry and other writings, collected and printed after her death in a volume entitled, A Memoir of Mrs. Sarah Murray Wylie, by A. M. R., 1861. The compiler was Anna M. Richards, née Woodruff, wife of Rev. George Richards, who was an intimate friend.

Sarah Murray Johnson was educated in Professor Charles D. Cleveland's School, Philadelphia. She married, at 727 Pine Street, Philadelphia, September 19, 1854, Rev. William Theodore Wylie, born at Kaskaskia, Illinois, March 2, 1829, son of the Rev. Samuel Wylie and Margaret Millikin. She died in Milton, Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, February 26, 1860, and was buried in Woodlands Cemetery, Philadelphia. Mr. Wylie married second, November 5, 1861, Eliza Watson, daughter of James and Margaret Watson, and had Margaret Watson Wylie, born March 31, 1863, died unmarried. Mr. Wylie married third, December 3, 1873, Agnes Hayes, and had Walter Livingston Wylie, born August 27, 1875.

Reverend William Theodore Wylie died in Sparta, Illinois, Wednesday, December 8, 1909, and was buried there. At one time he was president of Wilson College, Chambersburg, Pennsylvania.

Children of William Theodore Wylie and Sarah Murray Johnson:

1. Laura Johnson Wylie, born in Milton, Pa., December 2, 1855; died April 2, 1932, at her residence, 112 Market Street, Poughkeepsie, New York, aged 76. Graduated from Vassar College in 1877, with degree of Bachelor of Arts; received the degree of Ph. D. from Yale University in 1894. She taught in Cincinnati, 1881-1884; in Packer Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y., 1884, 1892, 1894-1895; and in Vassar from 1895 until a few years before her death, where she held the position of Professor Emeritus of English. She also taught English in Summer School at Bryn Mawr College. Miss Wylie was the author of several books, and a leader in Suffrage Movements from 1910 to 1918. She was buried in Woodlands Cemetery, Philadelphia, Pa.
2. Samuel Wylie, born July 7, 1857; married June 16, 1902, Laura Evangeline McGill, born in Edwards, New York, April 4, 1871, daughter of Harvey McGill and Mary Webb. Samuel Wylie graduated from Harvard University in 1881 with the degee of B. A.

Edward Winder Johnson, son of Lawrence Johnson and wife, Mary Winder, was born on April 12, 1838, at No. 275 (the present No. 919) Pine Street, Philadelphia. He was educated at Mr. Fay's boarding school, Elizabeth, New Jersey, in 1850 and 1851, and also at Dr. Faires' and other schools in Philadelphia. He accompanied his father to Europe in 1847, and in 1856, with his father's agent, visited Cuba, Mexico and Texas, going up the Mississippi and to Cincinnati, where he remained some months in the branch type foundry established by his father.

Commissioned midshipman October 23, 1857, Edward Johnson was assigned to the flagship Powhatan, which sailed from Norfolk on December 9, 1857, on a long cruise, with Ex-president Franklin Pierce and wife on board. The Powhatan stopped at Madeira, Cape Town, St. Helena, Mauritius and Singapore, arriving at Hong Kong in May, 1858, and sailing from thence to Japan the following July.

Becoming ill in Japan and obtaining a dismissal from the service, Edward Johnson sailed for home on the Minnesota, October 2, 1858, stopping at Shanghai, Hong Kong, Singapore, Pulo Penang, Ceylon, Bombay and the Cape of Good Hope, arriving in Boston May 29, 1859.

Intending to engage in business with Mr. A. W. Habersham in Japan, Edward Johnson sailed from New York, September 26, 1860 on the clipper Messenger, for Hong Kong. He arrived in Yokohama April 20, 1861, and carried on business with a Mr. Robertson, until news from the United States reached him of the outbreak of the Civil War, when he left Japan, on the steamship Carrington, arriving in San Francisco on October 20, 1861.

Edward Winder Johnson enlisted in Company G, of Anderson's Regiment of Cavalry, in August of 1862, and fought at Antietam and Murfreesboro. Upon the reorganization of the regiment, he was assigned to Company A, and was in the Battle of Chickamauga under General Rosecrans.

He died at "Lansdowne", Bucks County, Pennsylvania, January 12, 1874, unmarried, and was buried in Mount Vernon Cemetery, Philadelphia. On October 9, 1905, his body was removed to St. Thomas' Church, Whitemarsh, Montgomery County, Pennsylvania.

Anna Rebecca Johnson, daughter of Lawrence Johnson and Mary Winder, was born at the present Number 919 Pine Street, Philadelphia, December 15, 1839. She was educated in Professor Charles D. Cleveland's School, Philadelphia, and traveled with her sister, Mary Ella Johnson, from September, 1858, until January, 1860, in Europe, Egypt and in Palestine, under the care of Mr. and Mrs. Gardel. She was married at 727 Pine Street, December 3, 1863, to Theodore Hoe Mead of New York, born in New York, January 1, 1837, son of Enoch Milan Mead and Elizabeth Hoe.

Theodore Hoe Mead was educated in New York. He studied and travelled in Europe from January, 1857, to May, 1860. Mr. and Mrs. Mead resided in Boston until April, 1870, then in New York and at Tarrytown.

He was a member of the Authors' Club, and for many years a member of the Century Club; one of the directors of the House of Refuge, (Society for Reformation of Juvenile Delinquents); Treasurer of the New York Prison Association; Treasurer of the Church German Society; and member of the Vestry of St. George's Church, New York.

Mr. Mead was a man of unusual energy and mental activity, and was a student and omnivorous reader all his life. He spoke and read with ease, French, German and Spanish. He was the author of a number of books on subjects which specially interested him, including Horsemanship for Women, Harper and Brothers, New York, 1887; Our Mother Tongue, Dodd, Mead and Co., New York, 1890; Health Without Medicine, Dodd, Mead and Co., New York, 1890; Human Personality and its Survival of Bodily Death, Naples, Italy, 1905; Sancta Simplicitas, The Race Question Seen From Abroad, Geneva, Switzerland, 1907. In the latter years of his life, he wrote many articles on special subjects, to friends, and for private circulation.

He used his influence with the Post Office Department in Washington to introduce the circulation of books from public libraries and their return, in parcels weighing a few pounds, at a nominal charge for postage. This was somewhat similar to the system used in Switzerland.

Theodore Hoe Mead died suddenly, July 16, 1909, in Manchester, Vermont, where he had gone for the summer. The funeral was from his home, "Elmdon", Tarrytown-on-Hudson, New York, July 19, and he was buried in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery, Tarrytown, where three of his children had been interred. Mrs. Mead died in Tarrytown, August 5, 1927.

MARY ELLA JOHNSON, daughter of Lawrence Johnson and Mary Winder, was born September 22, 1841, in the house at present numbered 919 Pine Street, Philadelphia. She was educated at Professor Charles D. Cleveland's School in Philadelphia, and then travelled with her sister, in care of Mr. and Mrs. B. Gardel, from September 1858 to January 1860, in Great Britain and Europe, Egypt, the Sinaitic Peninsula, Palestine and Syria. They visited the rock-hewn city of Petra, to which it was said no ladies had previously ventured, with the exception of two from England earlier in the same year.

Mary Ella Johnson married, first, December 4, 1862, William David Stuart, of Philadelphia, born August 10, 1840, son of George Hay Stuart and Martha Kyle Denison; he died without issue April 7, 1863. She married, second, January 11, 1870, James Cheston Morris, M. D., born in Philadelphia, May 28, 1931, son of Dr. Caspar Morris and Anne Cheston; died at "Fernbank," near West Chester, Pennsylvania, November 29, 1923. Mrs. Morris died in Philadelphia January 29, 1912. She was his second wife. Dr. Morris married, first March 8, 1854, Hannah Ann Tyson, daughter of Isaac Tyson, Junior, and Hannah Ann Wood, who died January 29, 1867, leaving five children: Isaac Tyson Morris; Caspar Morris; J. Cheston Morris, Jr.; Henry J. Morris and D. Corrie Morris. D. Corrie Morris died in 1867.

James Cheston Morris graduated from the Department of Arts of the University of Pennsylvania in 1851, and from the Medical Department in 1854. He was a member of the Academy of Natural Sciences; the American Philosophical Society; Fellow of the College of Physicians; member of the Philadelphia County Medical Society and the Obstetrical Society; Surgeon of the Philadelphia Skating Club and Humane Society; Physician to the Protestant Episcopal Hospital, the Moyamensing House of Industry, Foster Home, etc.

Dr. Morris was President of the American Devon Cattle Club, taking a great interest in the breeding of fine cattle. He was one of the first to improve the quality of milk sold in cities, and a pioneer in establishing its shipment in glass bottles.

Dr. and Mrs. Morris resided at 1514 Spruce Street, having a summer home, "Fernbank", near West Chester, Pa. On December 25, 1884, Dr. Morris composed a little poem which he called "Christmas Fancies"; and again on Christmas Day, 1904, one entitled "Murmurs of an Old Oak in the Morris Grove". Another was penned January 11, 1903. These poems were written at the Spruce Street home, and privately printed.

MURMURS OF AN OLD OAK IN THE MORRIS GROVE

CHRISTMAS DAY, 1904

" Three score and ten are the years of our life," Wrote the wondrous Lawgiver of old—
" Though lengthened to fourscore by reason of strength, Still of Labor and Sorrow they've told."

Not in vain! not in vain! re-echoes my heart,
If True Wisdom we store in our life—
As the storm and the stress but develop our strength,
We garner it up through our strife.

Though twisted and gnarled—though of branches bereft—
Though leafless and lonely we look—
We lift up our heads and in vigor rejoice
As we drink up new life from " The Brook."

New saplings surround—new acorns take root—
Fresh garlands bedeck the old Home—
We rejoice in them all: and breathe out the prayer
They may grow for " The Kingdom to come! "

Then firm be our faith, and triumphant our shout,
As we gather fresh strength from " Our Rock ":
Till, ripened at last, for His Temple made meet,
He us in His Bosom shall lock!

J. CHESTON MORRIS.

"Two men looked thro' their prison bars;
One saw mud—the other, stars."

I

A gazer at the stars of old
Soon landed in a ditch, we're told:
Whilst Bunyan speaks of heavenly crown,
Unseen by him who would look down.

II

Venetian blinds may change our views,
Depending on the slant we choose:
So faculties to us are given
To know the truths of earth and heaven.

III

My "prison bars" are prisms to me;
And by their aid I only see
The ground below, the light above;
The Ground is Law, the Light is Love.

Caroline Fletcher Johnson, daughter of Lawrence Johnson and Mary Winder, was born July 10, 1843, at the present Number 919 Pine Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and was educated at Professor Charles D. Cleveland's School, Philadelphia. She was married on February 1, 1871, at 727 Pine Street, to Anthony Taylor, son of Dr. Robert Taylor and Elizabeth Ash Jones, of Philadelphia and Bucks County, Pennsylvania.

Anthony Taylor was born in Burlington County, New Jersey, October 11, 1837, and was educated at the Episcopal Academy, Philadelphia.

On August 8, 1862, Anthony Taylor enlisted in the Fifteenth United States Cavalry, and was in the Battle of Antietam. His regiment was then ordered West, joined the Army of the Cumberland at Nashville, and participated in the Battle of Stone River. He was commissioned First Lieutenant, May 8, 1863; was for a long time in command of Company A, and on the battlefield of Chickamauga was in charge of the couriers, General Rosecrans' headquarters, where his services were recognized by a Congressional Medal of Honor. He took part in the Siege of Knoxville, and at Sevierville, Dandridge, Mossy Creek and other engagements, and in the second East Tennessee Campaign. On March 13, 1865, he was detailed acting Aide-de-Camp on the staff of Brevet Brigadier General William J. Palmer and was in the long campaign and cavalry raid from Knoxville, through North Carolina and Virginia, and south through North and South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama. Anthony Taylor carried the dispatch from General Palmer that led to the capture of Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy. He was commissioned Captain, June 1st, and mustered out with the regiment, June 21, 1865. Captain Taylor was a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States. After leaving the Army, he was actively engaged in the coal business for a number of years, under the style of Anthony Taylor and Company.

Mr. Taylor died in Philadelphia, May 21, 1894, and Mrs. Taylor, at Devon, Pa., on December 10, 1919. Both are interred in the churchyard of St. James-the-Less, Falls of Schuylkill, Philadelphia.

8. Jonathan Dickinson Dunn, born February 12, 1925.

Howard Lawrence Johnson, son of Lawrence Johnson and Mary Winder, was born, October 31, 1845, in the house now numbered 919 Pine Street, Philadelphia. He was educated at Dr. Faires' school, Philadelphia, and travelled abroad in 1866. In February, 1867, with Robert Allison and Charles H. Smith, he purchased the Franklin Type Foundry and Printers Warehouse in Cincinnati, which had been established by his father, Lawrence Johnson, and he then removed to that city. Mr. Johnson sold his interest in the foundry to his partners in February, 1881. He married, in Cincinnati, May 7, 1876, Mary Evangeline Bradley, born December 3, 1855; died April 22, 1899; daughter of John Barrington Bradley and Mary Constance Langdon. Howard Lawrence Johnson died June 23, 1891. They were both buried in Mount Vernon Cemetery, Philadelphia, but on October 9, 1905, their bodies were removed to St. Thomas' Churchyard, Whitemarsh, Montgomery County, Pennsylvania. No issue.

Russell Hampden Johnson, M.D., son of Lawrence Johnson and Mary Winder, was born September 15, 1847, at the family residence, now 919 Pine Street, Philadelphia. At the age of seventeen, he entered Princeton College, graduating in the spring of 1868 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He entered the Medical College of the University of Pennsylvania, receiving the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1871, and, after serving as Resident Physician of the Episcopal Hospital of Philadelphia, Dr. Johnson spent two years travelling abroad and studying at the University of Vienna. Returning to Philadelphia, he settled in Chestnut Hill, where he continued to practice medicine until his retirement a few years before his death. Dr. Johnson was a founding director of the Chestnut Hill Hospital, a charter member of the University Club, a member of the Philadelphia County Medical Society, and a Fellow of the College of Physicians. For many years he was physician in charge at the Pennsylvania Institute for the Deaf.

Dr. Russell Hampden Johnson married, in New York, December 13, 1877, Grace Harriet Price, born in Brooklyn, April 16, 1855, daughter of William Morris Price and Mary Jane Burt of New York. Mrs. Johnson died June 20, 1923; Dr. Johnson passed away on January 28, 1934, in his 87th year.

Children of Dr. Russell Hampden Johnson and Grace Harriet Price:

1. Russell Hampden Johnson, born September 16, 1878; married November 30, 1927, in Philadelphia, Natalie Madeleine Sauveur, born September 20, 1889.
2. Lawrence Johnson, born September 17, 1880; married at Lisbon, Portugal, June 2, 1915, Gwladys Mary Rawes, born April 16, 1891.
3. Anna Price Johnson, born September 20, 1881; married May 26, 1914, Edward Marshall Scull.
4. Louise Johnson, born May 20, 1883; married June 6, 1906, Marshall Shapleigh Morgan, born June 2, 1881.
5. Paul Sears Johnson, born on Summit Street, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, October 24, 1896; died April 26, 1905.

Russell Hampden Johnson, Junior, eldest son of Dr. Russell Hampden Johnson and Grace Harriet Price, was born at 2127 Spruce Street, Philadelphia, September 16, 1878. He married, in Philadelphia, November 30, 1927, Natalie Madeleine Sauveur, born at Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, September 20, 1889, daughter of Dr. Louis Charles and Ellen Dundore Sauveur.

After finishing school, Mr. Johnson entered the employ of Lawrence Johnson & Company, later becoming a member of the firm, and is today the sole remaining partner in this old and well-known firm established by his uncle, Lawrence Johnson, in 1870.

Mr. Johnson has always been fond of athletic sports. While a student of the De Lancey School in Philadelphia, he played football. Later he took up sculling and after his active career in this sport, coached the crews of The University Barge Club, on the Schuylkill River, of which club he was President. Ever since boyhood days, he has been interested in dogs, his favorites being the terrier breeds. His first good dog was an Airedale, which he acquired in 1898, and shortly thereafter a kennel of his Airedales were good winners in the early days of the breed in America. After Airedales, he bred Wire Foxterriers, and gradually other Terriers were carefully studied. He is now recognized as an authority on dogs of these particular varieties, and for many years has served as one of the most highly regarded and much sought after adjudicators of the American Kennel Club. He has been a member of the Board of Directors of the American Kennel Club for many years, has served as Second Vice President, First Vice President, and then as President, an office which he holds with honor and distinction today.

Mr. Johnson resides at his place, "Bolton", Belfry, Pennsylvania.

LAWRENCE JOHNSON, son of Lawrence Johnson and Mary Winder, was born September 28, 1849, at 727 Pine Sereet, Philadelphia. He attended Dr. Faires' school until 1866, and, after a short time spent travelling in Europe, he entered Princeton College in 1867.

Lawrence Johnson married, December 6, 1877, Louisa Philler Gaw, born in Philadelphia, July 31, 1850, daughter of Henry Lelar Gaw, of Philadelphia, and Ann Millicent Wingate, of Hance's Point, near Northeast, Maryland.

Mr. Johnson received mercantile training with Isaac Hough and Morris, and when of age, in 1870, he established his own firm, Lawrence Johnson & Company, which soon became one of the leading houses in Export and Import trade. He was a Director of the Philadelphia National Bank, The Pennsylvania Company for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities, The Insurance Company of North America; a founder and Director of the Philadelphia Bourse, President of The Abrasive Material Company, Director of the Philadelphia Warehouse, etc.; a member of The Rittenhouse Club, The Union League of Philadelphia, the Philadelphia Country Club and the Philadelphia Gun Club. He always took great pleasure in driving, and always owned fine carriage horses, taking great pride in a well turned out equipage.

Mr. Johnson was an excellent judge of character and rarely misplaced his confidence. One abusing this trust could never regain his esteem. He had an unusually fine disposition and remarkable self-control, never losing his temper, though severely tried. Although he had very decided views and a quick mind, he was slow to express his personal views, being most tolerant of the opinions of others. He was a good example of the man described in the Fifteenth Psalm: "Who shall dwell in Thy holy hill? Even he that leadeth an uncorrupt life, and speaketh the truth from his heart, who sweareth to his neighbor and disappointeth him not, though it were to his own hindrance''.

Mr. Johnson was a parishioner of St. James's Protestant Episcopal Church, Philadelphia, and resided at 2137 Spruce Street, Philadelphia, and at Lansdowne Farm, near Bristol, Pennsylvania. He died on August 22, 1905, of an apoplectic stroke, and was buried at St. Thomas', Whitemarsh, Pa.

"August 23rd, 1905.

The Philadelphia National Bank, at a stated meeting of the Directors, held this day, the Vice President announced to the Board the sudden death of their colleague, Mr. Lawrence Johnson, which occurred on the 22nd instant, and offerred the following Minute, which was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Lawrence Johnson was elected Director of this Bank on November 21st, 1891. He at once assumed the duties devolving upon him, and always took a deep and active interest in the bank's welfare, being rarely absent from the Meetings of the Board.

His name, as a merchant, was a synonym of probity and integrity, not only in Philadelphia, but in Europe and South America, where he had important business connections.

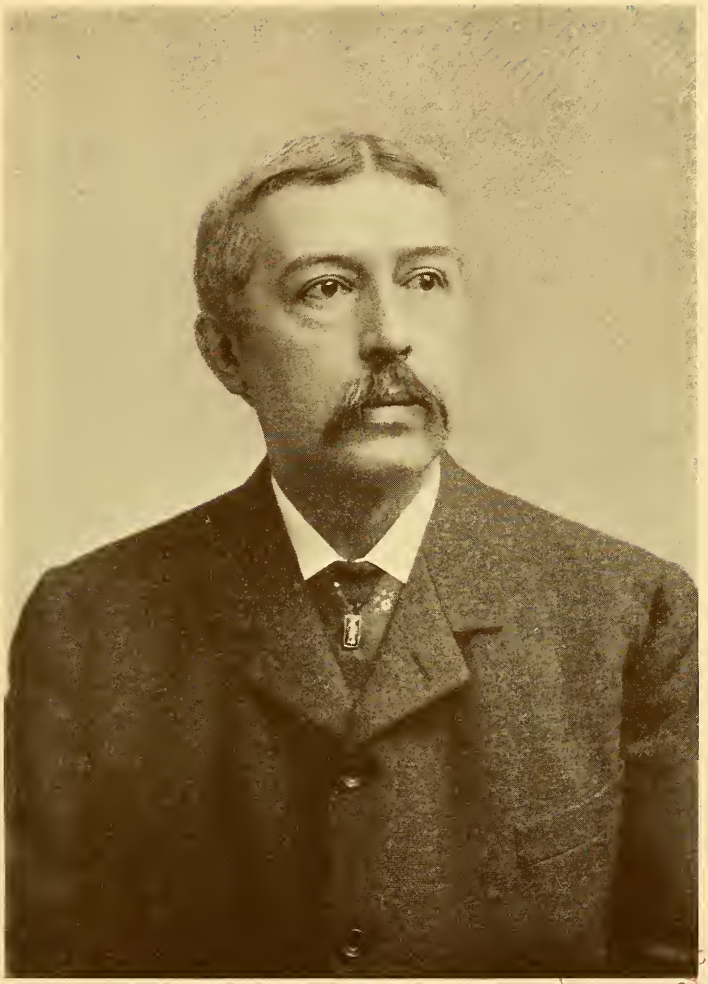
Mr. Johnson was a Christian gentleman, of exceptional character, possessed rare business ability, was unusually well informed upon all mercantile questions, and with the wide experience acquired from a successful commercial career, was a most valuable Director. Sound in judgment, wise in counsel, just, courteous and kind in manner, he endeared himself to his associates, and the Board desires to express its sense of the deep loss which they and the Bank have sustained in his decease.

The Board directs that this record be made a part of its Minutes, and that a copy be sent to Mrs. Lawrence Johnson, with assurances of their profound sympathy in her bereavement.

Attest:

H. J. Keser, Cashier. L. L. Rue, Vice President."

Resolutions adopted on the death of Lawrence Johnson at a meeting of the Board of Directors of The Abrasive Material Company, held on October 13, 1905.



LIBRARY

LAWRENCE JOHNSON, 1849–1905
SON OF LAWRENCE AND MARY W. JOHNSON

Because an inscrutable will has taken Lawrence Johnson from us, be it Resolved, That in losing Lawrence Johnson we have lost, not only an able, honest and competent official, but at the same time a valued and devoted friend.

Lawrence Johnson was a manly man, strong, sturdy, forceful, yet as gentle and tender as a child. He was wise in business affairs, careful, conservative and cautious, and yet he was at all times generous to all men. His opinions were carefully formed and sturdily maintained, and yet he always listened patiently to the views and arguments of others. He was slow to change opinions once formed, but he was never tenacious of his own views when those in whose judgment he had confidence gave solid reasons for a change of policy.

For twenty years he has been a Director of this company and of late Vice President and then President, and in all this time, under all circumstances, in times of adversity and in periods of unexampled prosperity in the affairs of this company, he was always the same—cheerful and hopeful.

When the outlook was dark and discouraging he never lost faith, yet his optimism never outran his judgment when prosperity came.

His place in the business world can never be completely filled by another, while his place in the hearts of his friends we would never willingly fill, but rather while we live would keep it sacred to his memory alone.

Resolved, That this resolution be spread upon the minutes and that the Secretary be instructed to send a copy to his family, as we would have them know in what estimation Lawrence Johnson was held by those who knew him intimately in business affairs and loved him well for what they knew him to be.

HARLAN PAGE, Vice President.
LOUIS T. BYERS, Sec. & Treasr."

By a resolution of the Board of Directors of the Philadelphia Warehouse Company, at a meeting held September 6, 1905, it was said of Lawrence Johnson, that:

"During his long association in the management of this Company as one of its Directors, extending over a period of nearly nineteen years, its interests have been continually in his thoughts and cherished by him as if they were his own; his services have ever been extended to it when needed; his excellent judgment and ripe business experience have always been at its service in countless ways which only we, and its officers, can thoroughly appreciate."

Pew No. 23, on the south side of St. James's Protestant Episcopal Church, formerly owned and occupied by him, was endowed in perpetuity by Lawrence J. Morris, in memory of Lawrence Johnson and Louisa Philler Gaw, his wife.

CHILD OF LAWRENCE JOHNSON AND LOUISA PHILLER GAW:

Child of Winder Lawrence Johnson and Susan Daws Fine:

i. Winder Lawrence Johnson, Junior, born November 27, 1900; died August 28, 1929; married December 24, 1921, Emily Raudenbush.

Child of Winder Lawrence Johnson, Jr., and Emily Raundenbush:

1. Winder Lawrence Johnson, 3rd, born January 8, 1927.

Robert Winder Johnson, son of Lawrence Johnson and Mary Winder, was born at 727 Pine Street, Philadelphia, May 7, 1854. Mr. Johnson attended Mr. Gregory's School, on Market Street near Eleventh, Philadelphia, and in 1870 entered the University of Pennsylvania, Class of 1874. He left the University in 1871, and, accompanying his mother, travelled and studied in Europe until October, 1874. After travelling abroad in 1875 and 1876, he entered the counting house of Lawrence Johnson & Company in Philadelphia, in January, 1877. In July, 1879, he became a member of this firm, engaged in import and export trade and banking. At the death of his brother, Lawrence Johnson, in August, 1905, Robert Winder Johnson became the senior member of the firm, and so continued until his death. Mr. Johnson visited Brazil in 1884, and travelled in Europe in 1874, 1879, 1883, 1885, 1905, 1908 and 1910.

Robert Winder Johnson was a Director of The Insurance Company of North America, of the Philadelphia Warehouse Company, and a Director and President of The Abrasive Material Company. He was a member of The Rittenhouse Club, St. Anthony Club, Philadelphia Cricket Club, Down Town Club, the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, The Franklin Institute, the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, the Genealogical Society of Pennsylvania, Colonial Society of Pennsylvania, the Netherlands Society of Philadelphia, and the Bucks County Historical Society. Mr. Johnson was a member of the Vestry of St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church of Philadelphia, one of the Board of Managers of Christ Church Hospital, and until 1906, a member of the Board of Managers of the Children's Hospital.

Robert Winder Johnson was married in St. Peter's Church, Philadelphia, November 10, 1887, to Rosalie Morris, daughter of George Calvert Morris and Elizabeth Kuhn, then living at 1600 Locust Street, Philadelphia. She was born at 727 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, January 17, 1864, and died in a cottage at Saranac Inn, Franklin County, New York, August 5, 1903.

Mr. Johnson died December 28, 1910, as the result of a fatal accident. In hurrying to catch a train for Chestnut Hill, Mr. Johnson was run over by an ambulance of the Society to Prevent Cruelty to Animals, which was concealed from his view by an intervening trolley car, and was fatally injured, dying unconscious within a few hours, in the Jefferson Hospital. He was buried on Thursday, December 30, from St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, Chestnut Hill, the services being conducted by the Rev. J. Andrews Harris. Interment was made in the cemetery of St. Thomas' Protestant Episcopal Church, Whitemarsh, Pennsylvania.

Among business men, he was known for his activity, keen perception, efficiency and integrity. He was a type of the Philadelphians who have preserved the stability of our financial institutions. To quote from a biography which appeared at the time of his death: "His daily life was carefully regulated, and as simple as it was wise. After business he returned to his home in the country, eager to spend the last daylight hours in his garden, and devoted the evenings to his children, and to writing, and his studies of history and genealogy. The last day of each week was spent in visiting Christ Church Hospital, and in the enjoyment of his home and garden.

One of his chief enjoyments was the quiet entertainment of relatives and friends. Gifted with a cheery disposition, a delicate consideration for others, and a fund of information gleaned from his travels and books, he was a delightful companion. Extensive business relations gave him a broad understanding of affairs, but his judgment of men and things was carefully expressed. Temperate in all things, he was fearless in the defense of his principles.

Born under conditions that might have afforded a life of ease, Robert Winder Johnson devoted the abilities of a good, clean mind, and an energetic, though frail, physique, to the advancement of himself, his family and the community. His motto could have been, 'The choice reward of a true man's work is not the applause of the street, which comes and goes, but the pride of them that love him.' Very appropriate were the words in the recessional at the services to his memory in St. Paul's Church, Chestnut Hill, 'The strife is o'er, the battle done, the victory of life is won.' "

Mr. Johnson resided on his beautiful estate, "Barrow", East Gravers Lane, Chestnut Hill, Montgomery County, Pa.

Children of Robert Winder Johnson and Rosalie Morris:

1. Morris Winder Johnson, born July 5, 1889; married January 8, 1918, Marie Margaret Reaney.
2. Lawrence Edward Johnson, born July 9, 1892; married September 25, 1926, Julia Heberton Magee, born September 30, 1902.

3. Robert Winder Johnson, born August 19, 1894; married July 10, 1918, Chestnut Hill, Pa., Sara Leeds Avery, born November 23, 1893.
4. Rosalie Eugenia Johnson, born October 12, 1900; married January 3, 1920, Charles Thomas Crocker, 3rd, born May 28, 1895.

Morris Winder Johnson, eldest son of Robert Winder Johnson and wife, Rosalie Morris, was born July 5, 1889, at the house of Dr. Russell H. Johnson, which his parents were occupying, on Summit Street, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia. He was baptized in St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church, Philadelphia, October 16, 1889, by the Rev. Thomas F. Davies, D. D., Bishop Elect of Michigan. He attended the Chestnut Hill Academy, 1899-1900, the De Lancey School, Philadelphia, 1900-1902, St. George's School, Newport, R. I., 1902-1907, and in 1907 the University of Pennsylvania, where he remained for one year. In September, 1908, he entered the office of Lawrence Johnson & Company, and upon the death of his father in 1910, became a member of the firm, from which he withdrew in 1918.

At the entrance of the United States into the World War, Mr. Johnson enlisted for the duration of hostilities in the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, as a private, on May 14, 1917, and was honorably discharged from the Army as First Lieutenant on July 5, 1919.

Mr. Johnson married, in Augusta, Georgia, January 8, 1918, Miss Marie Margaret Reaney.

Mr. Johnson was President of the United States Football Association, 1925 and 1926; Secretary and Treasurer of the Intercollegiate Soccer Football Association of America from 1922 to 1934; President of the Football League of the Associated Cricket Clubs of Philadelphia, elected 1932. He also holds membership in the Philadelphia Cricket Club, the Automobile Club of Philadelphia, the Philadelphia Country Club, The Rittenhouse Club, St. Anthony Club, the Bucks County Historical Society and the American Legion.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have no children.

Lawrence Edward Johnson, second son of Robert Winder and Rosalie Morris Johnson, was born July 9, 1892, at "Lansdowne", Bristol Township, Bucks County, Pennsylvania, and baptized at St. Peter's P. E. Church, Philadelphia, by the Rev. J. Lewis Parks, S. T. D. He attended the Chestnut Hill Academy, St. George's School, Newport, R. I., and the Episcopal Academy, Philadelphia, and entered the University of Pennsylvania, Class of 1915.

Mr. Johnson married, September 25, 1926, Julia Heberton Magee, born September 30, 1902, daughter of Christopher Magee and wife, Julia Vogdes Heberton, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

CHILDREN OF LAWRENCE EDWARD JOHNSON AND JULIA HEBERTON MAGEE:

1. Lawrence E. Johnson, Jr., born December 24, 1927.
2. Rosalie Morris Johnson, born August 21, 1929.

ROBERT WINDER JOHNSON, Junior, youngest son of Robert Winder Johnson and wife, Rosalie Morris, was born August 19, 1894, at "Lansdowne", Bristol Township, Bucks County, Pennsylvania, and baptized in St. Peter's Church, Philadelphia, December 10, 1894, by the Rev. J. Lewis Parks. He attended the Chestnut Hill Academy, and St. George's School, Newport, R. I.

Mr. Johnson married, at Chestnut Hill, Pennsylvania, July 10, 1918, Sara Leeds Avery, born New Orleans, Louisiana, November 23, 1893, daughter of Daniel D. Avery and wife, Katherine Buckner, of Avery's Island, near New Iberia, Iberia Parish, Louisiana, and granddaughter of Newton D. and Cordelia Norton Buckner, of New Orleans, Louisiana. They reside at Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia.

CHILDREN OF ROBERT WINDER JOHNSON, JR., AND SARA LEEDS AVERY:

1. Robert Winder Johnson, 3rd, born May 26, 1919, Chestnut Hill, Pa.
2. Katherine Avery Johnson, born July 12, 1922, Chestnut Hill, Pa.

ROSALIE EUGENIA JOHNSON, only daughter of Robert Winder and Rosalie Morris Johnson, was born October 12, 1900, at "Barrow", Gravers Lane, Chestnut Hill, Springfield Township, Montgomery County, Pennsylvania. She was baptized in St. Peter's P. E. Church, Philadelphia, November 28, 1900, by the Rev. Richard H. Nelson, later Bishop Coadjutor of New York. Miss Johnson attended school at Rosemary Hall, Greenwich, Connecticut, for four years, and after graduation entered Barnard College, New York, for the year 1919. On January 3, 1920, she was married to Charles Thomas Crocker, 3rd, of Fitchburg, Massachusetts, born May 28, 1894. Mr. Crocker is of the fourth generation in a family of paper manufacturers in New England, the original founder being Captain John Crocker, who came to Massachusetts from England.

Mr. and Mrs. Crocker reside at 86 View Street, Fitchburg, Massachusetts, where they lead an ideal country life. They are both fond of horses, and ride and hunt a great deal.

CHILDREN OF CHARLES THOMAS CROCKER, 3RD, AND ROSALIE E. JOHNSON:

1. Peter Johnson Crocker, born May 9, 1921.
2. Patricia Crocker, born April 26, 1923.
3. Mary Winder Crocker, born January 14, 1929.

ALFRED CLAYTON JOHNSON, youngest child of Lawrence Johnson and Mary Winder, was born, September 17, 1856, at 727 Pine Street, Philadelphia. Educated in private schools of Philadelphia and of Dresden, Saxony. Studied law under P. Pemberton Morris, Esquire, of Philadelphia, and attended the Law Lectures of the University of Pennsylvania. Admitted to the Philadelphia Bar, April 3, 1880. He became interested in agricultural pursuits and owned and managed a number of farms in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, and was, for some years, on the Vestry of Christ Church, Eddington, Pa.

Alfred Clayton Johnson was appointed Consul to Stuttgart, Germany, in 1893, and Vice-Consul General at Dresden in 1898. He took an active interest in the American colony in Dresden and served as President of the Anglo-American Club and Warden of the American Church.

He married, in Dresden, July 21, 1888, Countess Toni von Baudissin, daughter of Wolf Friedrich Ottomar, Count von Baudissin, and Jakobine Henriette Marie Georgine Zwank. Countess Toni von Baudissin was born at Reinfeld, Holstein, near Lübeck, Germany, January 20, 1863. Mr. Johnson died at Dresden, Germany, July 22, 1928, and Mrs. Johnson on January 23, 1932, at Florence, Italy. Both are interred in St. Thomas' Churchyard, Whitemarsh, Pennsylvania.

Child of Alfred Clayton Johnson and Toni von Baudissin:

Alfred Clayton Johnson and wife, the Countess Toni von Baudissin, had but one daughter, who made her home in Florence, Italy.

1. Mary Winder Johnson, born June 11, 1889, at "Lansdowne", Bristol Township, Bucks County, Pennsylvania. Miss Johnson died November 24, 1933, in Florence, Italy, where she had resided for a number of years.

SMYTHE OR SMITH FAMILY.

Robert Smythe, or Smith, born circa 1535-1540, was of Wootton as early as 1564. His parentage, at the present writing, is unknown.[1] There was another Robert Smythe of Wootton, who died there, leaving a will dated March 12, 1559, and proved June 20, 1560, in which he names wife, Jenett, and children Alce, Christian, Dorothy, John and Richard;[2] Richard died in June, 1581, at Wootton, leaving issue, Robert, Margery and Isabel, and his widow, Janet, was married the following December to Edward Sergeant.

[1] The Smythes of Ulceby were of the same ancestral stock as that of the Wootton family, but which was the elder branch is not certain. The earliest mention of this surname in Ulceby is the burial of a William Smythe, November 18, 1565, and he could well have been the father of Robert of Wootton. The Ulceby, Croxton, Wootton and Great Limber Smythes were all the same family. The village of Wootton lies about four miles northeast of Croxton, and Croxton about six miles northeast of Grasby and Searby. Ulceby is about midway between Croxton and Wootton, and Great Limber about five miles south of Croxton.

From the above parish registers of Wootton and Croxton, we learn that Robert Smythe of Wooton[1] had wife Alice, whom he had married about 1558-1560, and by whom he had a son, Dennis, baptized at Wootton October 17, 1564, and a son, Thomas, born circa 1566, whose birth was not recorded. The wife, Alice, was buried at Wootton April 13, 1567, and three years later, on October 24, 1570, Robert married, at Croxton, Elin or Eline Lounge, or Longe, and she was the mother of Agnes, who was born about 1571, but whose baptismal record has not yet been located.

WOOTTON.

1570 robt Smyth & elen lounge were married the 24 day of Octobz ut sup.[2]

Eline Longe was a widow when she married Robert Smythe, as her daughter, Isabel, designated as "daughter-in-law" of Robert Smithe, was married on June 20, 1581, at Croxton, to John Bare. The Randall Longe who had a daughter Elizabeth baptized September 14, 1575, was probably her son.

Eline Longe Smythe died at Croxton and was buried in the churchyard on December 23, 1582.

It is not known when Robert Smythe died, but he was living at the time of his wife's death. It might be that he was the Robert Smeghte (Smith) who was buried at Goxhill December 5, 1591, or June 17, 1592.

CHILDREN OF ROBERT SMYTHE AND 1ST WIFE, ALICE:

1. Thomas Smythe, married at Croxton, August 8, 1586, Prudence Atkinson, who was buried September 8, 1589, at Croxton.
2. Dennis Smythe, baptized at Wootton, October 17, 1564; married at Croxton, June 3, 1588, to Marie, baptized December 6, 1567, daughter of William and Isabel Herrison. He was buried at Ulceby May 19, 1602.

CHILD OF ROBERT SMYTHE AND 2ND WIFE, ELINE LONGE:

3. AGNES SMYTHE, born circa 1570-71; married 1st, October 25, 1590, Ralph Davison, who was buried May 19, 1593; married 2nd, December 2, 1593, RICHARD JOHNSON.

AGNES SMYTHE, daughter of Robert Smythe and his second wife, Eline Longe, and half-sister to Thomas and Dennis Smythe, was born about 1570, her baptismal record not yet having been found. She married, October 25, 1590, Ralph Davison, churchwarden of Croxton, 1592.

Two children were born to Richard and Agnes Johnson, both baptized at Searby, Jane on May 6, 1595, and William on March 2, 1599-1600.

Dennis Smythe, half-brother of Agnes, by wife Mary Herrison, had, according to the Croxton Register, a daughter Isabel, baptized June 29, 1588, and a daughter Mary, February 12, 1591-92. A third daughter, Esther (Hester), was baptized at Ulceby on April 12, 1596, and a son Robert at the same place on May 9, 1599. There was an older son, Richard, who was of "Limber" when his father died, and a daughter Christobella, who was buried July 18, 1602. Dennis Smythe was buried at Ulceby July 27, 1602. His son, Richard, was appointed administrator of his estate, his brother-in-law, Richard Johnson, acting as surety.

It was the two daughters of Dennis Smythe, Isabelle and Hester (Esther), who were named in the will of Richard Johnson as his wife's kinswomen and of whom he had been made guardian upon the death of their father in 1602. Mary, the other daughter, baptized at Croxton, evidently had died before Richard made his will in 1611.

Richard Johnson was buried at Grasby February 3, 1611-12, and Agnes married, for a third husband, May 8, 1613, John Baker, and was buried at Grasby November 8, 1619.

CHILDREN OF RALPH DAVISON AND AGNES SMYTHE:

1. Martine Davison, baptized at Croxton, Sept. 12, 1591; buried May 18-19, 1593.
2. John Davison, baptized at Croxton, May 29, 1593.

CHILDREN OF RICHARD JOHNSON AND AGNES SMYTHE (DAVISON):

3. Jane Johnson, baptized at Searby, May 16, 1595; perhaps married, July 28, 1616, John Watson,—or May 16, 1621, Ralph Broxholme.
4. WILLIAM JOHNSON, baptized March 2, 1599-1600, at Searby; married 1st, MARY (Neile, of Waddington?); buried July 22, 1655; married 2nd, February 9, 1655-56, Elizabeth Massam.

Legard

LEGARD.

Arms: Arg. on a bend between six mullets pierced gu. a cross pateé or.
Crest: A greyhound or, collared sa.[1]

Robert Legard, the first of this surname of whom we have record, and ancestor of William Legard of South Kelsey in Lincolnshire, who was born about 1497-98, was living circa 1060-1130, and was probably the son of the one of that surname who accompanied William the Conqueror to England. The name Legard seems to be of French origin, although it is not listed in Rietstap, unless it is the Anglicized form of "Lagarda", several of that surname being in Aragon, Navarre and Biscayne.[2] In 1224, a widow Legarda was in Yorkshire.[3]

The Continental origin of the name is evidenced by the fact that it appears upon English records under so many and varied forms, such as Legeard, Lydyerd, Leggarde, Ledgeyrd, Lidyard, Lygearde, Legeard, Ledgard, Ledgeard, Liggede, Legaite, Ledyat, Legyate, Ligeatt, Legerd, and finally Legard.[4]

This was a surname of occupational derivation, the first to bear it probably being a guard, or warden, of a castle. "Lagarda" suggests Spanish influence.

The Legards became Lords of Anlaby, a Manor and small village on the river Humber, about five miles west of the town of Kingston-upon-Hull, in the East Riding[5] of Yorkshire, as early as 1100. The manor had originally belonged to the ancient Anglo-Saxon family of Anlaby, a name derived from Olaf or Anlaf, King of Northumbria, about 950-1000. About [4] This name is sometimes confused with Legit or Liggett, which is that of an entirely different family.

[5] Riding was a district visited by an officer, the bounds or extent being determined by the distance one could ride on horseback in a given time.

the time of the Conquest, Robert Legard married the heiress of Anlaby, and about the same time, Robert de Anlaby, son of Caroli de Anlaby, the first of the name of whom we have record, married as a second wife, ———— Legard. The Anlaby estate passed to the Legard family, in whose possession it remained from that time until nearly the close of the eighteenth century,[1] when Henry Legard of Anlaby, dying unmarried about 1790, left the Manor by will to Sir Thomas Legard of Ganton.

The villages within the county of Kingston-upon-Hull are Anlaby, Hessle, Kirk Ella, West Ella, Swanland, North Ferriby, and Wales.

The church to which the Legards were attached was St. Andrews at Kirk Ella, a village about a mile distant to the northward of Anlaby. At the time of the survey ordered by William the Conqueror, 1086, Kirk Ella was an old established parish and village. It may have derived its name from the Danish King, Ella, or from the Gaelic, Eala, a swan.[2] The church building standing today is of exceedingly ancient structure, the date of erection being lost in obscurity.[3]

Mary Legard, wife of Robert Johnson, was the granddaughter of William Legard of South Kelsey, born about 1497, and daughter of Robert Legard of Owmby cum Searby, both of the parish of Lindsey, in Lincolnshire. From this William down to the present, the line of descent is proven by documents, copies of which are actually in the hands of the compiler of this genealogy, but the ancestry of this William, tracing it back to the original Robert Legard of Anlaby, is based upon public documents, supplemented by circumstantial evidence and by the process of elimination and analysis. The period of obscurity predates parish registers. Since our authentic information begins just about the time church records commence, for the preceding generations we must therefore depend upon wills, rent rolls, and other documentary evidences, few of which are now in existence.

After a careful and painstaking analysis such as described above, all evidence seems to point to the Legards of Holme in Spaldingmore, parish of Holderness, Yorkshire, as the immediate ancestors of William of South Kelsey in Lincolnshire, the Spaldingmore family being descended from John Legard (1240) of Anlaby, whose wife was the daughter of Peter Rysome of Rysome Garth, in Holderness.

Thomas Legard of Anlaby, who died in 1445, a descendant of John Legard of Anlaby and of Peter Rysome, of Rysome Garth, married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Constable of Holme in Spaldingmore. Spaldingmore is in the southern part of the peninsula of Holderness, Holme Hall being about five miles northeast of Patrington and quite near to Rysome. At the time of his death, he was living at Louth, which is about thirty miles southeast of Grasby, in Lincolnshire, Hogsthorpe being on the North Sea, about the same distance southeast of Louth, while Mumby was close by. The Hogsthorpe-Mumby, the South Kelsey and the Grasby families of Legard were all related, being descendants of the Legards of Anlaby, according to Canon C. W. Foster, as proven by his thorough and painstaking examination of the public records, and by localities, Christian names, and other circumstantial evidences.[1]

There is very little extant concerning the ancient Legards of Anlaby Manor. As was usual in very early times, only the eldest son and heir is given, with no mention of any younger sons or their children, for the first five generations.

[1] Canon Foster, when he felt that he had exhausted all sources of information available in England, declared that to find the ancestor of the South Kelsey family of Legard, it would be necessary to go back to the last half of the fifteenth century, and this led to the Spaldingmore family.

LEGARD OF ANLABY.[1]

Robert Legard of Anlaby married the daughter of the House of Anlaby. His son

John Legard married Maude, daughter of ———— Greisly, or Grislyn (?Griffin), and had son, Robert Legard (1150) who married a daughter of Sir John Hotham.[2] A son

Robert Legard (1188) married Jane, daughter and heiress of Robert Copendale of Beverly in Holderness, Yorkshire, and their son,

(1) John Legard (1220) married a daughter of Peter Rysome [3] of Rysome Garth, and had two sons.

Children of John Legard and ———— Rysome:

(2) 1. William Legard, his heir, married Anne Legard, his cousin.
(3) 2. Peter Legard, of whom we have no further record. He may have left sons, as the name "Peter" occurs now and then in the Lincolnshire family of that name.

(2) William Legard (1240) married Anne, daughter of Thomas Legard of Riston in Holderness. She was a cousin in some degree. Holderness is a Parliamentary division of the East Riding of York, and comprises the entire southeastern part of the county, including the peninsula formed by the sea and the river Humber, which, flowing in a southeasterly direction, gradually widens out until its waters form into a bay as an arm of the North Sea. The river separates the county of York on the southeast from Lincoln on the northeast. Rysome lies almost in the extreme part of the peninsula on the river Garth, about two miles northeast of the town of Patrington. Riston, or Long Riston, is also in Holderness, but in its northern part near the town of Beverly, and adjoins the village of Routh. Walkington is also near Beverly, but lies a few miles to the southwest, while Routh is about the same distance northeast of Beverly. Ferriby, now called North, to distinguish it from South Ferriby in Lincolnshire, is on the Humber River, a short distance west of Hull, and close to Anlaby, Kirk Ella and Hessle. Beverly lies almost directly north of Anlaby.[1]

At the present writing, we do not have any information as to the parents or other descendants of Thomas Legard of Long Riston in Holderness, and so it is quite possible that he had no other children, Anne being his sole heir, as we find Legards in Long Riston, Holderness, some centuries later, who seem, by all evidence at hand, to have been descendants of this William and Anne.

So far as we have record, William and Anne Legard had two sons, namely Roger, the elder, and Adam.

CHILDREN OF WILLIAM LEGARD AND ANNE LEGARD:

(4) 1. ROGER LEGARD, married ——— BARFORD.
2. Adam Legard. No further record.

(4) ROGER LEGARD, of Anlaby, living 1311, married a daughter of Robert Barford of Walkington or Ferriby, both near Anlaby. Son and heir was

(5) JOHN LEGARD, who died 5 Edward III (1331); his wife was Margaret, daughter of John Blacket.[2] He had three sons, William, the eldest and his heir, Thomas and Peter.

On the Legard chart, the two younger sons are noted as having died childless, but this may be an error, as evidence seems to indicate they both died before 1381, each leaving at least one child, a daughter Isabella.[3]

CHILDREN OF JOHN LEGARD AND MARGARET BLACKET:

(6) 1. WILLIAM LEGARD, married MARGARET MOYNE.
2. Thomas Legard, may have died before 1381, leaving a daughter Isabella.
3. Peter Legard, living 1381; had daughter Isabella.

[1] The above description of the location and relation to each other of the various towns and villages mentioned is of value in following the marriages and intermarriages of the Legards with neighboring families, and furnishes valuable clues and evidences of the migrations and settlements of minor branches of the Anlaby, or senior stock.

[2] On May 25, 1289, at an Inquisition taken at York to pass upon the custody of a lunatic child or maiden, John Leggerde of Anlaghby was present as a witness. Among the other witnesses were Robert Freeman of Waldeby and John Takel (Tickhill) of Wolferton. (Yorkshire Archaeological Society Publications, Volume XXIII, pp. 85, 91.)

[3] See forward.

A Margareta Legard, designated as of " Anlaby cum Wolferton " paid a poll tax of 11s. in 1381. She may have been Margaret, the widow of John, or an unmarried daughter of John and Margaret Blacket Legard. Wolferton is a hamlet lying between Anlaby and Kirk Ella, not more than half a mile, if even that, from either place.

(6) William Legard, eldest son of John and Margaret Blacket Legard, was living in or near Anlaby in 1368. His wife was Margaret, daughter of John Moyne, and heiress to her brother, Allayne Moyne, of Hessle. The poll tax above mentioned for 1381 was that of the Constabularie of Fryshmarketgate, (Fishmarketgate), and of Anlaby. A number of the villages and hamlets lying along the river Humber, the principal occupation of the inhabitants being that of fishing, were comprised into a constabulary called Fishmarketgate, and the above mentioned poll tax shows the following:[1]

One cannot, with a certainty, place all of these in their correct family relationship, since up to and including this generation, the only information other than that found in the Yorkshire archaeological and historical publications which is available, is that shown on the chart of the Legard family on which only sons are named.

The William and wife above named were undoubtedly the William and wife, Margaret Moyne, appearing on the chart as living in 1368, and therefore in all probability she was still living in 1381. "John and wife" were William's eldest son John and his wife, Ellen Clyffe, and Peter was John's brother. All of these were living in or near Anlaby. The two Isabellas, servants to Margareta and to John, are not so easily placed. John had a daughter Isabella, and the one designated as "serves" may have been an aunt. To satisfactorily place these apparently unmarried women, it may be logical to assume that Thomas and Peter, brothers of John, instead of dying unmarried and without issue, were the parents of the two Isabellas, one being orphaned, lived with her grandmother, Margareta, and the other with her uncle, John; Christiana may have been another daughter of either Thomas or Peter. Charts cannot be relied upon as altogether accurate.[1]

Children of William Legard and Margaret Moyne:

(8) 1. John Legard, married Ellen Clyffe.
2. Peter Legard.[2]
3. Thomas Legard.
4. Johanna Legard, married Thomas Cartwright.
5. Isabel Legard, died unmarried.
6. Agnes Legard, married John Wells, of Anlaby.
7. Beatrice Legard, married Peter Riplingham, of Riplingham.

(8) John Legard, eldest son and heir of William and Margaret Moyne Legard, was living in Anlaby in 1381 and possibly much later. He married Ellen, daughter of Nicholas Clyffe, and both he and his wife, designated as of Anlaby cum Wolferton, were taxed two shillings in 1381. In his household and listed as servant, was Isabella Legard, who in all probability was a niece.

John's eldest son was Robert, and from here, we have a much fuller and more complete account of the family. From this period on, public records become more numerous and available. While lacking exact documentary proof, strong circumstantial evidence points to John and Ellen Legard having had two sons who are not shown on the chart. Robert

[1] There was a Peter Legard in South Kelsey, Lincolnshire, in 1566, whose direct forbears are unknown.

[2] According to the Legard chart, Peter and Thomas are said to have died unmarried, but this may be an error, as there are indications that each had a daughter Isabella, who were both living, as well as Peter, in 1381.

Legard, the eldest son, left a will dated 1441, in which he leaves legacies to Thomas Legard, Parson of Hogsthorpe, and to Richard Legard, Parson of Seham. Parson Thomas was his brother, and it is reasonable to assume that Richard was also a brother.

CHILDREN OF JOHN LEGARD AND ELLEN CLYFFE:

(9) 1. Robert Legard, eldest son and heir; married Elizabeth Whitworth.
(10) 2. Thomas Legard, Parson of Hogsthorpe, county Lincoln.
(11) 3. Richard Legard, Parson of Seham (Seaham, co. Durham).
(12) 4. John (or William) Legard, said to have died unmarried. But a John Legard was witness to a deed signed by Lady Amicia Hilyard of Long Riston, Holderness, Yorkshire, St. Valentine's Day, February 14, 1443-44,[1] so it is believed that the Legard chart is incorrect, and this son of John and Ellen Clyffe Legard was the ancestor of the Spaldingmore branch of the family.
5. Ellen Legard, unmarried.

(9) Robert Legard of Anlaby, eldest son and heir of John Legard and Ellen Clyffe, married Elizabeth, daughter and co-heiress of John Whitworth of Richmond, whose wife was the daughter and heiress of ———— Wadham. He died in 1441, leaving a will dated September 12 and proved October 24 of that year, in which he names children, Thomas, Ralph, Margaret and Ellen. Other legatees mentioned were Thomas Legard, Parson of Hogsthorpe, and Richard Legard, Parson of Seham. These two, with his wife, Elizabeth, and Robert Constable, perhaps the brother of Margaret Constable who became the wife of his son, Thomas Legard, were made executors.

He desired to be buried in the church at Kirk Ella, and left bequests to the churches of Elvely (Kirk Ella) and Ferriby.

THE PATRONAGE.[2]

The Church and Tythe of Elveley were, in the time of William I, given by Gilbert de Lyson to the Abbey of St. Germain of Selby, and confirmed thereto by the charter of Richard I, and continued a Rectory until the time of King Edward III, in the second year of whose reign, 1328, at the request of Thomas Wake, Lord of Lyddil, the founder of Haltemprice Monestery granted his licence to the Prior and Convent of Haltemprice to give twenty librates of land in Hessle to the Abbot and Convent of Selby in exchange for the Advowson of Kirk Ella Church * * * And on May 3, 1343, the said Archbishop ordained that there be in this Church a perpetual Vicar * * * who shall be in Priest's orders, the portion of whose vicarage shall consist of one mansion against the Church for the Vicar's habitation. Also he shall have all minute tythes belonging to the Church, as of wool and lamb, and all oblations and mortuaries within the said Parish.

The dissolution of the monasteries took place 1536-1539, at which time the churches underwent more or less of a reorganization, and in many instances, registers were started, recording births, marriages and deaths in each parish, some starting as early as 1535, but more a little later. The Kirk Ella Register was not kept regularly until 1558, though we find a few scattered entries recorded at a much earlier period. Since the Legards resided at Anlaby, which was divided between the parishes of Kirk Ella and Hessle, their records would appear upon both registers. We do not have at hand the Hessle records.

Robert Legard's widow, Elizabeth, was living in 1445, as she was named in the will of her eldest son, Thomas.

Children of Robert Legard and Elizabeth Whitworth:

(13) 1. Thomas Legard, married Margaret Constable; died 1445, leaving Elizabeth, only child and heiress, who married Sir Nicholas Portington, of Portington, and died childless. The Anlaby estate then passed to her cousin, Robert Legard.
(14) 2. Ralph Legard, married Constance Cutts.
3. Margaret Legard, married Thomas or John Frost, of Lund.
4. Ellen Legard, married John Philpot, of Melton.

[2] Generosus, of noble birth.

(10) Rev. Thomas Legard, Parson of Hogsthorpe, in Lincolnshire, was named in the will of his brother, Robert, 1441, by whom he was left a legacy.

Hogsthorpe is situated on the North Sea directly east of the city of Lincoln, and Mumby lies inland a mile or two, and not very far from Spilsby.

Thomas Legard, of Mumby Chapel, no doubt the grandson of Parson Thomas of Hogsthorpe and Mumby, held several messuages with attendant land in Mumby, Burghe, Irby and Brotoft, all nearby villages, when he died on January 3, 1549-50, leaving a will dated October 1, 1549, in which he names his mother, Alice Houghe; his two brothers, Robert and William; only son Francis, born 1537, then a minor of about twelve years; and two daughters, Grace and Margaret. An Inquisition Post Mortem held at Lincoln, 4 Edward VI (1550), July 22, states that "Thomas Ledyat of Mumby Chapell, long before his death" was possessed of the therein described property.

INQUISITION OF THOMAS LEGATT.[1]

Inquisition Indented taken at Lincoln Castle 22 July, 4 Edward VI (1550) before Christopher Smyth esq., Eschaetor etc. to enquire by virtue of his office after the death of Thomas Ledyat of Momby Chapell co. Lincoln deceased

4 Edward vi, Lincoln, Chancery Series II, Vol. 584, no. 16; E 150.

From the foregoing we gather that Parson Thomas of Hogsthorpe and Mumby had a son whose Christian name is not given, who married Alice ———— and died sometime before 1549, (as she was then the wife of ———— Houghe), leaving three sons, Thomas, William and Robert, who, with their mother, Alice, inherited certain lands in and around Mumby. Thomas married, but died on January 20, 1549-50, leaving an only son, Francis, who was born on December 6, 1538. In the event that the child, then twelve years of age, died without issue, some of his father's estate due to him was to go to his uncles, William and Robert Legard. But Francis was still living in 1561, for in that year, when he was twenty-three years of age and had entered into his inheritance, Robert entered suit against his nephew regarding the lands of Mumby and Mumby Chapell.

3 Elizabeth Trinity Term (1561).

According to the Lay Subsidy Rolls, Thomas Legard was of Mumby 1546-47, and Robert was of the same place 1562-63, 1570-71, but was of Hogsthorpe when he died in 1572.

(11) Richard Legard, whom we believe to have been another son of John and Ellen Clyffe Legard, was the parson of Seaham, a village in county Durham,[1] which adjoins York on the north, and this Richard is the same we find in Southwell, Nottinghamshire, in 1452-53, Nottingham being a western boundary of York.

William Duffield,[2] Canon Residentiary of York, Beverly (Yorkshire) and Southwell in Nottinghamshire, was a distinguished and very wealthy person who held important offices in the diocese of York through the kindness of Archbishop Kempe. He was appointed by the Archbishop on September 17, 1432, prebendary [3] of the Cathedral at Norwell, Overhall and Southwell, in Nottinghamshire. He died March 7, 1452-53. His will was proved at York on March 12, five days after his death, and in the inventory of his estate, mention is made of Richard Legard (Ricardo Ligearde), who apparently was the Cleric or Vicar of Southwell. He held certain lands of the prebendary in Southwell, upon which he resided, and upon which he owed rent to the amount of £8, 1453, and he also owed rents of the tenancy of Norwell, 1452. A Henry Ligearde also held lands of the prebendary. Both Richard and Henry were deceased by 1460, when their accounts due the estate were listed as " un-recoverable debts at Southwell", owing to their both being deceased.

John, or William, son of John and Ellen Clyffe Legard, is said to have died childless.[1] There was a John Legard who witnessed a deed signed by Lady Amicia Hilyard, of Long Riston, in Holderness, on St. Valentine's Day, February 14, 1443-44,[2] and this John, or William, is believed to have been ancestor of the Holme-Spaldingmore family, tho' we have no documentary evidence to substantiate the claim.

(13) Thomas Legard, eldest son and heir of Robert and Elizabeth Whitworth Legard, and nephew of Parson Thomas, of Hogsthorpe, and of this John or William, and perhaps of Parson Richard of Seham, married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Constable of Holme. The Constables had an estate at Paul Holme, near Spaldingmore, in Holderness, the tower of which is still standing, dating from 1294. The ancient manor is now a farmhouse.[3] Holme Hall is about five miles northeast of Patrington and quite near to Rysome. Thomas Legard lived at Louth, which is about thirty miles southeast of Grasby in Lincolnshire, Hogsthorpe being about the same distance southeast of Louth. Thomas Legard left a will, dated at Louth, August 7, 1445, and probated the same year. In this document, he calls himself "Thomas Legard of Anlaby". In the event that his only child, Elizabeth, should die without issue, the Anlaby estates were to go to his nephew Robert, son of his brother, Ralph Legard. He makes a bequest to his mother, Elizabeth.

1. Elizabeth Legard, only child and heiress; married Sir Nicholas Portington. She left no issue, and Anlaby descended to her cousin, Robert Legard.

(14) Ralph Legard, second son of Robert and Elizabeth Whitworth Legard, of Anlaby, married Constance, daughter of Sir John Cutts, Knight, of Routh in Holderness, by wife, Elizabeth Routh. He was living in 1445 when named in his brother's will. He had two children, Robert, who eventually inherited the Anlaby estate, and Eleanor.

Children of Ralph Legard and Constance Cutts:

(15) 1. Robert Legard, born circa 1442-44; married Joan Haldenby.
2. Eleanor Legard, married Girard Usfleet, Esq.

(15) Robert Legard, Gentleman, only son of Ralph and Constance Cutts Legard, succeeded to the ancestral estate of Anlaby upon the death of his cousin Elizabeth, Lady Portington, who had died childless. His wife was Joan, or

CHILDREN OF ROBERT LEGARD AND JOHANNA HALDENBY:

(16) 1. Ralph Legard, Esq., married Isabel Hilyard.
2. Robert Legard, died before 1533. No issue.
3. Elizabeth Legard, died before 1533; married Roger Goodnape, and had issue: Thomas; Marie, who married Anthony Atkinson; Elizabeth; and Agnes.
4. Constance Legard, married John Sisson (Cissetson) of Willerby or Anlaby. Probably died before 1533, leaving no children.

(16) Ralph Legard, Esquire, of Anlaby, eldest son and heir of Robert Legard and Johanna Haldenby, married Isabel, daughters of Piers Hilyard of Winestead, by wife, Joan Att See. The Hilyards were a Saxon family, the name having been derived from Hildegardis,[2] their ancestress, and dates from 1159. Of this family was Robert Hilyard, to whom the manor of Riston in Holderness was re-granted by Edward I (1272-1305), having reverted to the Crown on the death of Aveline de Fortitus. His son, Sir Robert Hilyard, Knt., born 1273, married Ann, or Amisia, living 13 Edward II (1320).

8. Ann Legard.

(17) Christopher Legard of "Anlaby within Hull", eldest son and heir of Ralph and Isabel Hilyard Legard, was living in 1585, and died in 1601-1602. He married first, Isabel, daughter of Jane Byrnand; secondly, Jane, daughter of William Mason and widow of William Parker. His third wife was Ann, daughter of Robert Carr, and sister of Sir Edward Carr of Sleaford, county Lincoln. In his will dated February 20, 1601-02, he names five children, two being sons, Robert and Edward. To Robert the eldest, he bequeaths "my drawing table, two cupboards, the great brass pot and all my brewing vessels as heirlooms." The will was probated September 8, 1602.[3]

4. Edward Legard, baptized October 8, 1587; was given "Woodhull" by his father. Died unmarried.
5. Anne Legard, married November 6, 1598, at Kirk Ella, Thomas Appleyard of Burstwick Garth, in Holderness.
6. Hester Legard, baptized April 21, 1584; buried April 29, 1584.

[1] Robert Legard, Esq., and his son, John Legard; Hamond Whichcote, Knt.; Thomas Appleyard, husband of Robert's sister, Ann; and his brother, Edward Legard, gent., were defendants in a suit regarding certain lands, all part of the Anlaby estate. At the same time, Robert Legard, designated as Senior, with wife Ann, were defendants in another suit filed by Thomas Hirst and Frances Legard, no doubt his half-sister, Frances, regarding additional Anlaby lands.

(18) Richard Legard, second son of Ralph Legard and Isabel Hilyard, was of Rysome in Holderness in Yorkshire, and of Ribye (Ryby) and Stallingboro in Lincolnshire. Both of these last-named towns lie near the coast across the mouth of the Humber River from the Holderness peninsula. He married Margaret Marshall, daughter of Richard Marshall and wife, Anne Anlaby, whose children were Thomas, Frances, Margaret, Dorothy Marshall and others.[1]

Richard Legard had the lease of the Church and Rectory at Ryby, which he had obtained from Francis Sedgwick, 1581. Francis Sedgwick held the Church and Rectory at Rybe, or Riby, of Queen Elizabeth, by military service, that is one-twentieth part of a knight's fee. A knight's fee was one carucate of land, which was usually reckoned in Lincolnshire as 120 acres. He sold the reversion of the rectory to John Legard of Ganton,[2] merchant of London, who was Richard's

INQUISITION OF JOHN LEGARD.[2]

Inquisition made at Sleford, 19 June, 29 Elizabeth (1587), after the death of John Legerd late of the city of London deceased.

The jurors say that before John Legerd's death, Francis Sedgewicke of Rybye, co. Linc., was seised in his demense as of fee of the rectory and church of Rybye, and being so seised, on 11 December, 23 Elizabeth (1581), he granted it to Silvester Bellowe, gentleman, for 20 years, rendering yearly to the said Francis his heirs and assigns 15 pence. That the said Silvester by indenture dated 29 May, 25 Elizabeth (1583), between the said Silvester and Richard Legerd sold the rectory to Richard his heirs and assigns for the residue of the years. Further that Francis, by another writing dated 9 July, 23 Elizabeth (1581), sold the reversion or reversions of the rectory to John Legerd his heirs and assigns; that John Legerd was seised in his demense in fee of the said rectory and so seised made his will dated 21 April 29 Elizabeth (1587), and gave the rectory to his son Christopher Legerd and his heirs; that John died seised of it. The rectory was held of the Queen in chief by military service, namely [1] John Legard the elder, named in the above record, was the brother of Richard of Rysome. He is designated as of Ganton, and was a merchant of London, his wife being Margery Frank. They had two sons, John and Christopher. Christopher died unmarried in December, 1601, willing his personal property to his cousins, Robert and Edward Legard and Anne Appleyard; his aunt Frances or Faith Kyme; Uncle Robert Legard (of Hull); his elder brother, John, and his wife, Elizabeth; to his brother, James Legard, and his sister, Susanne, and her husband, Richard Chomley. (York District Probate Registry, Vol. 28, p. 521.) John Legard, Esq., of Ganton, died in 1643, having married Elizabeth Mallory. Their son, Sir John Legard, born 1611-12, married Mary Dawney, daughter of John Dawney, Esq., of Potter-Brompton, Yorkshire, and their only son and heir was Sir John Legard whose first wife was Lady Grace Darcy, daughter of the Earl of Holderness. He married as second wife, Frances Widdrington, granddaughter of Lord Fairfax. A grandson of this second marriage was Sir Thomas Legard, 4th Baronet of Ganton, who succeeded to the Anlaby estates upon the death of Henry Legard of Anlaby about 1720-25, he being next male in the line of inheritance.

INQUISITION OF CHRISTOPHER LEGERD.[1]

Inquisition dated at Lincoln 23 September, 44 Elizabeth (1602) on death of Christopher Legerde gent. deceased.

A certain Francis Sigeswicke was seised in his demense as of fee of the rectory of Rybye held in chief of the Queen by knight service, and so seised on 17 May, 23 Elizabeth (1581), by indenture, he leased it to a certain Richard Legerd his heirs and assigns for 41 years rendering yearly therefor 40s. to Francis Sigeswicke his heirs and assigns. On 9 July 24 Elizabeth (1582), by an indenture between the said Francis and John Legerd, gentleman, Francis sold the reversion of the rectory to John his heirs and assigns. John being so seised made his will dated 21 April, 29 Elizabeth (1587), and devised the rectory to Christopher Legerd his younger son and his heirs. After John's death Christopher was seised in demense as of fee of the rectory and two parts in three of the reversion, and the third part of the reversion descended to John Legerd, gentleman, as son and heir of the said John. Further Christopher on the day of death was seised of one messuage in Abchurch Lane in the city of London, and of one messuage in Thamestreete in the city of London. The said Christopher died without heirs of his body, and John Legerd, son and heir of John deceased is his brother and next heir, and was at the time of Christopher's death (28 December last past) aged 26 years and more. The said rectory was held by military service, namely by the 20th part of one knight's fee, and two parts of it are worth 26/8 yearly. The messuages in Abchurch street and Thamestreete are held of the queen in free burgage of the city of London, and they are worth £3 a year. Lastly, that the said Christopher held no other lands in chief on the day of his death.

Writ of diem clausit extremum dated at Westminster, 15 May, 44 Elizabeth (1602).

[1] Chart of the Legard Family of Anlaby.

[2] The Legard Chart says that he was aged 20 in 1612, which is an error, as his father was born in 1582. He was aged 10 in 1612.

[3] Christopher and Mary Rokeby Legard had fifteen children, the fifth son being William, who may have been the Rev. William Legard who was vicar of Grasby Church, Lincolnshire, 1656, until his death in 1659. Their eldest son, Sir Robert Legard, was the father of John Legard, Esquire, of Anlaby, who married Jane, daughter of Captain Robert Hilyard, of Patrington, a distant relative. They had several sons, all of whom died young except Robert and Henry, the latter being the surviving son and heir who inherited the Anlaby estates. Robert was living in 1758, when he was elected Registrar, serving until 1766, an office incorporated in 1703 "for the public registering of all deeds, conveyances, wills, etc. within the East Riding of the County of York, or the town and county of the town of Kingston upon Hull." Robert died without issue. Henry left an only son, Henry Legard, Esq., who

(23) Richard Legard, the third son of Robert and Anne Daniel Legard, of Anlaby, was baptized March 21, 1607-08. At the age of sixteen, he was admitted pensioner at Sidney, January 10, 1625-26; attended schools at Newbald, York and Repton; received the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, 1629-30; Master of Arts, 1633; Bachelor of Divinity, 1640; admitted to Gray's Inn, 12 March, 1624-25.[1] His father being patron of the church at Grasby, in Lincolnshire, it was natural that his son, having thus prepared himself for the ministry, should become vicar of that church and parish. He also held the reevty of Little Coldren in York, in the East Riding of Yorkshire. He was inducted into the vicarage of Grasby September 29, 1637,[2] but died a few years later, as on October 16, 1641, the vicarage was declared vacant by his death. On July 4, 1659, Henry Foxcroft, M.A., was inducted into the vicarage and church of Grasby and among those present as witnesses were Richard's uncles, Robert Legard of Anlaby, and Edward Legard of Anlaby, gentlemen; Thomas Marshall, Jr., Gentleman, of Owmby, who was no doubt related to Margaret Marshall, daughter of Richard Marshall, who had married Richard Legard of Rysome in Holderness; John Legard of Grasby; and Robert Legard of Owmby. Just what was the exact relationship existing between the last two named and the Rev. Richard Legard is uncertain. That they all were succeeded to the Anlaby estates. This last named Henry was elected Registrar in 1772, and served until 1811. He was unmarried, and at his death, there being no living male descendants in this direct line, he devised by will the Anlaby estates to Sir Thomas Legard, Baronet, of the Ganton line. During his term as Registrar—he probably died in office—the residence of the Registrar "being in a ruinous state and in danger of falling," it was ordered by the Court of Quarter Sessions "that Henry Legard, Esq., erect a new dwelling house for the Registrar, that gentleman, who then filled the office, built the present (1828) mansion, defraying the extra expense from his own purse". At his death, he left the close adjoining the register garden to the registrar, which was afterwards confirmed by his sister, Miss Jane Legard. (G. Poulson: History of Beverly, York, Eng., pp. 424-425.) closely connected is self-evident. The Legard family had grown so numerous and had spread so widely over the county of Lincoln alone, that it has proved extremely difficult to trace some of them in their migrations, and place them properly in the parent stock.

The Grasby family of Legard may have sprung from Richard, the only son of Robert of Hull, he being the only one in the line of the Anlaby family of whom we know nothing after 1609, when his father mentioned him in his will, but it is also likely they came from the Spaldingmore line. The Grasby records begin in 1589, but we do not find any of this surname before 1628, when a John Legard appears as churchwarden, and had six children, all sons, baptized between 1627 and 1635-36, three of whom died in infancy. Richard Legard, the Vicar, had died before 1641, though not at the vicarage at Grasby. We do not know who was his immediate successor, but Edward Wackfield (Wakefield) was minister of the church in 1653, having had, by wife Sara, a son, William, baptized February 29, 1653-54. He died and was buried June 22, 1655, a son Edward being baptized January 10, 1655-56. The next minister was William Legard who served from 1656-57 until his death June 1, 1659, and Henry Foxcroft was then installed into the vicarage on July 4, just a month later.

The Edward Wakefield may have been a son of Jane Legard, wife of Joshua Wakefield and daughter of Robert Legard of Hull. William Legard, the next to occupy the pulpit, is believed to have been a son of Christopher and Mary Rokeby Legard, and nephew of Richard Legard, vicar of the parish, 1637; and Edward Boteler, Rector of Wintringham, who was present at the induction of Henry Foxcroft, 1659, may have been the husband or son of Elizabeth who "married a Boteler", youngest child of Robert Legard of Anlaby, Patron of Grasby.

(8) John and Ellen Clyffe Legard, as previously noted, had grandsons, Thomas of Anlaby, who married Margaret Constable, of Holme Hall in Spaldingmore, and died 1445, leaving an only child, Elizabeth, who married Sir Nicholas Portington, of Portington; and Ralph Legard of Routh in Holderness. Lady Portington having died childless, Anlaby went to her cousin, Robert, son of Ralph. Robert married Joan Haldenby, and their son, Ralph, married Isabel Hilyard; thus we find the Anlaby Legards in close association with Spaldingmore.

(12) John, or William, Legard, son of John and Ellen Clyffe Legard, according to the Legard chart, died unmarried. This could easily have been an error, as frequently such mistakes occurred, and just as frequently, children who did grow to maturity, marry and leave issue, were omitted from the pedigree. Then too, there may have been two sons, John and William, one of whom died but the other lived to marry and have issue. According to dates, locality and Christian names, John, or William, could well have been the ancestor of the Spaldingmore Legards. Although unable to prove it, Canon Foster is convinced that a close relationship existed between the Legard-Hilyard family of Anlaby, the Hogsthorpe-Mumby Legards, and the Legards of South Kelsey-Owmby, and we do have a record that a John Legard, an unidentified member of the family, witnessed a deed executed by Lady Amicia Hilyard, of Long Riston, 1443-44.

We can go back even further to show a connection between the Legards of Anlaby and those of Spaldingmore. John Legard (1), the fourth in line from Robert Legard, the earliest known ancestor, was living in 1220. His wife was a daughter of Peter Rysome, of Rysome Garth, near Spaldingmore, in Holderness. They had two sons, William (2), the eldest, heir to Anlaby, and Peter. William, living in 1240, married Ann, daughter of Thomas Legard of Riston in Holderness, the contracting parties being related in some degree. The three generations intervening between Robert Legard of Anlaby (1100) and John Legard whose wife was the daughter of Peter Rysome of Rysome Garth, as given on the Legard chart, show only the eldest sons and succeeding heirs to the Anlaby estates. Thomas of Riston in Holderness was assuredly a descendants of a younger son of the clan, born sometime between 1100 and 1240. Rysome Garth is in the southern part of Holderness, quite near to Holme in Spaldingmore, both close to Patrington. Riston, or Long Riston, as it is known today, is near to Routh, and about five miles northeast of Beverly. It is quite possible that Peter Legard, son of John Legard, and grandson of Peter Rysome of Rysome Garth, inherited a part of the Rysome Garth estate, and, settling upon it, became the ancestor of the Spaldingmore family. However, the Yorkshire records yield no information whatever concerning this Peter or any descendants he may have had.

It will be noted that the Christian names of William, Peter, John, Frances, Faith, Isabel and Robert appear in the Legard families of Anlaby that had relations with those of Spaldingmore, and these same names run through the Hogsthorpe, South Kelsey and Owmby families.

Still another family of particular interest tends further to bind William Legard of South Kelsey to the Anlaby clan. This is the Snitterby-Waddingham family. Waddingham lies about a mile south of South Kelsey, and Snitterby is about the same distance south of Waddingham. This family, in 1550, was represented by Roger, William and Richard Legard.

According to the Lay Subsidy Roll of 1542-43, a Roger, William and Richard Legard were living in Snitterby, and a Roger Legard was living at the same time in the nearby village of Grayingham. The Snitterby families were also of Waddingham. These families have not been identified with the main stock of Anlaby, nor have those of the surname at Broughton, Brampton and Mirfield.

John Johnson, of Snitterby, Rector of St. Mary's Parish, Waddingham, died in 1550, (Canon Foster's notes), leaving a will in which he names son, Sir William Johnson, who died in 1540, having left a will in which he calls himself Clerk of St. Mary's Parish in Stamton, Waddingham; and the children of a daughter who had married, first, a Ledget (Legard) and had issue, Robert, William and Elizabeth. Her second husband was Thomas Smith. Sir William Johnson, in his will 1540, also named his two nephews, Robert and William, and niece Elizabeth Legard. The father of these three children was one of the three Legards whom we find upon the Lay Subsidy Roll, Roger, William or Richard.[1]

[1] We also have a Robert Ledgard who had a son Thomas baptized at Waddingham, February 21, 1599. Robert, who was designated as of Snitterby, married secondly, at Waddingham, May 20, 1599, Isabella Toney, who died October 5, 1611. Their children, baptized at Waddingham, were Matthias, 1603; Dorothy, 1607; Ann, 1608; and John, 1610. (Parish Register of Waddingham.)

Robert Legard, of Grayingham in 1545 46, was no doubt the father of Richard Legard of Grayingham, who was buried July 2, 1618. His wife, Grace, was buried April 15, 1618, and a daughter, Dorothy, married, November 5, 1618, William Moody.

A John Ledyard was in Bradford, West Riding of York County, as early as 1391, and another of that name was there in 1467, (Yorkshire Record Society Publications, Volume LXIII, pp. 15, 38), and in the nearby village of Mirfield, John Legard had a house, a croft and two water mills. He died in 1561, and in his will was designated as "clothier". Had wife Elizabeth and children, William; Robert, living 1593; and Jennet. In 1585, 1591 and 1593, John Legard and Isabel, his wife; his son and heir, John, Jr., and Alice, his wife; William Leggyard and Bridget his wife; and Thomas Ledyard were defendants in a suit brought against the Mirfield lands and mills. (Yorkshire Archaeological Society Publications, Volume VII, pp. 162, 201; Volume VIII, pp. 33, 42.)

LEGARDS OF HOLME IN SPALDINGMORE, HOLDERNESS, YORK.

Robert Legard of Holme in Spaldingmore had wife Allison, and children, William, John, Richard and Isabel; nephew William Legard; and Margaret Birley, who was perhaps a sister. The York records give us no information as to his ancestry, but circumstantial evidence leads to the strong possibility that he was a descendant of John, or William, son of John and Ellen Clyffe Legard of Anlaby. Little is known of Robert. He left a will, dated December 21, 1517 and proved March 12, 1517-18, in which he named the above, and desired to be buried in the churchyard of Holme. He had a brother whose name is not known, who had a son William. This William, living in 1517, could well have been the William of South Kelsey, born about 1497, who died in 1537, the ancestor of Mary Legard Johnson.

HOUSE STANDING ON THE SITE OF THE JOHNSON-EMPRINGHAM HOUSE IN MALTBY LANE, BARTON UPON HUMBER

LEGARD OF SOUTH KELSEY, OWMBY CUM SEARBY AND GOXHILL, LINCOLNSHIRE.

William Legard of South Kelsey, in the parish of Lindsey, Lincolnshire, born about 1497-98 and died in 1537, is believed, from all evidence obtainable, both printed and documentary, to have been the nephew William described as "my broders" son by Robert Legard of Holme in Spaldingmore, Holderness, Yorkshire, in his will of 1517. Unfortunately, the name of the father of young William is not given. Robert had a wife, Alison, and children, William, who died in Holme, 1545, John, Richard and Isabel.[1] This claim is made after a careful and most exhaustive check-up by process of identification and elimination, one after another, of those bearing this surname, and is based upon dates, localities, similarity of Christian names and other circumstantial evidences. William was one of the names most commonly used by the Hogsthorpe-Mumby, Holme in Spaldingmore, South Kelsey, and Owmby cum Searby Legards; and Faith and Frances in Anlaby-Hilyard, Rysome in Holderness, and in the Mumby and South Kelsey branches; Edward and Edmund appearing in the South Kelsey, Owmby and Goxhall lines a little later. William of South Kelsey had a grandson Christopher.

The earliest authentic record so far discovered regarding William Legard of St. Mary's Parish, South Kelsey, is his will dated ——, 1537 and probated October 5 of that year, in which he appoints as executrix his wife Janet, and names their children, Humphrey, William, Stephen, John, Thomas, Robert and Helen, some of whom were minors.[2] William Legard, the father, was probably about twenty when Robert Legard, perhaps his uncle, died in 1517. St. Mary's Parish Register does not begin until some years later, there having been few, if any, church records kept before 1535 or there-

[1] The unnamed son of Thomas Legard of Mumby had a wife, Alice, but she was living in 1550 as Widow Houghe, their children being Thomas, William and Robert, all living in 1550.

[2] We do not have a copy of this will. This data has been taken from a type-written chart compiled by Canon Foster from his notes.

abouts, so we can derive no additional information from that source. The South Kelsey records begin in 1559. Most of the records pertain to the descendants of William and Janet Legard.

6. Robert Legard, of Owmby cum Searby, married 1st ———; 2nd, Isabella Wilson (Hall), widow of Nicholas Hall, Owmby; died March 1568-69. He was buried August 6, 1589. His widow, Isabella, was buried Feb. 25, 1591-92.
7. Helen Legard, buried 1571.

Robert Legard of Owmby in the parish of Searby, Lincolnshire, was the son of William and Janet Legard of South Kelsey, Parish of Lindsey. The date of his birth is not known, but he was in all probability the youngest son, and was quite young when his father died in 1537. Shortly after his father's death, his mother married William Wilson, of Owmby, a widower with five daughters, one of whom was Isabella. William Wilson died in 1543-44. In his will, dated March 24 of the same year he devised all of his lands, after the decease of his wife, Janet, to his children, Catherine, Isabella, Margaret, Mary and Agnes. Isabella married Nicholas Hall of Owmby, who died leaving a will dated January 21, 1568-69 and proved March 18 following, in which he appointed his wife, Isabella, executrix, and named Robert Legard as a trustee. Robert Legard, at this time, was married, but the name of his wife has not been preserved. After her decease he married his step-sister, Isabella Wilson Hall. The date of the marriage, which took place at Searby, was July 3, 1569. She was buried at Searby February 25, 1591-92. Robert Legard was a churchwarden at Searby 1580-81, and was buried there August 6, 1589. His name appears under "Searby cum Owmby" in an "Assessment of the payment of the last Subsidy granted A o 13 Elizabeth (1570-71) on the inhabitants within the parts of Lindsey"[1]

Owmby, commonly called Owmby by Brigg, or Owmby cum Searby, in contradistinction to another village of that name near Spittal, is a hamlet in the parish of Searby and a separate constablewick. The Domesday Book shows the name to be a corruption of Odinby, therefore derived from the god Odin.

"The Seurebi of Domesday Book leaves little doubt that Searby represents the Sowerby of Yorkshire and Westmoreland, the Sorby of Denmark, and Saurbaer of Iceland. The prefix is Old Norse "saurr", which means mud, and is generally used of bog and moorland, but also denotes the barren, hungry nature of the soil." [1]

Proved October 10, 1677.

Children of Edward Legard and Elizabeth Hall:

1. Mary Legard, baptized at Goxhill, October 25, 1645; buried at Barrow, January 9, 1720-21; married 1st, at Long Riston, July 30, 1667, John Hall, of Barton; married 2nd, in 1684, Robert Johnson, at that time of Croxton, but later of Barrow-upon-Humber, who was buried at Barrow, September 30, 1713.

   John Hall, of Barton, tanner, first husband of Mary Legard, was the son of John and Elizabeth Hall of Barton. On July 26, 1667, John Hall, the elder of Barton, Elizabeth, his wife, and John Hall, the younger, son and heir apparent of the said John and Elizabeth, outside the Court, surrendered one messuage in Barrow called "Wilson's House", with 2½ oxgangs of land and four acres of meadow in Barrow, in a place called "the great Inngs," to the use of the said John Hall the younger, and Mary Legard one of the daughters of Edward Legard of Long Riston in Holderness, Yorkshire, at the rent of 27 shillings, to hold to their lives in survivorship.[1] John and Mary Hall surrendered land in Barrow to William Glentworth, April 18, 1676, and to William Longe, January 23, 1682-83.[1] John Hall was buried at St. Mary's Church, Barton, October 27, 1683. His will, dated October 22, 1683, directed burial in "St. Marie's Church, Barton." He bequeathed "the messuage house and cotage in Barton wherein I now live and am Interessed in & the closes formerly Pages to my beloved wife Marie and her heires for ever." Wife residuary legatee and executrix. Will witnessed by William Tayler, John Dinewell, Anthony Empringham, Anthony Holland and Will Dobson. Proved by the executrix, November 21, 1683.[2]

CHILDREN OF JOHN HALL AND MARY LEGARD:

i. Elizabeth Hall, baptized in St. Peter's, Barton, May 28, 1668; buried in St. Mary's, Barton, July 28, 1673.

ii. Susan Hall, baptized at St. Mary's, April 11, 1671; buried there August 3, 1671.

iii. John Hall, baptized in St. Mary's, November 28, 1672; buried there February 6, 1682-83.

iv. Mary Hall, baptized in St. Mary's, December 5, 1676. On April 18, 1700, Robert Johnson and Mary his wife surrendered to the use of Mary Johnson and her daughter, Mary Hall, a messuage, 19 acres and 3 roods of land arable in Barrow.[3]

v. Anne Hall, baptized in St. Mary's, October 23, 1679. On April 18, 1700, Robert Johnson and Mary his wife surrendered to the use of said Mary Johnson and her daughter Anne Hall 4 acres of meadow and 20 acres and 1½ stangs of land arable in the Manor of Barrow.[4]

Anne Hall married at Barrow June 5, 1705, Joseph Pointer, who occupied 7½ acres and ½ rood of land in Barrow in 1710, when the said land was surrendered to George Pointer, Joseph Pointer and wife Anne, by William Hudson, Jr., on March 20th of that year. Joseph Pointer and wife, Anne, received land in Barrow by surrender from Robert and Mary Johnson, January 16, 1712-13. Anne Hall Pointer was buried in Barrow, July 4, 1722. Joseph Pointer married second, at St. Peter's, Barton, May 9, 1723, Ruth Smith of Barton. He was buried at Barrow April 13, 1762. The records of children are from Barrow.

Anlaby

ANLABY FAMILY.

Arms: Argent, a chevron between three chessrooks sable.

Sigillium Willaelmi Anlaby, Armigeri de Beverlac, annex en carte. Anno Domina 1408.[1]

The Anlaby family is a very ancient one of Saxon origin, having derived its name from Olaf, or Anlaf, King of Northumbria,[2] circa 900-1000, who afterward became King of Norway. They were seated upon their estate at Anlaby on the river Humber at the time of the Norman Conquest, 1066.

William the Conqueror wrought many great changes in the social as well as the political condition of England, depriving both the nobles and the people of many of the liberties they had enjoyed during the rule of the great Saxon kings. He imposed upon the conquered nation such persecution and hardship that scarcely "a single noble of English extraction remained in the kingdom; all were reduced to such a state of woe and slavery that it was considered a disgrace to be called an Englishman. None of this race, for one hundred years, were raised to any dignity in the church or state. Their language and the characters in which it was written were rejected as barbarous; in all schools children were taught French, and the laws administered in no other tongue. The exclusion of the English from political privilege was accompanied with such a confiscation of property as never perhaps has proceeded from any government not avowedly founding its title upon the sword. In twenty years from the accession of William, almost the whole soil of England had been divided among foreigners. Of the native proprietors, many had perished in scenes of rapine and tyranny; many were fallen into the utmost poverty, and not a few, certainly, still held their lands as vassals of Norman lords." [1]

Consequently the people were ever watchful for a favorable opportunity to recover their lost liberties, and during William's absence in Normandy the year after his coronation, secret conspiracies were entered into against his government, and hostilities broke out in many places. The Saxon nobles, including their former king, Edgar Atheling, formed a league for the purpose of driving the Normans out of England. Upon hearing of this, William hastened from Normandy. In this move, York, the only fortress in the North, was taken and the Saxons were thus defeated; but the next year a similar outbreak took place in Northumbria, and being subdued, in retaliation, William ruthlessly ordered the entire country, extending sixty miles north of the Humber, to be laid waste; and so thoroughly was the mandate obeyed, that at least 100,000 persons perished, and for some years afterward scarcely an inhabitant could be found in that part of the country.[2]

The Anglo-Saxons thus being excluded from all offices, both in the state and in the church, William surrounded himself with Norman lords whom he had enriched with the confiscated estates of those implicated in insurrections.

The year before William's death, a register was completed of all estates in the kingdom, showing the extent, nature and divisions of all the landed property in the several counties, with the products of each, and the woods, mines, etc., contained therein. This important compilation was called "Domesday Book". It is still extant.

One Legard, a Norman, accompanied William the Conqueror into England and acquired the Anlaby estate, either by confiscation or by marriage. Robert Legard, son of the Norman, married the daughter of the House of Anlaby, their daughter, or granddaughter, in time, marrying her cousin, Robert de Anlaby.

The Anlabys took up their residence at Etton, a village four miles northwest of Beverly, hence something less than ten miles north of Anlaby.

The first of whom we have record is Caroli de Anlaby, who flourished about 1100 or perhaps earlier. His son, Robert de Anlaby, married ———— Legard, and they were the parents of William de Anlaby. The next in line was Richard, his son being William who had a son Richard. Then came John, his son Thomas, and then a third and fourth William, and one of these last two named, most probably the elder, was the "Willaelmi Anlaby, Armigeri" to whom the Coat of Arms as above described was confirmed and who was no doubt a contemporary of John Legard who died in 1441.[1]

Anlaby lies four miles west of the town of Kingston-upon-Hull. All this part of Yorkshire that bounds upon the river Humber as well as that part of northern Lincolnshire that does likewise, has a most interesting history, and, as so many of the families named in this book resided in these parts, a description of the ancient towns and villages in this immediate neighborhood will not be out of place.[2]

Barrow was attacked when the Monastery of St. Chad's was destroyed by the Danes in 993. At that time, it is probable that Barton[3] upon Humber was a town, so called from the word Bàrive, or wood town, in Saxon signifying a place inhabited and surrounded with a ditch, or ware, and the ditches or fences on the east, west and south limits, or outlines, of the ancient inclosures of the town are to this day called the Castle Dykes, probably from castrum, a camp, or castellum, a town or place inhabited and surrounded by a wall or ditch.

The ancient ferry at Barton, over the only practicable passage across the Humber to Yorkshire, must have an interesting record could the almost impenetrable veil of the past be drawn aside. Domesday Book (1086) says that when William the Conqueror sat on the throne, "the town [of Barton] had a mayor and alderman, a church, a priest, two mills and a ferry on the Humber". The ferry, however, is mentioned in still earlier records respecting rolls in the time of King Edward, the Confessor (1051). "Doubtless the old Waterside landing place has witnessed many a scene of social and historic interest. As the narrowest passage across the Humber, the early inhabitants, the true Britons, would select this spot as the safest from which to launch their frail and rudely constructed coracles, or canoes; the semi-civilized Saxons under Hengist and Horsa would probably frequent it as a convenient place at which to embark or disembark; the fierce Danish warriors of Canute would be familiar to its Haven as a secure shelter for their warships; and it is certain to have been known to the Romans." [1]

There are two historic churches at Barton. St. Peter's is an exceedingly ancient edifice, the tower being considered the oldest extant; the lower part of the sturdy old belfry " has weathered the storms of more than 800 years and is undoubtedly the handwork of our Anglo-Saxon forefathers". It is probable the body of the church was built or rebuilt in the reign of Edward II or III (1307-1376). The oldest bell is dated 1666.

Quite near to St. Peter's stands the sister church of St. Mary. It is of early English architecture, erected in the twelfth century.[2]

Just at the mouth of the river Humber, where the river Hull empties into it, stood an ancient Saxon village called Wik. King Edward I, noting the advantages of the situation of the place, built the town of Kingston-upon-Hull, making of it a free burgh, the citizens thereby becoming free burgesses and being granted divers liberties. He also built a harbor. Here the King had one of his many residences, hence the name "King's Town." [3]

[3] Ibid., p. 891.

Just a few miles up the river Hull, perhaps six or seven, stands the ancient town of Beverly, " in Saxon Beuen-lega (which Bede seems to call Monasterium in Dierwand, that is the Monastery in the wood of the Deiri), a town large and very populous, founded by John de Beverly, Archbishop of York, a man both devout and learned. The memory of this man was so sacred among the Kings (particularly Athelstan, who honored him as his guardian saint after he had defeated the Danes) that they endowed this place with many considerable Immunities. They granted it the privilege of a Sanctuary to be an inviolable protection to all Debtors and persons suspected of Capital crimes. Within it stood a chair of stone with this inscription. A translation reads:

> This stone seat is called Freehold i.e. the Chair of Peace, to which what Criminal soever flies, his full protection."

"Owing to the River Hull, the town grew to a considerable bigness; strangers thronged thither daily, and the Townsmen drew a chanel from the river Hull for the convenience of foreign commodities by boat and barge." It was originally called Beverlac, and had a church before the time of John of Beverly, dedicated to St. John, the Evangelist.[1]

From Hull, a large promontory shoots out into the sea, called Holderness, also the hollow County of Deira.[2]

William Hall of South Ferriby, Lincolnshire, yeoman, son of Richard and Isabel Hall, of the same place, was named an executor of his father's will in 1558. He was a churchwarden of South Ferriby 1565-66, 1569-70, 1590, 1591 and 1592, and was buried there June 16, 1599.

William Hall married at South Ferriby, February 18, 1560-61, Anne Troughton, born circa 1540-1542, who was buried at St. Mary's, Barton, September 4, 1617.

Anne Troughton may have been the daughter of John Troughton and Ann Cooke who were married at South Ferriby November 22, 1541. There was an Agnes Troughton buried there on February 3, 1541-42, an Avice Troughton buried on March 7, 1550, and John, Elizabeth, Richard and Margaret Troughton, all in May, 1559, during an epidemic of some fatal sickness. The name Avice seems to have been common to both the Troughton and Cooke families, as an Avice Cooke was buried December 17, 1550, and a William Cooke, in 1620, had twins, Alice and Avice, baptized.[1]

The Will of Anne Hall, 1617.[1]

Anne Hall of Barton upon Humber, widow. Dated February 28, 1615-16, proved at Lincoln, September 26, 1617. Directed burial "in one of the churches of Barton", and made bequests to the following persons: son Arthur Hall; daughter Elizabeth Thompson; Dorretie W'm'son; James, John, William and Elizabeth, children of son Arthur Hall; John, son of said Arthur Hall, forty pounds to buy a cow when he was of age. "To the children of my son Richd Hall, Wm Hall, Marie Hall and Anne Hall." To son Humphrey Hall's children, John, Marie, Anne, Elizabeth and Alice. To daughter Alice Toft's children, Thomas, Joney, Elizabeth, Anne and Alce Toft. To daughter Elizabeth Thompson's children, Henry, Robert, Thomas, Barnard, Mawdland and Francs Thompson. To children of son John Hall, Anthony, William and Anne Hall. To Anne Hall; to Hugh Crowther's children; to Anne Tofte and Alce Tofte; to James Hall; to William Thompson; to Edward Trippe son of William Trippe. Residue to son Richard Hall who was appointed executor. Witnessed by Thomas Duckel, John Waddingham, Robert Thompson, William Thompson and Anne Halle.

Children of William Hall and Anne Troughton:

1. Richard Hall, baptized at South Ferriby, January 6, 1561-62; died about March 13, 1622-23; married 1st, Joan ————; 2nd, November 11, 1606, Mary Sedgwick.
2. Alice Hall, baptized at South Ferriby, May 13, 1566; buried at South Ferriby, September 3, 1630, a widow; married at South Ferriby, October 29, 1588, Anthony Toft, of Barton, yeoman, who was churchwarden of South Ferriby, 1593 and 1600.
3. Joan Hall, baptized June 19, 1570.
4. Anne Hall, buried May 17, 1572.
5. George Hall, buried May 20, 1582.
6. John Hall, of South Ferriby and Barton, yeoman; churchwarden of South Ferriby, 1597-98; buried at South Ferriby, July 24, 1609; married, at St. Mary's, Barton, June 19, 1599, Margaret King. Children baptized at South Ferriby.
7. Humphrey Hall, buried at Barrow, April 16, 1642. His wife's name was Anne. The will of James Sergeant, son of Benedict Sergeant and Elizabeth Hollam, dated October 2, 1615, appointed his brother "Umphry" Hall and John Wilkin, supervisors.
8. Arthur Hall, of South Ferriby. The name of his wife is not known. Arthur Hall and children mentioned in his mother's will, 1615.

[1] Lincoln Consistory Court, 1617, i, 98.

9. Elizabeth Hall, married Robert Thompson, who was appointed a supervisor of the will of his brother-in-law, Anthony Toft, in 1615. Children mentioned in the will of their grandmother, Anne Hall, 1615, and will of Anthony Toft.

Richard Hall of Goxhill, yeoman, son of William Hall and Anne Troughton of South Ferriby, was baptized at South Ferriby, January 6, 1561-62. He was surety on bond of George Hardy, the executor of George Foster's will, August 2, 1596. Richard Hall inherited two oxgangs of land and meadows, which his father bought of George Waltham, and one close, bought of William Crowder. He was appointed supervisor of the wills of his brother, John Hall, 1609, and of his brother-in-law, Anthony Toft in 1615. Richard Hall was churchwarden of Goxhill in 1621. He died intestate prior to March 13, 1622-23, on which day letters of administration were granted on his estate to his widow.

His first wife, Joan, was buried at Goxhill, October 11, 1605. He married second, at Goxhill, November 11, 1606, Mary Sedgwick, baptized on March 30, 1586, daughter of Sir William Sedgwick, Vicar of Goxhill. Mary Sedgwick, second wife and widow of Richard Hall, married at Goxhill, September 4, 1627, George Selby of Goxhill, yeoman, by whom she had a son, George Selby, baptized at Goxhill, April 4, 1629. She was buried at Goxhill, February 14, 1641-42. George Selby was a surety on the bond of Mary Hall, as administratrix of her husband's estate in 1622-23, and was mentioned in the will of John Barnard in 1648-49. George Selby married second, at Goxhill, April 29, 1645, Susannah Falding. He was buried at Goxhill, January 23, 1651-52.

An inventory of the estate of Richard Hall taken after his death, a copy of which follows, shows that his movable property, that is " goods and chattels " was valued at £223. 6s. 8d., an unusually large amount for a yeoman to possess in those days. The enumeration of the rooms in the farmhouse and the furnishings of each enables one to form a vivid picture of the size and contents of the homestead of a well-to-do family of the yeomanry class in the sixteenth and seventeenth century. The final account gives the names and ages of his children.

WILKIN.

JOHN WILKIN of Barrow-upon-Humber, Lincolnshire, yeoman, born about 1536, was assessed for goods valued at £4 and taxed four shillings, in the "Assessment of the payment of the last Subsidy granted Aº 13 Eliz., 1570-1 on the inhabitants within the parts of Lindsay."[1] He was buried at Barrow April 7, 1596, aged sixty years. He married, at Barrow, May 16, 1568, Isabell Sergeant, who was buried there March 11, 1612-13, daughter of William and Jenet Teneby Sergeant of Barrow. The Wilkin family almost certainly came from Southeast Yorkshire. However, it has been impossible to prove this.

SERGAUNT-SERGEANT.

The SERGAUNT or SERGEANT [1] family was one of great antiquity and held lands in King Capite in Hartforth, county York, from a very early period. They were descended from Stephen le Sergaunt, who flourished during the reigns of Henry II and King John, 1154-1212.

This surname, which is a very ancient one, was derived from the French "le seriaunt" (the sergeant), doubtless originating through the holding of lands by tenure of Petty Sergeantry, hence "in King Capite". Grand Sergeantry was a species of tenure by knight's service of the king only, the tenant being bound, not to serve the king generally in the wars, but to do some special honorary service to the king in person, such as to carry his banner or sword, or to be his champion or other officer at his coronation, or to do some real service such as keeping the gate at York Castle, or conducting the king's treasure through the country. Tenure by Petty Sergeantry held lands of the king only by the service of rendering to him yearly some small thing pertinent to war.[2]

Although the Sergeants were of gentle birth, they were not a titled family, and so held their lands in Hartforth by tenure of Petty Sergeantry or, as expressed by Plantagenet-Harrison in his account of the family, "in King Capite", that is, "by direct grant or permit of the king".

Hartforth, or Hertford, as it was originally written, is a small village in the North Riding of Yorkshire about three miles north of Richmond. For several hundred years, various branches of the Sergeant family took up their residence in nearby villages, all in the neighborhood of Richmond, until eventually all of those of that surname had removed from Hartforth except two sons of John le Sergaunt (1340), the eldest, John Sergaunt, Jr., whose sole issue were two daughters, and the second son, William, designated as a yeoman in 1421. The third son, Thomas, had removed to Gilling, a village a mile or two distant. William's descendants continued to reside in Hartforth until the middle of the seventeenth century.

[1] Plantagenet-Harrison's History of Yorkshire, Volume I.

[2] Yorkshire Inquisitions, Volume III, p. 306.

Adam le Sergaunt, second son of Stephen le Sergaunt, was living in Hartforth in 1251, but we have no further record of him in Yorkshire. However, we do find a William Sergaunt, son of Adam Sergaunt, of Over Burnham, receiving a grant of land in Nether Burnham, or Burnholme, a village three miles or so southwest from Barrow and Barton, in Lincolnshire, and quite near to Thornton Curtis, and this Adam Sergaunt may have been the ancestor of the Lincolnshire family, the earliest to whom we have been able to trace by authentic or documentary evidence being William Sergeant of Barrow-upon-Humber, county Lincoln, born about 1510 and died 1557.

William Sergeant of Barnetby, a village five or six miles south of Barrow, was, at the time of his death in 1521, possessed of land in Barnetby, Howson, Beykby and Kirmington, nearby towns, all in Lincolnshire, which he devised to his wife, Helen, for life, and at her death, the Kirmington house and lands were to go to his grandson, Robert, son of his son William; but all his other houses, lands, etc., were to be divided between his son William, and grandson William, son of his son John, naming his wife Helen and son William, executors. He also bequeathed three shillings six pence to each of the parish churches of Elsham, Melton, Wrawby and Beykby. The grandson William was in all probability under age when his grandfather died, and as William Sergeant of Barrow was born about 1505-1510, these two could well have been identical.

While we have no direct evidence upon which to found the claim, the indirect or circumstantial evidence points strongly to the conclusion that the Lincolnshire Sergeants were descendants of the Yorkshire family of Sergaunts, and that William of Barnetby, 1521, was the ancestor of William Sergeant of Barrow, born about 1505-1510. Many of the Christian names of the earlier original Sergaunt family of Yorkshire appear in the Lincolnshire branches of the Sergeant family, such as Adam, Stephen, Benedict, William, Helen, all, except William, more or less unusual ones.

SERGAUNT FAMILY OF HERTFORD (HARTFORTH), YORKSHIRE.[1]

Stephen le Sergaunt de hertford living temp. Henry II and King John, 1154-1212. He had three sons, Hugh fil Stephen le Sergaunt, eldest son and heir.

Adam fil Stephen le Sergaunt, living 35 Henry III, 1251. No further record of him found in the Hartforth line.
Thomas fil Stephen le Sergaunt, against whom Peter de Suabidia claimed damages at Newsom in Broughtonlith, 1263.

Hugh le Sergaunt, fil Stephen le Sergaunt of Hertford, against whom Roger de Aske claimed lands of Aske, 15 Henry III, 1231. He had wife Margaret and son, Hugh le Sergaunt, of Dalton, Yorkshire. Claimed a messuage and eight acres of land in Newby against John de Newby in right of his wife, Margaret, 55 Henry III, 1271. Had son, Peter le Sergaunt of Hertford, 20 Edward III (1347), had grandsons, John and William, sons of his son John. William was of Eppleby, 3 Richard II (1380), and his son and grandson William were of Gilling, an adjoining village to Hartforth, in 3 Henry V (1416). John also had a son William le Sergaunt, yeoman, of Hertford, 9 Henry V (1422), whose descendants resided and possessed lands at Hartforth until time of Charles II (1649).

Walter le Sergaunt, second son of Hugh, fil Stephen le Sergaunt, was of Kelkefield, and had, among others, a son,

Stephen le Sergaunt, living 21 Edward I (1273).[2]

SERGEANT FAMILY OF LINCOLNSHIRE.

A SERGEANT family was seated in Lincolnshire as early as the first half of the thirteenth century, as evidenced by the following:[1]

> On the Octaves of S. Michael, 18 Henry III (6 October, 1234). Between Geoffrey de Bereham and Matilda his wife, plaintiffs, and John Gubaud, tenant of 6 acres of land and a messuage in Stowe and Gretford, which Geoffrey and Matilda claimed to be the reasonable dower of the said Matilda of the free tenement which was of John le Serjaunt, formerly her husband in the same Vills. Geoffrey and Matilda quit claim all right to the said John for 40s.

Stowe, by Kestevan, and Greatford are two adjoining villages situated five or six miles northeast of Stamford, in the extreme southern part of the county.

The next mention of this name in the records of Lincolnshire is found in two ancient deeds under dates of 1362 and 1363, in which William Sergaunt, son of Adam Sergaunt of Over Burnham, acquires land in Nether Burnham, two hamlets in the Isle of Axholme, in the extreme north-western part of the county, about two miles south of Epworth. York and Lincoln are here separated by the river Idle, one of the four streams that surround Axholme, the largest being the Trent, which flows northward and empties into the Humber.

> Release of Robert son of Emma de Mistleton to William son of Adam le Sergaunt of Over Brunham,[2] of her right in a messuage and land at Over Brunham, Monday the feast of St. Faith, the Virgin, 45 Edw. III, (1362). Seal.[3]

> Grant by John, son of John Browne of Over Brunham to William, son of Adam Sergaunt, of lands at Smythlands in Nether Brunham, Sunday before St. James, the Apostle, 1368. Seal.[4]

[2] Burnham.

[3] Catalogue of Ancient Deeds, Volume I, B. 751 (Lincolnshire).

[4] Ibid., B. 764.

About twenty-five miles northeast of these hamlets of Over and Lower Burnham and about three miles southeast of Barton upon Humber, in Lincolnshire, lies another hamlet called Burnham, and here, two hundred years later, 1576-1581, we find a "William Sergeant", who, as of "Burnholme", had several children baptized at Thornton Curtis, a very nearby village. As there is no village or hamlet in England called Burnholme, this is, in all probability, a misspelling of Burnham. These children were Frances, Mary, Frances and Barbara.[1] At the same time, there was a Benedict Sergeant at Thornton Curtis who had William, baptized July 14, 1583; Barbara, November 28, 1585; and Isabell, January 28, 1586, who was buried January 28, 1587.

At Elsham, a few miles south of Barton, there was still another family of this surname, living there in 1561, and earlier, who carried the Christian names of Robert, William, John and Thomas.[2]

William Sergeant, of Barnetby in Lincolnshire, perhaps five miles or so south of Burnham and Thornton Curtis, died there in 1521, leaving a wife, Helen, or Ellen, and two sons, William and John, and possessed of lands in the towns and villages of Barnetby, Kirmington, Howson, and Beykby, which he left to his wife during her lifetime and at her death they were to go to his son William and William's son Robert, and to his grandson William, son of his son, John. He bequeathed to the parish churches of Melton, Wrawby and Elsham each 4s. 6d. Robert was to have a house at Kirmington, close by, and all the rest of his houses, lands, etc., after the wife's death, were to be divided between his son William and grandson William, the latter in all probability being a minor at the time of his grandfather's death.

This family of Barnetby was no doubt related to that of Burnham and Thornton Curtis.

THE TESTAMENT OF WILLIAM SERGEANT, 1521.[1]

13 November, 1521. I William Sargeant of Barnetby make my testament, etc. My body to be buried in the church yard of the blessed virgin mary in Barnetby, and in the name of my mortuary my best beast. I bequeath to the high altar there vjd. To the fabric of the mother church of Lincoln xd. To the high altar there xd. To every order of the friars of Grimsby, Hull and Beverly xs. for one trental to be celebrated for the health of my soul in each of these places. To every child (puero) of my children (puerorum) one sheep. I leave all my tenements, lands, meadows, feedings, pastures, rents and services, etc., in the towns and fields of Howsom, beykby, barnetby, and kirmington to Helen my wife for her life, and after her death to Robert Sergeant son of William Sergeant my son one house in Kirmington for ever in the tenure of Richard Blynke. I bequeath to every parish church of the following towns that is Melton, Wrawby, Beykby and Elsham iijs. iiijd. I will that after the death of my wife all my said tenements, etc., be divided between William Sergeant my son and William Sergeant son of my son John Sergeant their heirs and assigns for ever, except as above excepted. The residue of my goods I bequeath to my wife and William my son, whom I make my executors, to dispose for the health of my soul, etc. These being witnesses, John Beverly gentleman, James Wytley chaplain, John Richmond, and Thomas Halyffax.

Proved at Kelby, 10 Feb. 1521.

While we have no proof to bear out this claim, evidence points strongly to this William, grandson of William of Barnetby, as identical with William of Barrow, the father of Isabell Sergeant Wilkin. William of Barrow had a sister Ellen (Helen) and sons Benedict and Steven. He was born about 1505-1510, hence about eleven years old when William of Barnetby died in 1521.

Our authentic records of the particular family of this surname in which we are especially interested begin with William Sergeant of Barrow, born about 1505-1510.

SERGEANT FAMILY OF BARROW.

William Sergeant of Barrow-upon-Humber, Yarborough Wapentake, Lincolnshire, yeoman, born about 1505-1510, was no doubt descended from the family of that surname which had been seated at Hartforth, North Riding of Yorkshire, as early as the middle of the twelfth century. His direct forebear is believed to have been Adam, son of Stephen le Sergaunt, who was living in Hartforth in 1251, but removed to Lincolnshire, where we find a family, presumably his descendants, living one hundred and thirty-five years later.

William Sergeant married Jenet Teneby, widow of Edmund Teneby, (Teanby) of Barrow, who died in 1537. He was assessed for £8 and taxed 5 shillings, 4 pence, by an "Assessment of the last part of the Subsidy granted 37. Henry VIII [1545-6] on the inhabitants within the wapentakes of Bradley, Haverstowe, Yerburg, Walscrofte." And assessed for £18 and taxed 12 shillings in the " Assessment of the third payment of the Relief granted 2 & 3 Edward VI [1548-50] on the inhabitants within the Wapentakes of Bradley, Haverstow, Walscroft and Yarborough"[1] Galfridus Teynby and Stephen Tenby were both on the same roll, the former being taxed 12 shillings on £12, and the latter paying 6 shillings on £9.

William Sergeant died between July 15 and October 27, 1557, and was buried at Barrow Church. His widow, Jenet, was buried in Barrow, July 3, 1587.

In his will, William Sergeant bequeathes to each of his sisters, Jane and Ellen, a ewe and lamb. It is noted that William Sergeant of Barnetby, 1521, had wife, Helen (Ellen), and it is to be regretted that he names only sons and grandsons, although he makes certain bequests to "every child of my children."

SEDGWICK.

Sir William Sedgwick,[1] Vicar of Goxhill, Lincolnshire, England, was born circa 1527. He was ordained priest by the Lord Bishop of Lincoln, April 7, 1567,[2] being Vicar of Ulceby, Lincolnshire, October 9, 1568, when he signed a composition for the "first fruits" of that parish. His sureties were William Banks, of St. Margaret's, New Fish Street, London, fishmonger, and Thomas Heighington, of St. Lawrence, Pountney, London, merchant tailor.[3]

First fruits were the profits of a benefice for the first year after a vacancy, originally payable to the pope. When Henry VIII put an end to the Roman jurisdiction, the first-fruits became payable to the crown. Upon institution, the clergymen furnished sureties for the payment of first-fruits, which payment was discharged in a certain number of instalments. Each half year or so, the Bishops sent to the Barons of the Exchequer a list of persons instituted in their dioceses so that no one escaped payment. The records of payments are preserved in Composition Books in the Public Record Office, London.

His parentage is unknown. There was a Sedgwick family at Riby, a village a few miles south of Ulceby, who were contemporary and undoubtedly related to Sir William. Francis Sedgwick had the lease of the church and rectory at Rybye (Riby), which he held by gift of Queen Elizabeth, for military service. He sold the reversion of the rectory to Richard Legard in 1581, upon the installation of the latter as Vicar of Riby Parish. The names William, Francis, Robert, Margaret, Henry, Annas or Agnes, Alice, Katherine and Richard Sedg-

[1] "'Sir' is the proper title of a B. A. of a University, and Master of an M. A. It appears, however, that the titles were used rather loosely, and the title 'Sir' seems to have been given to any clergyman." Canon Foster, March 3, 1910.

wick appear in both the Riby and Goxhill families. Sir William Sedgwick probably was originally of Riby.[1]

William Sedgwick continued as Vicar of Ulceby in 1569 and 1570. He became vicar of the parish of Goxhill, made vacant by death, upon presentation by Queen Elizabeth, dated at Gorhambury, July 21, 1571. He was instituted by the Bishop of Lincoln at Bugden, July 23, 1571, on taking the oath recognizing the Queen's authority and renouncing any foreign power; and the Archdeacon of Lincoln was directed to induct.[2] The composition for first fruits of Goxhill Vicarage, was signed by William Sedgwick, November 5, 1571. His sureties were Henry Welbie, of Goxhill, gentleman, and John Ellwood, of the same place, yeoman.[3]

The bishop and archdeacons used to visit different parts of the diocese at intervals, and it was the custom, especially at the visitation of the bishop, to obtain such information about the clergy as appears in the Liber Cleri, viz:

> Yarborough Deanery, August 15, 1576. Value of benefice, £14.8.4. Ordained priest by the Bishop of Lincoln, April 7, 1567. Vicar of Goxhill on the nomination of the [1] John Sedgwick (Syswyck) of Utterby, near Louth, in eastern Lincolnshire, in his will dated May 8, and probated October 7, 1540, bequeaths his property to three children, but does not name them. Supervisors appointed were Sir John Sponer, Thomas Symson and John Mychell, the elder.

——— Sedgwick, of Riby, had sons, William, John, Thomas and Robert. Of these, William died in 1568, leaving a will in which he names the above brothers and two children, Francis, and Joan wife of Christopher Rawlinson. William seems to have married second, June 30, 1560, Jennet Stamp. He was buried at Riby December 30, 1568. John, brother of William, married and had son, William, buried March 16, 1563. He was buried July 20, or February 27, 1576-77. Thomas, another brother of William, married 1560, Elizabeth Starke, and was buried April 15, 1576, or April 20, 1583. A Robert Sedgwick was buried at Riby, October 30, 1570. This may have been William's brother and the father of Robert Sedgwick who married June 12, 1584, Anne Radsey, and this Robert Sedgwick, the younger, might have been the Robert named in Sir William Sedgwick's will, 1590. lord bishop of Lincoln, and the presentation of the lady the queen: 60 years of age;[1] married; knows no Latin; competently skilled in sacred learning; performs the sacraments according to the manner and form prescribed by public authority. (Translation.)

It was not usual for a person to be nominated by one party and presented by another. The fact of the nomination is rather in favor of Sir William belonging to the Lincolnshire Sedgwicks. Clergymen presented by the crown might come from anywhere; with the bishop, local interest would be more likely to count.

It is noticeable that William Sedgwick knew no Latin. We may conclude, therefore, that he was never at a university. There was great disorder in the church at that period, on account of the agitations of the Puritans. Calvinism was rife, and the Archbishop of Canterbury about 1580 was a strong Calvinist. Clerical marriage had been forbidden though sometimes winked at, until the reign of Edward VI (1547-1553), when many clergymen married, but when Mary (1553-1558) came to the throne, they were deprived of their livings on that account. In Elizabeth's reign (1558-1603), clerical marriage was lawful, but the queen disliked it very much, and careful enquiries seem to have been made as to whether clergymen were married or single.

William Sedgwick continued Vicar of Goxhill until his death. His first wife, Margaret, was buried there April 15, 1580. He married second at Redbourne, October 3, 1580, Mary Twistleton. He was buried at Goxhill, February 7, 1590-91.

It is probable that Sir William succumbed to one of the plagues, or sweating sicknesses, that were so common at that time. The State papers of Henry VIII (1509-1547) and Elizabeth (1558-1603) are full of references to these epidemics. A very terrible one devastated the villages along the Humber in 1592-93, and many of them, as is evident from registers, were never so populous again. The transcript of Goxhill for 1590-1 has an unusually long list of burials, which include, in a number of instances, several members of the same family. It would seem, therefore, that Goxhill suffered in 1590-1 as well as 1592-93. Sir William's daughter, Katherine Sedgwick, died in the same month as her father.

[1] His age, as given, must be an error, as Sir William, by second wife, Mary, had three children baptized at Goxhill between 1586 and 1589, the last named when he would have been seventy-nine or eighty years of age. Canon Foster believed there was an error made, and that probably the "X" ought to come before the "L" instead of after, making his age forty instead of sixty years, as in above translation.

Mary Smith, widow, was buried at Goxhill, March 20, 1624-25.

Goxhill is pleasantly situated not far from the river Humber, nearly opposite to the town of Hull, at the distance of about five miles eastward from Barton. This place, in the reign of Edward the first, formed part of the baronies of the Earl of Albemarle, the Bishop of Lincoln, the Bishop of Bayeaux, and that of Trustbut, and was held by Robert de Ros and others of his family until the time of Henry the fifth, when William, Lord Ros, died seized of the manor held of the Countess of Stafford. In the reign of Edward the first, Simon de Vere also held a fee of the Earl of Albemarle, and another under the Bishop of Lincoln. The church is a handsome structure, consisting of a nave with aisles, a chancel, and a lofty tower. In the church is a mutilated effigy of a knight, traditionally stated to be Lord Vere.[1]

Several hours were spent, one pleasant July morning in 1905, by Mr. Johnson and his son, accompanied by the Rev. C. W. Foster, in the garden of the vicarage at Goxhill, where they sat in summer-house facing the vicarage, and inspected the parish register, and were pleasantly entertained by the vicar and his wife.

The dates of baptism, marriage and burial of the children of William Sedgwick are from Goxhill.

[2] The true date of this entry is 3rd October, 1580, the 22nd year of Queen Elizabeth, 1578 would be the 20th year of Elizabeth. The figures of the years "anno Domini" from 1560 to 1600 in the Register have evidently been added by another, but still an early, hand. A careful perusal of the entries for the several years shows how the person who added the figures had arrived at an error of two years in his calculation by the time he reached the 22nd year of Elizabeth, and how by opposite and compensating errors after that date he had reverted to the true date by the time he reached the 42nd year of Elizabeth. Twisleton

TWISTLETON–TWISLETON.

Arms: Argent, a chevron between three moles sable.
Crest: A dexter arm embowed, vested sable, turned up argent, holding in the hand proper a mole spade or, headed argent.[1]

TWISTLETON was not a common surname, there being few families in England that bore it, and all those so far discovered trace back to a common ancestor, John Thistillon, who flourished during the last half of the fifteenth century. It appears upon the records in different forms, such as Thistillon, Thistillton, Thystelthon, Twystleton, Twistleton and Twisleton.

John Thistillon, the earliest of the name so far discovered, was of St. Martin's Parish, Stamford, Lincolnshire. Stamford, a municipal borough and market town, lies at the southern extremity of the county, at the point where the counties of Lincoln, Northampton and Rutland meet, the river Welland separating Lincoln from Northants. It is about sixteen miles northwest of the great cathedral city of Peterborough, which is in Nassaburg Hundred, Northamptonshire. In ancient times, Peterborough was situated in the diocese of Lincoln, from which, with the counties of Northampton and Rutland, it was separated at the time of the dissolution by Henry VIII, 1541, and erected into an episcopal see, under the name of the Liberty, or Soke, of Peterborough. Nassaburg Hundred, which is co-extensive with the Soke of Peterborough, was so called from Nass, or Ness, of Burg, from its situation stretching out in the form of a promontory, and, within the hundred, was situated the Burg of St. Peter.

Stamford Baron, or Stamford St. Martin, is a liberty in Northamptonshire situated on the southern bank of the Welland, over which a bridge leads into the town of Stamford in Lincolnshire. It is called Stamford Baron from a strong castle which Edward the Elder, 901-925, is said to have built there to prevent the inroads of the Danes from the north. It took the name of St. Martin from the saint to whom the parish church is dedicated. The church consists of a lofty, spacious body, a north and south aisle, and chancel. At the west end is a square embattled tower, in which are three large old bells. In most of the windows, there are great remains of painted glass depicting historical scenes from the Old and New Testament. Baron St. Martin Without adjoins Baron St. Martin.[1]

John Thistillon, of Baron St. Martins, Stamford, Lincolnshire, died before 1497. He had a son, John, and daughter, Agnes (?), married to Thomas (or William) Williams, and grandchildren, David, George and Henry Williams. His son John, in 1497, deeded a house and lot in Stamford to John Taylor and others, wardens of the church, in trust for the use of this Williams family.

He seems to have had at least one other son, who was the father of John Twistleton of Daryngton, County York, who died in 1503, and was buried in the Daryngton churchyard. Daryngton (Darrington) is about ten or twelve miles southwest of Barley, and about the same distance from Potter Newton and Carlton. This John Twistleton of Darrington was evidently related to John Twistleton, goldsmith, citizen and alderman of London, and to another John Twistleton of Bolton, as these two are named in his will of May 18, 1503. He married Elizabeth Copley, sister of John Copley, who survived him. Their children were Edward, Henry, Katherine, Joan, Margaret and William. One of the witnesses to this will was a Richard Twistleton, and this Richard might have been his father.[2]

We find still another John Twistleton in Yorkshire, whose will, June 6, 1506, directs that he be buried at "Aton", which is probably Ayton, near Skipton, some miles north of Bradford and Leeds. Bolton is now part of Bradford. This John Twistleton had wife Elizabeth, and names but one child, William.[3]

There was a Robert Twistleton of Ledstone in the parish of Kippax, about midway between Leeds and Pontefract, who died in September, 1551. He had wife, Isabel, and named as legatee a Thomas Twistleton, but does not specify the relationship. He had no children.[1]

John Twistleton of Ledstone died 1591. He had wife, Elizabeth, "sister Prince", and sons, Robert, the eldest; Henry, who had a lease at Sherburne, York, and died 1593, having wife Agnes; and Matthew, who had daughter Ellen. Another legatee was Alice Webster, Henry Leake being one of the witnesses. His widow, Elizabeth, died in 1595. She named her brother-in-law, Matthew Twistleton, sons, Robert, Henry and Matthew, and also mentions a Christopher, Ellen and Elizabeth Twistleton. One of the witnesses was Henry Lake.[2] Ledstone is four miles northwest of Pontefract, which brings it quite near to Leeds and Potter Newton.

Richard Twistleton of Whitley, about four miles north of Ledstone, directed that he be buried at Kellington, a village midway between Ledstone and Whitley. His wife was Alice Prince; he had sister Isabel, and one who married Lake (Leake), but no children. Among those to whom he made bequests were Alice, Thomas and Margaret Webster, William Prince, and the five children of John Twistleton. Richard Hall was a supervisor. His will was probated July 3, 1581.[3]

To the above family of Ledstone belonged Robert Twistleton, of Newlands House, Parish of Horton, county York. This is no doubt Horton All Saints, an ecclesiastical district now within the county and borough of Bradford. Robert had wife Emmott, and son John. Robert was deceased when, on November 27, 1589, John, the son, died. An Inquisition Post Mortem taken at York Castle April 26, 1602, declared that the said John Twistleton [4]

[2] The will of John Twistleton was probated May 3, 1591; that of his widow, Elizabeth, was dated May 8, and proved August 1, 1595. Henry Twistleton of Sherburne died intestate in March, 1593.

Horton aforesaid, then in the tenure of the aforesaid John Twisleton and Emmot Twisleton, widow, mother of the aforesaid John Twisleton, that is to say, of 2 parts of the premises in possession, and of the third part of the premises in reversion after the death of the aforesaid Emmot, tenant of the said third part during the term of her life.

And the said John Twisleton, so being seised, died so thereof seised, 27 November 31 Elizabeth [1589].

And further the jurors aforesaid say on their oath that Robert Twisleton is son and next heir of the aforesaid John Twisleton and of the age of 15 years on 3 December last past. And that the aforesaid Emmott Twisleton late wife of Robert Twisleton, father of the aforesaid John Twisleton, is surviving and in full life, being at Horton aforesaid, and took the rents and profits of one third part of the aforesaid messuage, etc, from the time of the death of the aforesaid John Twisleton, until the taking of this inquisition. And that Elizabeth late wife of the aforesaid John Twisleton is surviving and in full life, being at Clapham, co. York, which said Elizabeth married a certain Thomas Procter, clerk, which said Thomas Procter and Elizabeth as in the right of the said Elizabeth took the rents and profits of 2 parts of the premises from the time of the death of the aforesaid John Twisleton, until the taking of this inquisition.

Evidently all of these Twistleton families were related in some degree, but the dates are so early, and documentary evidence so meagre for this period, that we can only indicate these families, as we have endeavored to do, and leave it, hoping that future investigations may yield more definite data by which these people may be placed in proper relationship. At present, we are certain of only two children of John Thistillon, the elder, of Stamford.

CHILDREN OF JOHN THISTILLON, THE ELDER:

1. John Thistillton, the younger, died before 1505.
2. (Agnes?) Thistillton, married Thomas (or William) Williams.[1] Issue: David, George and Henry. Thomas Williams left a will dated November 11, 1505.

John Thistillton, the younger, of Stamford, died before

1505. He had, besides the property in Stamford which had been his father's, lands in Potter Newton, in the borough of Leeds, and elsewhere in Yorkshire, as well as in various other counties, all of which we find in the possession of his son, John Twistleton of London. On July 4, 1497, he granted to John Taylor and others, wardens of the parish church of St. Martin the Bishop, a home and garden "beyond the bridge in Stamford, to be held in trust to the sole and particular use of Thomas and Agnes Williams and their children."

> Grant by John Thistillton of Stamford, the younger, husbandman, to John Taylior, clerk, William Racliff, and Thomas Bewscher, of a cottage and garden in the parish of St. Martin the bishop, beyond the bridge, at the east end of the town, to the use of William Willyames in tail, with the remainders in tail, to David, George and Henry Williames, successively, and, in fee, to Agnes wife of the aforesaid (sic) Thomas Williams; the grantees to pay 3s. 4d. yearly to wardens of the parish church of St. Martin aforesaid. Stamford, 4 July, 12 Henry VII. 1497.[1]

CHILDREN OF JOHN THISTILLTON, THE YOUNGER:

1. John Thistillton (Twistleton) of London, died March 28, 1526; married 1st, Anne; 2nd, Margaret; 3rd, Alice, daughter of ——— Latham, of Latham Hall, county Essex.
2. (Daughter), married ——— Ashley, and had issue, Thomas and Piers Ashley.
3. William Twistleton, a priest.

John Thistillton, son of John Thistillton, the younger, was of Stamford, 1505-06, but later removed to London. Before leaving Stamford, he reaffirmed to the trustees of the church the grant to the Williams family originally made by his father, of the cottage in Stamford.[2]

> Release by John Thystilthon of Stamford, son and heir of John Thistillthon, late of the same, husbandman, to John Taylyor, clerk, Thomas Bewscher, Thomas Bosswell, and Corbye, of all his right in a messuage in Stamford, in the parish of St. Martin, late All Hallows, beyond the bridge,[1] within the liberty of the abbot of Peterborough, adjoining the water called "Wylland"; to hold to the use of Thomas Williams, and in fulfilment of the said Thomas last will. 11 November, 21 Henry VII. A.D. 1505 (1506).

John Thistillthon, or Twistleton, as the name from now on is spelled, was a goldsmith, and soon became a prominent and wealthy citizen of London. He was for many years an alderman of the city. His first wife was Margaret, the second was named Anne, and the third was Alice Latham, daughter of ——— Latham, of Latham Hall, county Essex, and widow of Richard Connell. He died in London and was buried at St. Matthews, Friday Street, on March 28, 1526, leaving his widow, Alice, two sons, Christopher and John, and a daughter, Elizabeth, wife of Ralph Latham, a goldsmith of London, and grandson, Edmund Latham. His widow, Alice, of St. Matthew, Friday Street, London, died in 1540, her will being dated January 31 and proved March 7, of that year. She bequeathed all of her property to her own relatives.[2]

John Twistleton had a great deal of property, all of which he devised to his eldest son, Christopher. These lands, described in an Inquisition taken after his death, lay in Potter Newton, in the borough of Leeds, Berley (Barley) of the parish of Brayton, Aldingfleet and Carlton, all in county York; Waterton near Stamford, Garthrope, Luthyngton, Westwode and Amcotts in the Isle of Axholme, county Lincoln, and also lands in counties Kent and Nottingham.

In the visitation of Yorkshire, 1612, the father of John Twistleton, of London, is designated as of Potter Newton, county York. Potter Newton is an ecclesiastical district of Leeds. Barley lies a little over a mile southwest of Selby, and some eighteen or twenty miles east of Leeds. The Isle of Axholme is a flat, marshy tract, eighteen miles long and about five miles broad, in the extreme northwest of Lincolnshire, encircled by the rivers Trent, Don, Torne and Idle. The Trent, flowing northward to its junction with the Humber, is its eastern boundary, while the Idle on the west forms the boundary between the counties of York and Lincoln.[1] His Nottingham estates were, for the most part, in the northern section of the county, where it bounds upon the Isle of Axholme and other parts of western Lincolnshire.

John Twistleton died in London March 28, 1526, leaving a will dated November 8, 1525.

On the 14th of May, 1526, shortly after his death and the will having been entered for probate, an inquisition post mortem was instituted in order to clear his title to these various tracts of land. One was held at East Retford, county Nottingham, on September 20, 1527, and to this document a copy of the will is attached. The next was taken in Lincolnshire, at Lincoln Castle.

lordships, manors, lands etc. shall remain to the aforesaid Rauf Lathum, goldsmith and to the heirs of his body lawfully begotten [in default] to Thomas Lathum his brother and his heirs and assigns for ever

And I will the same Christopher Twyselton and John Twyselton shall be in the keeping of Rauffe Lathum, goldsmith, Thomas Lathum his brother and Henry Averell, goldsmith, during the nonage of the same Christopher and John.

[Condition if the said lordships etc, descend to Thomas Asheley, Piers Asheley, Rauf Lathum or Thomas Lathum]. I will by this my last will that all my forenamed manors etc, shall be in the rule of Rauf Lathum, Henry Averey goldsmiths of London, and Thomas Lathum, gentleman, to preserve all the rents, issue, etc. unto the tyme my son Christopher come to his lawful age of 24 years, the said annuity of £20, and 500 marks to John my son reserved. etc. etc. [as in will]

And afterwards the aforesaid John Twyselton died, and the aforesaid Edmund Ley, Ralph Rowlett, John Polterton, John Frend, William Mery and William Cokkes survived him, and were and now are seised in the aforesaid manors etc; to the uses contained in the said last will.

And the jurors say that the manor of Scaftworth etc, with the appurtenances in Scaftworth are held of Thomas Archbishop of York, as of his lordship of Scroby, co. Nott., by fealty, rent of 6s. and suit of court of the same manor of Scroby from three weeks in three weeks for all service. And that the said manor, messuages etc. in Scafteworth are worth by the year 55s. 8d. And that 14 messuages 8 cottages, 160 acres of land, 20 acres of meadow, and 50 acres of moor specified in the recovery aforesaid, with the appurtenances in Clareboroughe, Wellome and Gryneley are held of the Abbott of St. Peters Westminster, of his lordship of Hoswoldebek Soke, in the county aforesaid, by fealty, rent of 8s. 8d. and suit of court of the same manor or lordship of Hoswoldebeke Soke from three weeks in three weeks, for all service. And that the same messuages etc. are worth £4. 2s. And that 6 messuages, 2 cottages, 60 acres of land, 10 acres of meadow, and 100 acres of moor of the tenements aforesaid, in the recovery aforesaid specified, in Boughton Walesby are held of John Markham, knight as of his manor of Mapylbek by fealty, rent of 5s. 8d. and suit of court of the same manor from three weeks in three weeks, for all services, and that the same messauges, etc., are worth by the year 27s. 8d.

They say also that the aforesaid John Twyselton died 28 March 18 Henry VIII. And that Christopher Twyselton is son and next heir of the said John Twyselton, and was of the age at the time [death] of John his father, of 6 years.

INQUISITION POST MORTEM, 1527.

Writ,[1] dated at Westminster 14 May 19 Henry VIII, directed to the escheator in co. Lincoln, to enquire etc. concerning the lands & tenements, etc., which John Twyselton, citizen and goldsmith of London, deceased, held in chief etc. the day on which he died.

Inquisition taken at Lincoln Castle, 20 January 19 Henry VIII. before John Sayntpoll, esquire, escheator of the lord the King in co. Lincoln, by virtue of a writ of the said lord the King, after the death of John Twyselton, citizen and goldsmith of London, directed to the same escheator, and sewn to this inquisition, by the oath of William Harby, esquire, Thomas Lettyn, Michael Beche, William Clerk, William Hosborne, Robert Smyth, Thomas Kee, Hugh Burdehed, Thomas Edney[?] John Meddilbrok[?] Thomas Wattson, Roger Hawne and John ——— who say on their oath that some time before the death of the aforesaid John Twyselton in the said writ named, a certain Richard Carew Knight, Roger Coplaye, esquire and Richard Devenysshe esquire, were seised of and in the manor of Waterton, and 14 messuages, 10 cottages, 300 acres of land, 50 acres of meadow, 200 acres of pasture, 20 acres of wood, and 100 acres of moor with the appurtenances in Waterton, Luddington, Garethorpe, Westwood, and Amcoptis, co. Lincoln, and so thereof seised the aforesaid John Twyselton and a certain Edmund Ley, Ralph Rowlett, John Palterton, John Frend, William Mery and William Cokkes impleaded the aforesaid Richard Carewe, knight, Roger Copley and Richard Devenysshe of the aforesaid manor etc, by writ of the said lord the King of ingress upon disseisin in 'le post processum etc.' so that the said John Twyselton, etc., recovered their seisin of the said manor etc. against the aforesaid Richard Carewe etc, as by the record of Trinity and Hillary terms 11 Henry VIII, more fully appears, by pretext of which recovery the said John Twyselton etc., afterwards, 1 August 11 Henry VIII entered into the aforesaid manor, etc., and so thereof were seised, to the use of the said John Twyselton his heirs and assigns, for the performing of the last will of the same John Twyselton. And so thereof being seised the same John Twyselton made and declared his last will concerning the aforesaid manor, etc. as follows:—[For will see P.C.C., and Chan. Inq. p.m. Ser. II, Vol. 46, No. 18].[1]

And afterwards the aforesaid John Twyselton died, and the aforesaid feoffees survived him, and were and now are seised of the aforesaid manor, etc. in their demesne as of fee, to the same uses contained in the said last will.

And the jurors aforesaid say that the aforesaid manor of Waterton with the appurtenances and the aforesaid messuages etc. except 35 acres of meadow and pasture in Westwode and Garthorpe, are held of William Plumpton and Isabella his wife as in right of the said Isabel, as of their manor of Waterton, by fealty and rent of 6s, and 1 pound of pepper by the year for all services. And that the aforesaid 35 acres etc in Westwode and Garthorpe are held of Edward Earl of Derby, in socage, as of his manor of Epworth in the Isle of Axholme, by fealty and rent of ¾d. by the year for all services. And the jurors aforesaid say that the aforesaid manor of Waterton, and the aforesaid messuages etc. except the before excepted, are worth in all issues beyond reprises, by the year, £3. 5s, and that the aforesaid 35 acres of land etc. in Westwode and Garthorpe, parcel of the premises are worth by the year in all issues beyond reprises 28s. 6d.

And the jurors aforesaid say also that the aforesaid John Twyselton died 8[?28] March 18 Henry VIII; and that Christopher Twyselton is son and next heir of the said John Twyselton and was of the age of 6 years and more at the time of the death of his father the said John.

Inquisition Post Mortem, 1528.

Writ.[2] Henry, by the grace of God, King of England and France, etc. to his Treasurer and Barons of the Exchequer, greeting—We, willing to be certified of the truth of the matter upon a certain inquisition lately taken before John Mounson late our escheator in co. Lincoln, by virtue of his office, after the death of John Twyselton of London, citizen, and returned before you in our said Exchequer as is said, command you to send the inquisition aforesaid, with all things touching it, and this writ, to us in our Chancery, under the seal of the Exchequer aforesaid, distinctly and openly without delay, etc. that we may cause to be done therein that which of right and according to our realm of England should be done. Witness we ourselves at Westminster 12 November, in the 19th year of our reign.

Inquisition taken at Hospital Street, co. Lincoln, 24 October 19 Henry VIII, before John Mounson, esquire, escheater of the said lord the King in the country aforesaid by virtue of his office after the death of John Twyselton of London, citizen, by the oath of Thomas Thrope, William Stokam, Robert Holme, John Robinson, Thomas Spaldyng, Richard Osgerby, Robert Lammyng, Richard Fraunces, Robert Maknall, William Wigan, William Gryges, Robert Spenser, who say on their oath that the aforesaid John Twyselton was seised of his manor of Waterton with the appurtenances in co. Lincoln, and also of 18 acres of land, and meadow, with the appurtenances in Westwode, and 17 acres of land and meadow in Garthorp in the county aforesaid, and so seised died seised thereof

And the jurors also say that the aforesaid manor of Waterton and other the premises in Westwode and Garthorpe are held of the lord the King, by reason of the minority of Edward Earl of Derby, now under age, and in the custody of the said lord the King as of his manor of Epworth in the Isle of Axholme co. Lincoln, by knight service and is worth by the year beyond reprises £4, 17s.

And further the jurors say that the aforesaid John Twyselton died 28 March 18 Henry VIII, and that Christopher Twyselton is son and next heir of the said John Twyselton and was of the age of 6 years at the time of the death of the aforesaid John his father.

Christopher being the eldest son and heir, was bequeathed the entire estate, but in the event of his death and leaving no issue, it was all to go to the younger son, John, or, if he died likewise, then it was to go to his daughter, Elizabeth, wife of Ralph Latham, a goldsmith of London, and the latter, with his brother Thomas, were named as guardians of John's two little boys.

In Dugdale's Visitation of Yorkshire, 1612, this John Twistleton of London, was the son of John Twistleton of Potter Newton and Barley, Parish of Brayton, county York.

CHILDREN OF JOHN TWISTLETON:

1. Elizabeth Twistleton, married Ralph Latham, brother of Thomas Latham, goldsmith of London. He may have been her cousin. They had son, Edmund Latham.
2. Christopher Twistleton, born circa 1518-19; died December 10, 1579; married Ann Beare.
3. John Twistleton, the younger son. Practically nothing is known of him. He, with his brother, was to be in the keeping of his brother-in-law, Ralph Latham, of London, and in 1529 was still residing in that city. From records which have been examined, evidence points strongly to this son of John Twistleton, of London, as the ancestor of the Twistletons of Amcotts, Isle of Axholme, co. Lincoln.

Christopher Twistleton, eldest son and heir of John Twistleton and perhaps second wife, Anne ————, was born about 1518-19, as he was about six years old when the inquisitions post mortem were taken upon his father's estate. His wife was Ann Beare. He was of Barley and Carleton, county York, and died December 10, 1579. He made a will dated January 17, 1578-79, in which he makes certain bequests to his wife and son George, and three sons-in-law, William Wilson, Richard Logan and Thomas Leake, which were to be in full satisfaction of that which they could claim as their wives' portions. This document was proved on February 12, 1579-80, by his widow, Anne, who had been named executrix.[1] There was an inquisition post mortem held October 25, 1580, at York Castle, and from this we learn that he had a younger son, Brian, to whom he had given by charter on July 29, 1578, an annuity of £20 to be levied out of the Barley estate.

INQUISITION POST MORTEM, 1580.

Writ.[2] dated at Westminster, 26 January, 22 Elizabeth, directed to the escheator in co. York, to enquire what lands and tenements Christopher Twistleton, esquire, held in chief, etc, the day on which he died, etc.

Inquisition taken at York Castle, 25 October 22 Elizabeth, before Francis Power, esquire, escheator of the said lady the Queen in co. York, by virtue of a writ of the said lady the Queen directed to the same escheator, and annexed to this inquisition, to enquire after the death of Christopher Twysselton, esquire, deceased, by the oath of John Tyndall, esquire, John Mearynge, Roger Thomlynson, William Crake, Thomas Yoward, Brian Roclyff, Edward Newby, gentleman, Edmund Hayfurthe, George Freman, Nicholas Headley, Michael Thomson, Robert Lowson, William Lowson, George Chapman, Henry Wilson, Thomas Walton and Brian Towse, yeoman, who say on their oath that the aforesaid Christopher Twyselton, some time before his death was seised of the manor of Barley, co. York, and of 40 messuages, 20 cottages, 40 gardens, 40 tofts, 40 orchards, one windmill, 40 acres of arable land, 80 acres of pasture, 200 acres of meadow, 40 acres of wood, 40 acres of moor and of free fishery in the waters of the Ouse, and of 53s. 4d. rent in Barley. Also of and in 20 acres of pasture, and 40 acres of wood in Carleton, co. York.

And further the jurors aforesaid say that the aforesaid Christopher Twyselton so being seised, by his charter bearing date 29 July 20 Elizabeth, granted to a certain Brian Twyselton his son, one annuity of £20 out of the aforesaid manor of Barley, and all other his messuages etc. in cos. York and Nottingham, whereof the aforesaid Christopher was sole seised in his proper right, to have to hold and to take the aforesaid annuity, during the natural life of the aforesaid Brian.

And afterwards the aforesaid Christopher so being seised of the aforesaid manor of Barley etc, a fine was levied between certain Edmund Lathom and others, plaintiffs, and the aforesaid Christopher Twyselton, deforciant, among other things, of the aforesaid manor of Barley, and of the aforesaid messuages etc. in Barley and Carleton, to the use of the aforesaid Christopher Twyselton for term of his life, and after his decease to the use of George Twyselton, son and heir apparent of the aforesaid Christopher Twyselton and his issue males and for default of such issue then to the use of the aforesaid Brian Twyselton and his issue males, and for default to the use of the aforesaid Christopher Twyselton for ever, as by a certain indenture, dated 30 July 20 Elizabeth between the aforesaid Christopher Twyselton on the one part, and the aforesaid Edmund Laythom and a certain John Alred on the other part more fully appears.

And afterwards, that the aforesaid Christopher Twyselton so of the aforesaid manor etc, being seised for the term of his life, the remainder thereof being in form aforesaid, died 10 December 22 Elizabeth. And that the aforesaid George Twyselton is and at the time of the death of the aforesaid Christopher, was his son and next heir, and that the aforesaid George Twyselton is at the time of the taking of this inquisition 23 years and more.

And the jurors aforesaid on their oath further say that the aforesaid manor of Barley, and that the aforesaid messuages, etc. in Barley, are held of ——— Dawney, widow, as of her manor of Cowyck in socage, that is to say, by fealty, and rent of 11s. and suit of court of the manor of Cowyck for all services and demands. And that the aforesaid manor of Barley, and the aforesaid messuages etc. in Barley are worth by the year, £20. And that the aforesaid 20 acres of pasture and 40 acres of wood etc. in Carleton aforesaid are held of Brian Stappleton, esquire, as of his manor of Carleton in socage, that is to say, by fealty and rent of 9s. for all services and demands, and that they are worth by the year, 20s.

CHILDREN OF CHRISTOPHER TWISTLETON AND ANN BEARE:

1. George Twistleton, of Barley, born 1557, eldest son and heir; was aged 23 in 1580; married 1st, Ann, daughter of Thomas Alured, of Charter house, Kingston-upon-Hull; died 1586, Administration letters dated October 21, 1586;[1] married 2nd, Alice, widow of Hurst Courtney, and sister of Adam Bingham. She died in 1617.[2] His will, dated June 19, and proved December 14, 1611, names his wife, Alice, and sons, Christopher, the eldest, John, George, Bryan, a daughter, wife of George Lawson, and daughter, wife of ——— Beverley. He also mentions nephews, Brian, George, William, Henry,[3] Ralph and Arthur Twistleton, who were children of his brother Bryan, and nephew, Henry Alured. He had three messuages in Kingston-upon-Hull.

CHILDREN OF GEORGE TWISTLETON AND ANN ALURED:

i. Christopher Twistleton of Barley; mar. Alice Hazelwood,[4] of Northants. He died in 1622, leaving a son, George, who was aged 7 in 1612, and names

[2] In her will, dated March 30, 1616, and proved October 8, 1617, Alice Twistleton, widow of George, desired to be buried in the quire of Brayton Church next to her husband, and made a bequest to her brother, Adam Bingham, Gentleman. (York District Probate Registry, Volume 34, fol. 719.)

[3] There was a Henry Twistleton of Kingston-upon-Hull, who married Margaret Rosse(?). His will of November 6, 1608, proved July 26, 1609, names children William, George, Joshua, Margaret and Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Hodgson of Yorke, and brothers-in-law, George and Brian Rosse. in his will brothers, John and George, sisters, Ann, wife of George Lowson, and Mary, wife of Vincent Beverley.[1] It was this Christopher Twistleton who who signed the Visitation of Yorkshire, 1612.

ii. John Twistleton.
iii. Bryan Twistleton.
iv. George Twistleton.
v. Ann Twistleton, married George Lowson.
vi. Mary Twistleton, married Vincent Beverley.

2. Bryan Twistleton. From his father, he received by charter in 1578, a messuage and ten acres of land in York and Nottingham.[2]

3. Elizabeth Twistleton.
4. Ann Twistleton. Sons-in-law { William Wilson, Richard Logan, Thomas Leake.
5. Daughter.

John Twistleton, born circa 1521, son of John Twistleton, citizen and alderman of London, in all probability by second wife, Anne, was a younger son, so little is noted of him in the Visitations. All of the father's property was entailed on the eldest son, Christopher, a lad six years of age when their father died, John being about four. By his father's will, he was placed in the care of his brother-in-law, Ralph Latham, and was living with his guardian in London, 1529.

There was a family of Twistleton living in Amcotts, Isle of Axholme, during the last half of the sixteenth and the first half of the seventeenth centuries, who were closely related to the Potter Newton and Barley family. It will be recalled that in the Inquisition taken at Lincoln 1527, John Twistleton of London died seized of and in the manor of Waterton, and 14 messuages, 10 cottages, 300 acres of land, 50 acres of meadow, 200 acres of pasture, 20 acres of wood, 100 acres of moor with appurtenances in Waterton, Luddington, Garethorpe, Westwood and Amcoptis (Amcotts), county Lincoln.

In 1561, a Christopher Twistleton, Esquire, was defendant in a suit entered by George Fyssher, which involved one messuage, one cottage, one toft, one garden, one orchard, 200 acres of land, 100 acres of meadow, 100 acres of pasture, 10 acres of wood, and 100 acres of turbary,[3] in Luddington, Watterton and Hamscotte (Amcotts). Also the fourth part of the manor of Watterton, which the defendant acknowledged the said tenements and fourth part to be the right of the said George, > as those which the same George has of the gift of the aforesaid Christopher And those he remised and quitclaimed for himself and his heirs, to the aforesaid George and his heirs forever. And for this acknowledgment, remission quitclaim [etc] the same George granted to the aforesaid Christopher, the aforesaid tenements and fourth part. To have and to hold to the same Christopher for the term of one week. And after the end of that term the aforesaid tenements and fourth part shall remain entire to Robert Morton, esquire, and Ann his wife, and the heirs of their bodies begotten. To hold of the chief lords of that fee by the services which to the aforesaid tenements pertain for ever. And if it happen that the same Robert and Ann die without heir of their bodies begotten then after the decease of the said Robert and Ann the aforesaid tenements and fourth part shall remain entire to the right heirs of the said Robert. To hold of the chief lords of that fee by the services which to the aforesaid tenements pertain.[1]

The names of George Fisher, and Robert Morton and wife Ann, do not appear in any of the records at hand pertaining to the early members of this family. This Christopher Twistleton, Esquire, was not the son of John Twistleton of London, as we find a George and Christopher Twistleton in Amcotts on the Parish Register of Althorpe, which begins in 1599, so they had evidently been in this village some years before that. Amcotts is in Althorpe parish, Isle of Axholme, Lincolnshire. Neither this George nor Christopher seem to fit into the Barley family. This family was contemporary with that of Barley, but the dates, marriages, and names of children are not the same as those of the Barley Twistletons living at the same time. This fact, therefore, suggests the strong possibility that this Amcotts family were descendants of John, the younger brother of Christopher of Barley, and the Christopher Twistleton, Esquire, the defendant, and George Fisher, and Robert Morton or wife Ann were descended from John Twistleton, Junior, son of John Twistleton, citizen of London.

[1] Feet of Fines, Lincoln, Easter 2, Elizabeth (1561).

Christopher Twistleton of Amcotts had wife, Katherine, who was buried August 13, 1608, and on November 22, 1609, he married Alice Stevenson, and she was buried May 1, 1614. His third wife was Ann Tomlinson, whom he married October 30, 1614, and who was buried October 9, 1620.

3. Mary Twistleton, baptized December 9, 1604.

CHILD OF CHRISTOPHER TWISTLETON AND 3RD WIFE, ANN TOMLINSON:

4. Christopher Twistleton, baptized November 10, 1618.

There was a George Twistleton of Amcotts buried at Althorpe December 27, 1612, and an Esbell Twistleton of same buried May 23, 1613. These two may have been the parents of the above Christopher.[1]

MARY TWISTLETON, who became the second wife of Sir William Sedgwick, may well have been a granddaughter of John Twistleton, Citizen and Alderman of London, and daughter of his youngest son, John. She was born about 1550-1555, being much younger than her husband, as he was at least fifty-three years of age when they were married, October 3, 1580. This marriage took place at Redbourne, which lies about fifteen miles to the southeastward from Amcotts, not far from South Kelsey.

Sir William Sedgwick was buried at Goxhill, of which parish

George Page, born circa 1536, was of Goxhill, Yarborough Wapentake, Lincolnshire, as early as 1573, but he had evidently been married and had at least three children born before settling there, as we find no evidence that any family of that name was in the village prior to 1573.[1] Very little information is obtainable on this surname. The Page families of northern Lincolnshire were in very humble circumstances, owning little or no property, hence no wills, deeds or inquisitions are on record to yield important clues, but all bearing the name were apparently regular and acceptable church members, so it is from the parish registers that we secure such data as renders it possible to trace the Page family of Goxhill, the one in which we are especially interested.

The first of the name we find in Goxhill is the above George (Gregoris) Page, who had two children baptized in the parish church, Richard, on February 4, 1573-74, and Esbel, on June 15, 1577. Agnes, the wife of George Page, was buried March 5, 1577-78, and on October 14, 1578, he was married to Dorithie Bowells. Robert, James and John Page, sons of George Page, were all living in Goxhill when their children were born between 1588 and 1610. George and Dorithie had a daughter, Margaret, and a son, William, both baptized at Goxhill. George Page was buried in Goxhill August 6, 1601.

[1] There was a John Page at Grasby as early as 1522-1524, whose name appears on the Lay Subsidy Roll of Yarborough Wapentake for those years. He was no doubt the father of John Page of South Ferriby, whose mother was buried there March 2, 1543. John Page of South Ferriby married, February 3, 1549, Alice, or Alyson, Toft. The South Ferriby Parish Register records "William" Page and Alice Toft, married February 3, 1549, but all evidence indicates that the bridegroom was John, not William. Their children were James, of South Ferriby; Janet; John, of Barnetby; William, of West Halton; and Robert. John Page died 1558, leaving wife Alyson, and the above children, Roger Toft being one of the witnesses to his will.

1. ROBERT PAGE, born circa 1558; buried in Goxhill, June 29, 1623; married URSULA ————; buried April 6, 1604.
2. James Page, married January 24, 1590-91, Cecile Stallingboro. He died before November 24, 1618, when as "Cysele Page, widow", she married Thomas Hoyes. James' death is not recorded. They had the following children, all baptized at Goxhill: George, January 13, 1592-93; James, February 13, 1593-94; Agnes, October 20, 1596; Hector,[1] May 1, 1599; Elizabeth, August 21, 1602; Jone, December 28, 1605; Marye, August 6, 1609.
3. John Page, had issue: George, baptized April 4, 1593; Joan, baptized February 19, 1594-95; Richard, baptized March 12, 1597-98; and Mary, baptized May 10, 1601.
4. Richard Page, baptized at Goxhill, February 4, 1573-74.
5. Esbel Page, baptized at Goxhill, June 15, 1577; buried March 17, 1588-89.

CHILDREN OF GEORGE PAGE AND 2ND WIFE, DOROTHY BOWELLS:

6. Margaret Page, baptized at Goxhill, May 28, 1580.
7. William Page, baptized at Goxhill, May 20, 1582.

ROBERT PAGE of Goxhill, born circa 1558, eldest son of George and Agnes Page, had wife Ursula, but unfortunately the record of their marriage has not been located. Six of their eight children were baptized by John Holland, Vicar of Goxhill church, namely, George, William, Hector, James, Robert and Chrystyne; but two others, Thomas, the eldest, and Henry, may have been born and baptized while the family were temporarily residing in another village. Ursula was buried April 6, 1604, and Robert, as "laborer", on June 29, 1623. Both were interred in the Goxhill churchyard.

CHILDREN OF ROBERT AND URSULA PAGE:

1. Thomas Page, born circa 1580;[2] buried October 21, 1641; married at Goxhill, November 2, 1600, Isabella Scott, who was buried January 22, 1609-10. No issue. Married 2nd, September 19, 1610, Agnes Marshall; buried October 20, 1641.

[1] A Hector Page of Ulceby, who had a younger brother Thomas, married January 27, 1576-77, Alis (Alice) Truman. He died 1583, leaving no issue. (Ulceby Records.)

[2] Robert Page of East Halton had a son Thomas, baptized there August 12, 1581. (East Halton Parish Register.)

CHILDREN OF THOMAS PAGE AND AGNES MARSHALL:

i. Elizabeth Page, bap. Dec. 8, 1610; bur. Jan. 27, 1610-11.
ii. Thomas Page, bap. Nov. 28, 1611; bur. Dec. 22, 1611.
iii. Margaret Page, bap. Jan. 20, 1612-13; bur. Feb. 5, 1612-13.
iv. Ursullay Page, bap. Sept. 29, 1614; bur. Dec. 10, 1614.
v. Barbara Page, bap. Feb. 16, 1616-17.

2. George Page, baptized at Goxhill, April 21, 1588; buried February 26, 1653-54.
3. WILLIAM PAGE, baptized March 4, 1591-92; married June 19,[1] 1625, AGNES (ANNE) TACKHILL, baptized October 13, 1599.
4. Hector Page, baptized April 5, 1595.
5. James Page, baptized July 25, 1596; married and had a son, Hector, baptized February 19, 1624-25, who died November 2, 1628; married 2nd, November 26, 1625, Jane Williamson. He died before March 26, 1647, on which date, Jane, his widow, was buried.

CHILDREN OF JAMES PAGE AND JANE WILLIAMSON:

i. Ursula Page, bap. July 29, bur. July 31, 1627.
ii. Jone Page, bap. Nov. 16, 1628.
iii. Margaret Page, bap. Jan. 4, 1632-33.
iv. Robert Page, bap. Feb. 7, 1635-36; bur. Apr. 1, 1639.
v. Ursullay Page, bap. June 7, 1640; bur. Mar. 21, 1644-45.

6. Henry Page, born circa 1598; buried June 10, 1634; married November 8, 1618, Elizabeth Doune; buried April 29, 1628.

CHILDREN OF HENRY PAGE AND ELIZABETH DOUNE:

i. Elizabeth Page, bap. May 15, 1619.
ii. Ursula Page, bap. Apr. 20, 1628; bur. July 18, 1634.

7. Robert Page, baptized February 18, buried March 14, 1600-01.
8. Chrystyne Page, baptized March 18, 1603-04.

WILLIAM PAGE, born at Goxhill, and baptized there on March 4, 1591-92, son of Robert and Ursula Page, married June 19, 1625, Agnes (Anne) Tackhill, baptized October 13, 1599, daughter of William and Ellen Tackhill of Goxhill. The names Agnes and Annes, or Anne, were interchangeable, so on the Goxhill church register, she appears as both Agnes and Anne. We do not have the date of William's death, but an Agnes Page, "widow", was buried January 28, 1646-47. They had six children baptized at Goxhill.

CHILDREN OF WILLIAM PAGE AND AGNES TACKHILL:

1. ROBERT PAGE, baptized April 4, 1626; buried June 28, 1683; married 1st, April 8, 1656, Jane Munday; buried December 11, 1656; married 2nd, February 19, 1656-57, ANNE MORLEY; buried December 27, 1682.

[1] The date in the Parish Register is June 19, 1625, but the Transcript gives it May 28, 1625.

2. Helen Page, baptized June 1, 1628.
3. Ursullah Page, baptized March 11, 1631-32; buried July 26, 1634.
4. Elizabeth Page, baptized August 9, 1635; buried April 29, 1644.
5. William Page, baptized August 18, buried August 20, 1639.
6. Henry Page, baptized March 21, 1640-41; buried March 2, 1642-43.

ROBERT PAGE, eldest child of William Page and wife, Agnes (Anne) Tackhill, was born in Goxhill and baptized in the parish church by the Rev. John Holland, April 4, 1626. He married April 8, 1656, Jane Munday, who was buried on December 11, 1656, the same day their infant daughter, Jane, was baptized. Two months later, February 19, 1656-57, he married Anne Morley. She was buried December 27, 1682, and Robert Page on June 28, 1683, both being interred in the Goxhill churchyard.

CHILDREN OF ROBERT PAGE AND ANNE MORLEY:

1. Anne Page, baptized December 3, 1660; married October 23, 1683, John Hudlas.
2. ROBERT PAGE, baptized February 2, 1663-64; buried April 28, 1698; married May 8, 1694, ANNE RICHARDSON, baptized February 28, 1668-69, daughter of David and Martha Harper Richardson.

ROBERT PAGE, only son of Robert and Anne Morley Page, was baptized at Goxhill, February 2, 1663-64. He married on May 8, 1694, Anne, baptized February 28, 1668-69, daughter of David Richardson and Martha Harper of Goxhill. Their only child, Anne, was baptized February 17, 1694-95. Robert Page was buried April 28, 1698.

CHILD OF ROBERT PAGE AND ANNE RICHARDSON:

1. ANNE PAGE, baptized at Goxhill, February 17, 1694-95; buried at Barrow, December 16, 1732; married at St. Peter's Church, Barton, July 25, 1715, LAWRENCE JOHNSON, baptized August 17, 1690; buried November 5, 1737.

TACKHILL.[1]

——— Tackhill (Tackell, Takel, Tackyll) was of South Ferriby, Lindsey, Lincolnshire. His wife may have been Agnes, and he might have died before January 23, 1557-58, on which date an Agnes Tackyll married Robert Grymsbie. He had at least one son, William, and a daughter, Alice. While the marriage and burial records of South Ferriby begin in 1539 and 1538 respectively, the baptisms for these early years are lost or undecipherable, the available ones not starting until 1563.

Children of ——— Tackhill:

1. Alyce Tackhill, born circa 1518-1522; married at South Ferriby, April 11, 1540, Thomas Gylson.
2. William Tackhill, born circa 1524; buried September 18, 1592; married at South Ferriby, November 20, 1547, Agnes Gybbon.

William Tackhill, born about 1524, in all probability in South Ferriby, was married there, November 20, 1547, to Agnes Gybbon. He removed to Goxhill, where he died September 18, 1592. He had four sons and two daughters, who were no doubt born in either South Ferriby or Goxhill, there being no very early baptisms of Goxhill Parish in existence. William Tackhill may have been married twice.

Children of William Tackhill and (Agnes Gybbon?):

1. George Tackhill, born circa 1555; married 1st, November 23, 1582-83, Elizabeth Archard, who was buried November 27, 1594; married 2nd, Helen ———, and died in 1612. Letters of administration on his estate were issued April 21, 1612, an account of the estate being rendered in May of that year.

Children of George and Elizabeth Archard Tackhill:

i. William Tackhill, bap. May 29, 1588; was aged 24 in 1612.
ii. Isabel Tackhill, bur. May 17, 1588.
iii. Elizabeth Tackhill, born 1589; aged 23 in 1612.

Children of George and Helen Tackhill:

iv. George Tackhill, bap. Mar. 21, 1595-96; bur. Mar. 29, 1596.
v. Richard Tackhill, bap. June 28, 1597; aged 14 in 1612.
vi. John Tackhill, bap. July 9, 1600; bur. Apr. 11, 1601.
vii. Henry Tackhill, bap. Apr. 5; bur. May 13, 1602.
viii. Thomas Tackhill, bap. May 10, 1604; aged 8 in 1612.
ix. Alice Tackhill, born 1610, aged 2 in 1612.

2. John Tackhill, Webster, married July 20, 1583, Isabella Beamon. He was churchwarden of Goxhill 1606, and buried July 14, 1619.

Children of John Tackhill and Isabella Beamon:

i. Alce Tackhill, bur. Mar. 23, 1592-93.
ii. Ellen Tackhill, bur. Mar. 26, 1593.
iii. John Tackhill, bap. Nov. 30, bur. Dec. 28, 1593.
iv. Ellen Tackhill, bap. } May 29, 1595.
v. Alice Tackhill, bap. }
vi. William Tackhill, bap. May 26, 1599; mar. May 30, 1625, Margaret Codd. Their marriage allegation states that he was about 26, and the bride, a spinster, was about 24.
vii. Elizabeth Tackhill, bap. Aug. 11, 1604; bur. June 15, 1613.

3. Richard Tackhill, married November 25, 1592, Agnes Page. She was buried Mar. 26, 1602, at Goxhill.

Children of Richard Tackhill and Agnes Page:

i. William Tackhill, bap. Jan. 13, 1592-93; bur. Mar. 7, 1593-94.
ii. Agnes Tackhill, bap. Aug. 19, 1599; bur. Apr. 4, 1602.

4. William Tackhill, born circa 1570; married Ellen ———; buried August 2, 1622.
5. Agnes Tackhill, born circa 1568; married April 29, 1589, Jeffraye Jefferson, at South Ferriby.
6. Elizabeth Tackhill, baptized at Goxhill, November 16, 1578.

William Tackhill, the third of the name, was born about 1570, either in South Ferriby or Goxhill. He married, about 1595, Ellen, whose surname is unknown. She died, and was buried in Goxhill on August 2, 1622. We do not find a record of his death.

Children of William and Ellen Tackhill.

1. Thomas Tackhill, buried September 20, 1598.
2. Joan Tackhill, buried September 22, 1598.
3. William Tackhill, baptized September 18, 1597; buried September 13, 1598.
4. Agnes Tackhill, baptized October 13, 1599; married June 19,[1] 1625, William Page of Goxhill.
5. William Tackhill, baptized October 20, 1602; buried November 27, 1602.

[1] The date in the register is June 19, 1625; in the transcript of the register, May 28, 1625.

6. Elizabeth Tackhill, baptized January 7, 1603-04; married April 24, 1627, Stephen Marshall.
7. William Tackhill, baptized December 11, 1605; married 1st, at Goxhill, October 9, 1631, Agnes Fairecliffe; 2nd, Mary ————. His will dated February 17, 1661-62, was proved April 3, 1671;[1] buried in the parish church of East Halton.
8. Robert Tackhill, of Goxhill, married at Barrow, November 21, 1613, Isabel Sergeant, widow. He and his children were mentioned in the will of his brother William. Children baptized at Goxhill.

MORLEY.

The MORLEY family was in Yorkshire as early as 1383, when Adam de Morlei (Morley) witnessed a charter for a tract of land in "Ardeslowe" (Ardsley) and Haya on June 30 of that year.[1] Morley, which may have given its name to the family, is a town of considerable size in the West Riding of Yorkshire, situated about four miles southwest of Leeds, while Ardsley is no more than two or three miles, at most, southeast of Morley. Batley, eight miles southwest of Leeds, forms, with Morley, a parliamentary borough.

Adam de Morlei was probably the father of William de Morley, Vicar of Featherstone, who, sometime before July 25, 1400, had granted to Alexander de Skelton certain lands in the common fields of Erdenwick,[2] and we next find a Robert Morley on May 20, 1462, witnessing a grant for a tract in "lez over Hugh" in the township of Erdeslowe (Ardsley) and in "les Helay" (?) in the township of Batlet (Batley).[3]

Featherstone is quite near to Wakefield, a large town that lies somewhere near five miles directly south of Leeds, and Erdwyck, or West Hardwick, is close by to Featherstone. As late as 1573, the Morleys held land in Morley Carres in North Bierley, which adjoins Morley.[4]

All the above named villages and towns are within a very few miles of the now great manufacturing city of Leeds.

These Morleys of Morley in the West Riding may have been the ancestors of the Morleys of Normanby in Cleveland, in the North Riding. Cleveland is a district in the extreme northern part of the shire, extending east and west from Yarm along the river Tees, which divides York from Durham, to the coast at Whitby, and north and south from Redcar on Tees Bay to the Cleveland Hills.[1] Normanby is a mile or so south of the Tees, inland from the North Sea a short distance, Ginsborough being near by.

The first of the Normanby family we have been able to locate were three brothers, Sir Walter Morley, Knt., John Morley and Nicholas Morley. Their father's name is not known. John Morley of Normanby in Cleveland, Esquire, by deed 19 October, 35 Henry VI (1357) conveyed certain lands in "Laikerby" (Lackenby) near Ginsborough, "unto certain feoffees to doe service to the Lord Prior of Gisbro", to which was affixed "The Seale of John Morley, Esq."[2] Nicholas Morley of Normanby, Esquire, brother to John, living in 1346, married Joan Hedlam and had a son, John. There is a break here in the lineage of this family. The next entry bears the name of Christopher Morley of Normanby in Cleveland, born circa 1500, who was no doubt a grandson of either John or Nicholas. By wife, Elizabeth Bulmer, Christopher had four sons, Robert, Christopher, James and Francis. Christopher, Junior, had but one child, a daughter, Margery, wife of Thomas Dawson. We have nothing further of James or Francis.

Robert, the eldest son and heir to Normanby, born circa 1525, married first, Isabella, daughter and heir of William Maltby, of Maltby, and had James, born about 1550, who married Phillis Thornaby; and Margaret, who married a Mr. Hall. Robert Morley lived at Maltby. After the death of his wife, Isabella, he married Elizabeth Symon of Kirk Levington, Yorkshire, and had Cuthbert, born circa 1554; Phillis, wife of Christopher Moyser; Elizabeth, married to John Bachelor; and Anne, wife of William Thomson.

Cuthbert Morley married Anne, daughter of Christopher and Jane Thornaby of Thornaby, in Cleveland, and had issue

VI (1332) John Morley, Chaplain to Robert Bolton, Esq., deeded all his right to manors in Kingston-upon-Hull and Anlaby in county York, and Westwode Staunforde in county Lincoln and elsewhere. To this document a seal was also affixed. (Catalogue of Ancient Deeds, Volume IV.)

five children, James, the eldest, born in 1576, Christopher, Thomas, Jane and Margery, all living in 1584.

James Morley, the eldest son of Robert Morley by his first wife, Isabella Maltby, and half brother to Cuthbert, married Phillis Thornaby, a sister of Cuthbert's wife Ann, and they were the parents of John Morley, born 1574, who married twice and had eleven children, all living in 1612. The visitation of 1584 and 1612 from which the foregoing was taken was signed by both James Morley and Cuthbert Morley.

The Arms of the family, as given in this Visitation, were:

> Quarterly, I and IV, Sable a leopard's head, cabossed argent, jessant de lis or, MORLEY; 2 & 3 sable, 3 Catherine wheels or, MORLEY.

The above Morley arms are again quartered by those of Maltby, Senior, and Thornaby.

Within the pedigree chart is given an illustration of the arms of Cuthbert Morley:

TIMBERLAND VICARAGE. RESIDENCE OF REV. CANON C. W. FOSTER

MORLEY OF LINCOLNSHIRE.

Thomas (or John) Morley was of South Elkington, parish of Lindsey, Lincolnshire, where he died in the winter of 1524. South Elkington is near Louth. He also had a house in the nearby village of Claxby. In his will of October 6, 1524, proved at Louth January 19, 1524-25, he divides his property between his wife, Margaret, and their children, and the house or "tenement in Claksby and the land with appurtenaunce wich my father wytt me after the decease of my Mother I will that John Morley my sonne have it." The other children were all minors. He names Sir Richard Gray, the vicar of South Elkington.[1] The father's will does not seem to have been probated in Lincolnshire, so he may have lived and died in another county. Nicholas Morley of Normanby in Cleveland, living 1435, had a son, John, of whom nothing further is given after that date, nor were any children ascribed to John Morley, brother of Nicholas, who was living in Normanby at the same time. The will is on file as that of "John Morley", but the testator calls himself "Thomas". The widow, Margaret Morley, left a will dated September 28, 1529.[2]

William Morley was vicar of Winterton, county Lincoln, in 1556, and died there in 1567. Winterton is in the extreme northwestern part of the shire on the river Humber. He had a brother Robert Morley, sister Holden, sister Crowther and brother John, and names Richard Morley, of Morley and his daughter, Alice. Richard may have been another brother, but if not, he was undoubtedly a very near relative,[3] which certainly identifies this Winterton family with that of the Morleys of Morley, Yorkshire.

children of Robert Morley; children Christopher, William, Anne, Mary and Joane.

8. Alexander Morley, baptized March 27, 1580; buried March 7, 1633-34; married Katherine (Oliver?); buried July 20, 1627.
9. Elizabeth Morley, baptized July 4, 1584.

Alexander Morley, son of Richard and Anne Cooke Morley, was baptized at Winterton, March 27, 1580. He was churchwarden in 1602. He married, about 1600, Katherine ————, whose surname is not given, but it is believed that she was related to Elizabeth Oliver, wife of Christopher. John Morley, son of Alexander and Katherine, in his will of 1642, names his "uncle George Oliver and his son, John, of Gunhouse". Gunness (Gunhouse), with Burringham, is an ecclesiastical district in the Isle of Axholme, Lincolnshire, on the river Trent. This is very near to Burton-upon-Stather, and both not far from Winterton. Alexander and Katherine Morley had six children whose baptisms are recorded at Winterton, but circumstantial evidence is convincing that he had a seventh child, a second named John, whose birth was not recorded in Winterton. The eldest child, Jone, a daughter, was baptized May 24, 1602, and then a son, John, was baptized July 30, 1603, who was buried August 16, 1603, aged seventeen days; Anne, another daughter, was baptized on August 12, 1604. The next entry to appear on the Winterton record is the baptism of a son, Peter, on February 3, 1610-11, then Martha, baptized February 9 and buried February 18, 1611-12, and an unnamed child, buried August 3, 1615.

It will be noted that there was an interval of six years between the daughter Anne, born 1604, and a son, Peter, born in 1610. During this interval, Alexander may not have been in Winterton, or, as it sometimes happened, a baptism, marriage or death was not recorded. In any event, they evidently had another son, born about 1606, whom they also named John. Katherine Morley was buried July 20, 1627, and Alexander on March 7, 1633-34. Both were interred in the Winterton Churchyard.

CHILDREN OF ALEXANDER AND KATHERINE (OLIVER?) MORLEY:

1. John (Jane) Morley, baptized May 24, 1602.
2. John Morley, baptized July 30, buried August 16, 1603.
3. Anne Morley, baptized August 12, 1604.
4. John Morley, born circa 1606; died 1644; married October 23, 1627, Ellen (Helen) Lownd.
5. Peter Morley, baptized February 3, 1610-11; buried 1635.
6. Martha Morley, baptized February 9, 1611-12.
7. ——— Morley, buried August 3, 1615.

John Morley of Winterton, born circa 1605-06, son of Alexander and Katherine Morley, married at Winterton, October 23, 1627, Ellen, or Helen, Lownd. They had two children, Alexander, baptized December 9, 1631, and Anne, baptized May 18, 1636. John Morley died in 1644. His will, dated December 30, 1642, and proved April 20, 1644, names his wife, Helen (Ellen), children Alexander and Anne, and uncle, George Oliver of Gunhouse[1] (Gunness), in the Island of Axholme, Lincolnshire, which strongly suggests that his mother was an Oliver and related to the wife of his Uncle Christopher Morley.

CHILDREN OF JOHN MORLEY AND ELLEN LOWND:[2]

1. Alexander Morley, baptized December 9, 1631.
2. Anne Morley, baptized at Winterton, May 18, 1636.

Thomas Morriley of Elsham, Lincolnshire, had twin children, John and Isabel, baptized August 13, 1620, he at the time being churchwarden. Isabel was buried on October 14 of the same year, and on October 1, 1623, a son, William, was baptized, and was buried February 20, 1624-25. Then a daughter, Joan, was baptized March 10, 1625-26. The name of his wife is not given.

There was living, at the same time, in this village of Elsham, a Thomas Morley, who had a daughter, Alas (Alice) baptized February 27, 1621-22, and on February 14, 1623-24, twin daughters, Susanna and Joan, who were buried three days later. A son, Thomas, was baptized May 4, 1625, and then a daughter, Annis (Anne), on January 24, 1627-28. On September 14, 1625, "John Morley, labourer," was buried.

[1] Canon Foster's Notes.

[2] Winterton Parish Register.

Elizabeth, another daughter of Thomas Morley, was baptized April 21, 1631, and finally, on November 27, 1635, Easter, daughter of "Thomas and Joane Morley" was baptized. This is the last Morley entry on the Elsham register until 1675.

Elsham is just about the same distance from Goxhill as Winterton, and either of these, Anne, daughter of John, baptized May 1, 1636, or Anne, daughter of Thomas, baptized January 24, 1627-28, could have been the Anne Morley who married at Goxhill, Robert Page, who was baptized April 4, 1626.

RICHARDSON.

William Richardson of Laceby, Lincolnshire, England, was baptized there December 1, 1538. In all probability he was the son of John Richardson, who was buried at Laceby September 16, 1544, and Isabel, who appears to have been the widow of John, and who married, September 28, twelve days later, John Walker. William Richardson married circa 1565, but the name of his wife is not known. He was no doubt the father of Alice, baptized September 17, 1568; Joshua, baptized March 22, 1571; and David, baptized March 19, 1574. Thomas Richardson, who had a son, Robert, baptized May 29, 1586, and was buried January 12, 1605, would have been a younger brother of William. Robert, baptized May 29, 1586, had a son, William, baptized July 10, 1608.

The Laceby Parish Registers are incomplete, there being wide gaps in the early entries.

PRESTON.

Matthew Preston, of Barrow-upon-Humber, Lincolnshire, England, born about 1586, married first, at Barrow, November 27, 1611, Elizabeth Bilton. He married second, at the same place, June 25, 1626, Anne Taylor, who was buried there December 31, 1647.

Matthew Preston is believed to have been a son of Edward Preston, of East Halton, near Barrow. Edward Preston had seven children baptized at East Halton, namely: Leonard, August 17, 1593; John, July 8, 1596; Edward, December 3, 1598; Anne, September 10, 1601; Christopher, September 4, 1604; Joane, baptized June 21, 1607, buried September 7, 1608; and Esabela, December 10, 1609.[1] Leonard Preston, baptized 1593, married at Thornton Curtis, October 21, 1621, Alice Mundie, and had a daughter, Anne, baptized at Thornton Curtis, November 10, 1622, and a son, Nicholas, on September 17, 1624. He removed to Goxhill, where a daughter, Elizabeth, was buried March 15, 1627-28, a daughter Mathie, (Martha), baptized September 24, 1630, and a daughter, Marie, March 30, 1634, and then he settled in Horkstow, where a son, Leonard, was baptized December 29, 1639. He was churchwarden of Horkstow, 1645, and was buried there October 29, 1654, leaving a will, dated October 18, 1654, but not proved until June 16, 1657, in which he names his wife, Alice, executrix, and bequeaths his estate to his surviving children: Anne, wife of Thomas Pattan of Worlaby and their three children, Alice, Thomas and Anne; Mary; Sarah; Nicholas of Gouth and his son, Edward; and Martha, wife of William Sanderson of Wootton and their daughter, Elizabeth. Thomas, son of Thomas Pattan and Anne Preston, was called a "god son" by George Preston of South Ferriby, son of Matthew Preston and Elizabeth Bilton, in his will, 1662.[2]

[1] East Halton Parish Register.

[2] A Philip Preston of Horkstow had wife Maudlin and brother Thomas. He left a will dated December 18, 1562, and proved January 8, 1562-63. (Lincoln Consistory Court.)

John Preston, son of Edward Preston, of East Halton, born 1596, was in all probability the father of John Preston of Great Carlton, who was named "kinsman" by George Preston of South Ferriby in his will, 1662. John Preston had died, and was buried August 18, 1661, leaving an only child, Phoebe, and, the wife and mother being deceased, John Preston, by will, appointed his "kinsman", George Preston of South Ferriby guardian of Phoebe, with whom she was living when George was buried April 15, 1667, and his wife, Faith, nine days later. Since Leonard, George and John were so closely related, it is probable that Matthew was a son of Edward, which would make George of South Ferriby, Anne Preston Pattan of Worlaby, and John Preston of Great Carlton, first cousins. George Jewe, vicar of Horkstow from 1644 until his death, August 23, 1683, witnessed the wills of Leonard Preston of Horkstow, 1654, John Preston of Great Carlton, 1661, and George Preston of South Ferriby, 1662.

The ancestry of Elizabeth Bilton has not been discovered. A Bylton, Bilton, family of Yorkshire was anciently seated in Hessle, a village directly across the river Humber from Barrow, a parish and town called Bilton being four miles north of Hessle.

> Demise by Beatrice, formerly wife of Sayer de Bilton, to John de Neuton, dwelling in Hessell, and Helewise, his wife, of 1½ acres of land and meadow falling to her in the name of dower at Hesell by the death of the said Sayer; of 4½ acres of land and meadow which John had had by Sayer's gift as appeared by the charter John had; and of 2 acres of land falling to her as dower in a culture of land called Hillerdayle in the territory of Traneby, on the south side of the culture, which culture contained six acres, and was held by John from Sayer for a term of years. To hold from Martinmas, 1303, for a term of 14 years, paying 7s a year at Whitsuntide and Martinmas. Witnesses, Thomas de Louthorpe, John Ligeard, John ad fontern, John le Mayne, Stephen the clerk. (Sizergh Castle).[1]

[1] Yorkshire Archaeological and Record Society Publications, Volume 39, p. 199.

In 1392, a Sir John de Bilton was chaplain of the parish church of Bilton.[1]

Very few of this surname appear to have been in Lincolnshire. From 1562 and on, there were families of Bilton in Winterton and Thealby, and, a little later, we find on the Barrow church register that on October 28, 1585, Johis (John) Bilton was buried, and a Jenett Bilton on April 25, 1587. Letters of administration on her estate were issued May 10 following her decease.[2] No account of her heirs was given. Elizabeth Rowberie of Appleby was named as a kinswoman, and Adam Rowberie and Thomas Seward were appointed to act as sureties.[3] On December 29, 1587, Alice Bilton was buried there, and the last appearance of this surname on the Barrow registry is the burial of Francis Bilton on June 29, 1602. On July 3, 1596, a Richard Bilton, a cottager, was buried in Barnetby, a village quite near to Barrow.

Children of Matthew Preston and Elizabeth Bilton:

1. Magdalen Preston, baptized at Barrow, July 31, 1613; buried in Goxhill, February 15, 1678-79; married in Goxhill, May 14, 1640, Matthew Harper of Goxhill.
2. Isabel Preston, baptized at Barrow in 1615; married there January 24, 1640-41, John Yorke, who was dead in 1662. They had issue: John, Mary, Miriam and Elizabeth Yorke.
3. Elizabeth Preston, married 1st, ———— Neel; 2nd, ———— Skelton. Of Wootton and a widow in 1667.
4. George Preston, of South Ferriby, yeoman, was baptized at Barrow, January 29, 1618-19; buried in South Ferriby, April 15, 1667. His will,[4] made October 23, 1662, proved in 1667, made bequests to: Thomas, a son of Thomas Pattan of Worlaby, his godson; George Michell, son of Thomas of South Ferriby, his godson; Catherine Lawson, daughter of Mr. Nicholas Lawson of South Ferriby, his goddaughter; to John, Mary, Miriam and Elizabeth, children of the testator's sister Isabele Yorke of Barrow, widow, £5 each; George Harper, Matthew (sic) Harper and Magdalene Harper, children of testator's sister Magdalene, wife of Matthew Harper of Goxhill, £5 each; Christopher, Thomas, Abel and William, sons of William Benton of South Ferriby, each a ewe hog; the poor of South Ferriby, ten shillings; Phebe Preston, orphan daughter of testator's cousin John Preston, late of Great Carlton, £100 at the age of 21 or day of FULSTOW.

Fulstow is a very ancient surname in England, originating in Lincolnshire, where it was derived from the parish and village of that name in Haverstoe Wapentake, North Riding of Lindsey. It is found upon the earliest records as Falestowe, Fulestou, Fulestowe, Fulhestown, Fulstoe, Fulstowe, Fulshawe.[1]

The family, though gentle, has never appeared in the Herald's Visitation.

The earliest mention of the name is found in the time of King John, 1202, when Alan de Fulestou, Randulphus de Fulestou, and Sergius de Fulstow appear on the First Assize Roll.[2]

The next records we find, and these are much fuller, were executed and recorded in 1256 and 1263, during the reign of Henry III. The first of these documents show that one Robert de Fulstowe, Prior of Ormesby, held one-third of eighteen acres of meadows in Fulstow, as well as two tofts[3] and two bovates[4] of land in the same village. Amicia, wife of Herbert le Clerck, whose first husband had been Ralph de Bolebeck, had dower rights in these same lands as widow of the said Ralph, but just what relationship existed between Ralph, or Amicia and Robert de Fulstow, the Prior, is not revealed. Ormsby is only about a mile and a half west of Fulstow. Herbert le Clerck and wife, Amicia, quit-claimed all their right to these lands to Robert de Fulstow.

At Lincoln, in eight days of St. Martin 41 Henry III, 18 November 1256.[5] tiffs by Herebert put in place of Amicia, and Robert prior of Ormesby, tenant, of the third part of eighteen acres of Meadow in Fulstowe; and between the same plaintiffs and the said prior whom Robert de Fulstowe vouched to warrant, of the third part of two tofts and two bovates of land in the same vill which third parts Herebert and Amicia claimed to be of Amicia's reasonable dower which fell to her in respect of the free tenement which was of Ralph de Bolebeck, formerly her husband.

Plea. Herebert and Amicia have quit claimed to the prior and his church all the right and claim which they had in the tenements in the name of Amicia forever and for this the prior has given them 5 marks of silver.

That dated 28 May, 1263, records that one Geoffrey de Fulstowe had received by deed of gift from Matthew de Stretton and wife, Katherine, a messuage and five selions [1] of land in Saxelby, for which Geoffrey paid them forty shillings. In all probability, Katherine was Geoffrey's mother, and Matthew de Stretton was his stepfather. Saxelby is about twenty or twenty-five miles southwest of Fulstow.

At Lincoln, on the morrow of Trinity, 47 Henry III, 28 May 1263.[2]

Between Geoffrey de Fulestowe, querent, and Matthew de Stretton and Katherine his wife, deforciants, of one Messuage, five selions of land and two acres of Meadow in Saxelby.

Plea of Covenant. Matthew and Katherine have acknowledged the tenements to be the right of Geoffrey as those which he has of their gift; to hold to him and his heirs of them and the heirs of Katherine forever; rendering therefor yearly one half-penny for all service and doing therefor to the chief lords all the other services. (Warranty) And Geoffrey has given Matthew and Katherine 40 s. Sterling.

The earliest connected account of the Fulstow family that exists starts with John Fulstow of High Toynton, in Lindsey, Lincolnshire, 1483. Toynton, High and Low, Toynton All Saints, and Toynton St. Peters, are parishes and villages all adjoining, or within a mile and a half of each other, and near Spilsby, at least fifteen miles south of Fulstow.

FULSTOW OF HIGH TOYNTON.[1]

John Fulstow died 3 February, 1483-84, and an inquisition post mortem was held in 10 Henry VII (1495). He had wife Margaret, and two sons, Robert, the elder and heir, born circa 1470, and Richard. According to the inquisition, John Fulstow left a will, in which he devised all of his lands to his younger son, Richard, and his issue, after the death of the mother. Margaret died January 2, 1489-90, and the inquisition was held October 21, 1495. The lands mentioned in this document were in Toynton, also in Esterkele (Easter Keal), Partney, Dalby, Hoggesthorpe, Ingoldmells and Skegnesse, all within a short distance of Toynton.

Inquisition Post Mortem, Lincolnshire, 10 Henry VII.[2]

Inquisition taken at Parteney, 21 Oct., 10 Henry VII [A.D. 1495]. John Fowelestowe was seized in his demesne as of fee of a messuage, 2 oxgangs [3] of land, etc. in Toynton, 2 tofts and 2 oxgangs of land etc. in the same place; a toft and half an oxgang of land etc. in Esterkele; a toft and an oxgang of land etc. in Partney; a toft and 3 oxgangs of land etc. in Dalby; a toft and 12 acres of land etc. in Hoggesthorpe; a toft and 30 acres of land etc. in Ingoldmells; and a toft, 12 acres of land etc. in Skegnesse. And he thereof enfoeffed John Langton, of Langton by Partney, esquire, John Langton, son and heir of the said John Langton, Thomas Rygge, of Botheby in the Parish of Welton, Thomas Wright, rector of a moiety of the church of Esterkele, Richard Fowelstou, a younger son of the said John Fowelstowe (and others). To have and to hold forever, to perform and fulfill the last will of the said John. He declared by his will (among other things) that, after the death of Margaret his wife, all the said lands, etc. should remain to the said Richard, his younger son, and his issue.

The said John died 3 Feb. A.D. 1483, and Robert, aged 25 years is his son and next of heir.

Margaret died 2 Jan. 5 Henry VII A.D. [1489-90].

While it is specifically stated that John Fulstow left a will, it is not now in existence, as it has never been discovered by the archivists or historians of Lincolnshire. There was a daughter, Elizabeth, married to one Thorpe.

CHILDREN OF JOHN AND MARGARET FULSTOW:

1. Robert Fulstow, born 1470. He was the eldest son, aged 25 in 1495.
2. Richard Fulstow, born about 1472; died October 10, 1541; married 1st, ————; 2nd, Alice ————.
3. Elizabeth Fulstow, married ———— Thorpe; in 1541, she had issue, Elizabeth, Gilbert, Isabel, Thomas, all named in her brother Richard's will.
4. Isabel Fulstow, probably a daughter, who married John Gell of Over Toynton, or Toynton All Saints. John Gell died in 1523. His will, dated July 10 of that year, names wife Isabel, daughters Alice and Isabel, John Fulstow, and godson Thomas Fulstow. Witnesses were Sir Robert Long, Sir Robert Walker, William Sands of Haworthingham and Mary Parker.[1]

Robert Fulstow, eldest son of John and Margaret Fulstow, was born about 1470, as he was twenty-five years of age in 1495. Although designated as eldest son and heir in the inquisition made in 1495, after the death of both of his parents, upon such lands as belonged to the estate, the father, in his will, bequeaths practically all of his property to his younger son, Richard, then a minor. The will, as stated above, has not been preserved. Just why the elder son was disinherited is not known. All the lands named in the inquisition were in the possession of Richard when he died in 1541. Of Robert, nothing further is known. He probably died unmarried, in which case, if he did inherit any at all of the paternal estate, it naturally reverted to the next heir, his brother Richard.

Richard Fulstow, youngest son of John and Margaret Fulstow, was born circa 1472, as he was of age in 1495. By the terms of his father's will, he was to inherit the greater part of the Fulstow estate after the death of his mother. She died in 1489-90. The name of his first wife is not known; that of his second wife was Alice. He left a will, dated September 28, 1541, which was proved May 3, 1542, in which he directs that he be buried in the churchyard at All Hallows, Over [1] C. W. Foster: Lincolnshire Wills, Lincolnshire Record Society Publications, Volume 5, p. 120.

Toynton. In the Lincolnshire Pedigrees, it is stated that he was buried at All Saints, Toynton, but his will specially names All Hallows as his choice of a last resting place. There is an All Hallows in Over Toynton, and there is a village and parish called Toynton All Saints about a mile and a half distant. All of the houses and lands situated in the many surrounding villages, with one exception, descended to his wife, Alice, and eldest son and heir, John, so Robert, the younger son, was bequeathed the lands at Keal, but upon the death of Robert and of his mother, Alice, these lands were to revert to John. There was a third son, Thomas, and two daughters, Elizabeth and Isabel, both unmarried. He also names his sister, Elizabeth Thorpe, and her children. It is interesting to note that he very specially directs that all his "arelomes" (heirlooms) were to remain "styll upon ye grounde", that is, in the house, these being three sperys, a table, and two painted clothes. These must have been in his family for several generations and greatly valued to have caused such a request to be made.

East and West Keal are adjoining parishes and villages, a mile and a half apart, and about the same distance from the Toyntons.

Will of Richard Fulstow, 1542.[1]

> Bequeathes his soule to God, Saynt Mary and ye company of hevyn. To be buried in the church of All Hallows, Over Toynton. Lands in Toynton to wife Alice for life, and lands in Keill to son Robert Fulstow for life, after their deaths to son John Fulstow and his heirs. His plow and Wayne to son Robert Fulstow; daughter Elizabeth Fulstow and son Thomas Fulstow. To sister Elizabeth Thorpe, to Gilbert Thorpe and Isabel Thorpe 13s. 4d. each. To Thomas Thorpe 12d. "All my arelomes to remayne styll upon ye grounde yt is to say iij sperys, on tabull, and ij paynted clothes." Residue to wife Alice, son Robert Fulstow and daughter Isabel Fulstow whom he makes executors. Sir John Pechyll, Vicar, and Gilbert Thorpe, Witnesses. Proved at Spilsby 3 May, 1542.

Alice must have been a second wife, as John, in his will, 1557, mentions his "Mother in law", i. e. step-mother.

1 Lincolnshire Notes and Queries, Volume V, pp. 30-31.

Richard Fulstow died October 10, 1541. A post-mortem was held on November 8 following, wherein are mentioned his lands in Toynton Superior, Toynton Inferior, East Keal, Partney, Dalby, Ingoldmells, Halton by Spilsby, and declaring that "John Fulstow aged 30 and more" was the son and heir to the estate.[1]

CHILDREN OF RICHARD FULSTOW AND 1ST WIFE:

1. John Fulstow, born 1511; died June 26, 1557; married Anne ———.

CHILDREN OF RICHARD FULSTOW AND 2ND WIFE, ALICE:

2. Robert Fulstow. He was to receive the lands at Keal by will of his father, to hold jointly with his mother Alice, but at their deaths, it was to revert to John.
3. Thomas Fulstow, youngest son. Was living in 1541.
4. Elizabeth Fulstow, unmarried in 1541.
5. Isabel Fulstow, unmarried in 1541.

John Fulstow, eldest son of Richard Fulstow and his first wife, was born in Over Toynton in 1511, and was therefore thirty years old when his father died in 1541, leaving him almost the entire estate. His wife was Anne, whose surname is not known. He did not long survive his father as he died at the age of forty-six years. In his will, made June 16, 1557, ten days before his death, he is designated as "gentleman" and resident of Easter Keal. An abstract of this will is contained in an inquisition post mortem held at Spilsby on September 9, 1557.[2] To his wife, Anne, John gave, for the term of her life, all of his lands in Partney and the two Toyntons, with the reversion of that "that my Mother in law hath", his farm in Dalby, and the rents of all the other lands for the bringing up of his children, the eldest being less than eleven years old. At the death of his wife, Richard, the eldest son, was to have the reversion of all the lands except Partney, which he gave to his son John; to his son Thomas, he gave his lands in Scremby and Stickney; and to William, the Dalby property.

An inquisition is a judicial inquiry as to lands, rights thereto, descriptions, etc. Evidently not satisfied by the first survey, on April 6, 1561,[1] another inquiry was taken upon a writ to ascertain more correctly the tenures of the lands, and still again, on June 17, 1562, another inventory was made by the Commissioner for a further inquiry as to the same lands. Unfortunately, none of these documents give any information as to his brothers, Robert and Thomas, or any children they may have had. John was a resident of Easter Keal, which may have been that property designated as at Keal, which was left to his step-mother and brother Robert.

The above inquisition might indicate that Alice was then deceased, and perhaps her son Robert also, in which event the Keal property was to revert to John, eldest son and heir, and the inquiry as to the exact number and localities of the Fulstow estates was ordered that a clear title to the same could be obtained and recorded. Robert may have held other lands, and he could have married and had issue, of whom we have no information. He may have been the ancestor of the Fulstows of Kirmington.

Will quoted—

Abstract of extract of will[1] of John Fulstowe of Esterkeale, gent., made 16 June, 1557. (contained in his inq. p.m., co. Lincoln, (Chancery Inq. p.m. II, vol. 117, no. 54), as to all his lands and tenements in Over Toynton, Nether Toynton, Esterkeale, Weserkeale, Dalby, Parteyney, Ingoldmelles & Ingoldmelles, Scremby, Halton and Stickney, and elsewhere in co. Lincoln.)

I give to my wife, Anne, for her life, my lands in Parteney, Toynton & Toynton aforesaid, with the reversion of that that my "mother in law hath", & my farm in Dalby in the occupation of Rauf Cardon the younger, for her life; and the rents of all my other lands for the bringing up of my children, till my sons be 21 and my daughters 20 years of age. After my wife's decease, my son Richard shall have the reversion of all the lands given above to my wife, except the lands in Parteney, which I give to my son John; to my son Thomas, my lands in Scremby & Stickney, after all my sons be 21, and all my daughters, 20. To my son William, my lands in Dalby, which I purchased of Mr. Newcome, now in the occupation of Rauf Cardon the elder, to hold to the said William and his heirs male.

The witnesses are named in the recital of the will in the inq. upon the said John, taken 2 Nov. 2 Eliz., viz. John Every, John Smyth, Thomas Leite of Toynton, Christopher Salter of Esterkeale.

Inquisition of John Fulstow of Easter Keal, gent., dated 31 August, 4 Elizabeth (1562).[2]

Taken by commissioners under commission dated 17 June, 4 Elizabeth (1562).

Some of the same lands.

On a writ de melius inquirendo (of enquiring better) it appears that John's will was dated 16 June, 1557; wife Anne, sons Richard, John, Thomas and William, and sons and daughters, mentioned therein.

[1] The testament of John Fulstowe (dealing with his personal property) is not given in the inquisition post mortem, only the will (dealing with his land). At that time, there was a distinction between a will and a testament. (Canon Foster).

Died 20 June. Richard, his son and heir, was then aged 11 years and more.

CHILDREN OF JOHN FULSTOW, SR., AND WIFE, ANNE:

1. Richard Fulstow, born April, 1547; died 1601; married ——— Kirkman.
2. John Fulstow. Was given lands in Partney by his father.
3. Thomas Fulstow, married Margaret. Received lands in Scremby and Stickney, in Lincolnshire, from his father. Died intestate, 1583, when he was designated as "Gentleman of Spilsby".[1] He had two daughters, Johanne, married Lambert; and Audrey, married Allen. Was of Scremby and Stickney in Lincolnshire.
4. William Fulstow, married Anne ———. Had lands in Dalby, Horncastle and Binbrooke, near Toynton. He died in 1596, leaving ten children. In his will, he names his brother, Richard Fulstowe, and sons, Roger, the elder, whom he makes executor; Robert; and William; and seven daughters. This family wrote their name Fulshawe.[2]
5. (Daughters) whose names are not given.

Richard Fulstow, eldest son and heir of John and Anne Fulstow of High Toynton, was born March, or April, 1547, as he was "aged ten years and six months and no more" on September 9, 1557, when the inquisition was ordered upon his father's estate. He, as eldest son, received all the lands belonging to his father, except Partney, Scremby, Stickney and Dalby. He married ——— Kirkman, daughter of Amy Kirkman, as in his will he names his brothers, Leonard, John and William Kirkman. Lyon Kirkman, of West Keal, Gentleman, left a will dated October 16, 1580, in which he names a son, John, and a daughter, Dorothy, both under twenty-one years of age; mother Amy Kirkman; brothers Leonard, William and John Kirkman; and brother Fulstow.[3]

Richard Fulstow, Gentleman-Querant; Edward Dymocke, Esquire-Deforciant. Four parts of the manor of Skendleby, Claxbie, Welton, Willoughbye, Hogsthorpe and Partney.[1]

Richard Fulstow died at Eresby in the winter of 1601-02, his will being dated June 7, 1601, in which he devises all his property to his only son, Peregrine, a lad twelve years of age, and in the event of this son dying without issue, the estate was to be divided between his two daughters, Amy and Dorothy. Peregrine and Amy dying childless, Dorothy became sole heir. Eventually the property passed to her great grandson, Norman Bryan, of Bolingbroke, 1736.

Inquisition of Richard Fulstow, gent., dated 16 Mar. (1601-2).[2]

Five-ninths of the manor of Skendleby; another manor there, late belonging to the dissolved monastery of Noncotton (Nun Coton); land in Skendleby, Claxby, Welton, Tealby, Toynton, etc., Withern, Tothill, Hoggesthorpe, Partney, Lusby, Scremby, Grebby, Dalby, Lynwood, Halton Holegate, Westerkeale & Easterkeale, Stickney, Sutton, Gayton.

Will (as to his lands) dated 7 June, 43 Elizabeth (1601), recited:

All to son Peregrine in tail male, or issue female; in default equally between daughters Amy & Dorothy Fulstowe.

He died at Eresby, 18 June, 43 Elizabeth (1601).

Peregrine, his son and heir, then aged 11 years, 8 months, 9 days.

FULSTOW OF KIRMINGTON AND ULCEBY.

Robert Fulstow, born about 1573-1576, whose parentage has not been ascertained, was of Kirmington, Lincolnshire, a village adjoining Croxton on the south, about a mile or so southwest of Ulceby. He could well have been the grandson of Robert Fulstow of Keal, son of Richard and Alice Fulstow, who was given the lands at Keal so long as he and his mother lived, reverting at their deaths to his eldest brother, John. Although upon his death, these Keal lands went back to the Fulstow estate, any other cottage or land he may have owned, by inheritance from his mother, for instance, or by purchase, would of course remain in his possession and so pass to his heirs. Therefore, this is not an unreasonable suggestion. No trace of any other Fulstow family, other than that of Toynton, Keal, etc., has been found, nor do we find any of that surname in Lincoln as far north as Kirmington prior to this Robert. A search of the Toynton, Keal and Spilsby parish registers yields no information as to what might have become of Robert, son of Richard, or of his uncle, for whom he was no doubt named. This Christian name, with one exception, died out in the main, or Toynton, line of the family, but we find it appearing in every generation of the Kirmington-Ulceby branch.

We know little of Robert Fulstow of Kirmington. The name of his wife has not been preserved. He had four children baptized at that place.

A Bill "for the better selling of the cloth of their Kingdom" was introduced into Parliament in 1621, but met with opposition. In 1665, a Statute was passed enacting that the dead must be buried in woolen cloth "forcing the dead," as Arthur Young said, "to consume what the living were inadequate to purchase."

They should, when dead, be forced to wear it."

ROBERT FULSTOW, son of Robert and Ann Teanby Fulstow, of Ulceby, was born about 1670-1680, his birth record not having been found. He was probably married twice, his second wife and the mother of his children being Arabella, whose surname is unknown.[2] He resided in Goxhill, where he was buried April 19, 1729. Letters of administration on his estate were granted to his widow, Arabella, July 22, 1729, with Philip Plummer and John Hunsfield of Goxhill as sureties. 2. ISABELL FULSTOW, baptized at Goxhill, July 13, 1718; buried at Barrow, July 21, 1796; married JOHN JOHNSON of Barrow, son of Lawrence Johnson and Anne Page; baptized at Barrow, April 13, 1720; buried there November 25, 1788.

John Johnson and Isabell Fulstow had a daughter Isabell, baptized at Barrow, January 21, 1755, who married there October 10, 1780, Richard Wilson Enderby. She died in January, 1818, leaving a will in which she bequeathed all of her cottages, messuages and close lands in Barrow to her cousin, Robert Fulstow of Goxhill, farmer, whom she appoints as executor. All her other lands and cottages elsewhere she left to her son, Edward Johnson Enderby, and daughter Isabell, wife of Charles Mason. Robert Fulstow was the son of Thomas and Hannah Norwood Fulstow, of Goxhill.

3. George Fulstow, baptized April 21, 1721; buried in Barrow, November 21, 1786; married at St. Peter's, Barton, May 4, 1749, Jane Norman, buried at Barrow, April 7, 1817, aged 92 years. The will of Jane Fulstow of Barrow, widow, made March 7, 1815, proved July 28, 1817, devised copyhold cottages and closes of land in Barrow, to her grandson, George Fulstow, for life; £40 to each of her grandsons, John and Robert Fulstow; the same to her granddaughters, Jane West, wife of William West of Barrow; Ann and Mary Fulstow; residue of estate to the said George Fulstow, and he executor. Witnessed by Lawrence Wilkin, John Feather and Thomas Nicholson.[2]

TENEBY-TEANBY FAMILY.

The TENYBY, TENEBY, TEANBY family were seated in Barrow-upon-Humber, Yarborough Wapentake, Lindsey, Lincolnshire, as early as 1537, in which year Edmund Teneby died, leaving a will wherein he named his wife, Jenet, whom he appointed executrix, and children, Thomas, William, Margaret, Elizabeth and Allison.[1] One of the witnesses to this will was Bennet Teneby, who, in all probability, was his brother, and another was Sir John Tolle, priest, no doubt the vicar of the parish.

In 1546, Galfridus Teneby was assessed £12.12s., and Stephan Teneby £9.6s., on property in Barrow. At the same time, William Sargeant, who married Jenet, the widow of this Edmund Teneby, paid £8.5s.4d.[2]

So far, we have found nothing further of Bennett, Galfridus and Stephen Teneby, nor of the two sons of Edmund, Thomas and William. That the first four named were closely related, there can be no doubt. Later on, 1565, we find three brothers, George, Benedict, or Bennett, and William, in Barrow, but the name of the father has not been revealed, and still later, in 1589, there were five brothers in the same village, namely, Edmund, William, John, Edward and Robert, who were sons of one Geoffrey Teneby, who was deceased when, in 1589, his son, Edmund made his will. This Geoffrey Teneby may have been identical with the Jeffrey Teneby of Binbrook, Lincolnshire, who appointed his wife, Luce, and son John, executors of his will, dated August 10 and proved November 3, 1587. Unfortunately, Jeffrey does not name any other children he may have had. These two families of Teneby were apparently related, but in what degree is unknown. The fact that the Christian names of Thomas and William appear frequently in the descendants of the three brothers, George, William and Bennett, strongly suggests that their father was one of the two sons of Edmund and Janet, that is, Thomas or William Teneby, who were living in 1537.

George Teneby, with his brother, Bennett, were tenants of the Manor of Barrow June 19, 1565. He bought land there on 22 April, 29 Henry VIII, 1537, from Robert Gell. In his will which was dated April 22 and proved May 4, 1587, he names his wife, Elizabeth, whom he appoints executrix, his eldest son and heir, Stephen, who was of age, and five minor children, Edmund Teneby and Thomas Kirke to be supervisors of the estate.[1] His widow, Elizabeth, also left a will dated February 19 and proved March 2, 1601-02, in which she directs that her "bodie be buried at the queres end of the parish church of Barrow", and bequeaths 20s. to the poor of the parish; to godson Edward Fowler 12s.; and makes a bequest to Margaret, wife of William Gell, the last two named being the grandson and daughter of William, brother to George, her husband. All the residue of her estate was devised to Edward Sargiant, her son-in-law, whom she appointed executor. She also names "sister-in-law Annas Wakefield."[2] Children baptized at Barrow.

Children of George and Elizabeth Teneby:

1. Stephen Teneby, baptized December 9, 1564, eldest son and heir; inherited free land in Barrow Lordship from his father, 1587. He was buried June 5, 1593, having demised lands in Barrow to his sister Dorothy.
2. Matthew Teneby, baptized February 25, 1567-68. Was under twenty-one in 1587; buried November 30, 1591.

[1] Canon Foster's Notes.

[2] Lincoln Consistory Court, 1601, i, 234.

3. Dorothy Teneby, baptized December 17, 1570; married July 30, 1594, at Barrow, to Edward Sergeant, who was named in his mother-in-law's will, 1601-02. They had sons, George Sergeant, eldest son and heir, d. s. p., and Edward Sergeant, who inherited the Barrow lands from his father and sold them before 1649.
4. Thomas Teneby, baptized at Barrow, November 19, 1575. Believed to have been the ancestor of Barton and Thornton Curtis families of Teneby.
5. Agnes Teneby, baptized April 15, 1579.
6. Elizabeth Teneby.
7. George Teneby, baptized June 23, 1584; buried June 23, 1585.

Benedict, or Bennett, Teneby of Barrow, was a tenant of the Manor of Barrow, with his brother, George, June 19, 1565. He married first, at Barrow, February 1, 1560-61, Elizabeth Peart, and had two sons, William and Bennett, both baptized at Barrow. The parish registers as early as this merely name the infant, without indicating its parents, but eliminating the children of the Geoffrey Teneby branch, Bennett had two daughters, Ellen, or Eleanor, and Elizabeth. He married second, before July 15, 1577, Agnes Sergeant, who may have been buried May 26, 1593. He died and was buried at Barrow on April 6, 1580.

Children of Bennett Teneby and Elizabeth Peart:[1]

1. Ellen, or Eleanor, Teneby, baptized March 5, 1561-62, or September 27, 1562.
2. William Teneby, baptized May 19, 1563, or April 6, 1564; living June 19, 1565. He may have been the same who was buried August 9, 1590.
3. Bennett Teneby, baptized at Barrow, January 30, 1568-69; buried February 20, 1646-47. Married ————, and had three sons, all baptized at Barrow, viz: James, July 22, 1602; George, March 16, 1604-05; and Matthew, April 16, 1614.
4. Elizabeth Teneby, baptized May 20, 1570.

William Teneby of Barrow, brother of George and Bennett Teneby, married Elizabeth, the widow of John Faldyng, Faulding, Fidling. She had two daughters, Isabel and Elizabeth Fidling, who were named in William Teneby's will as "my daughters". She was also no doubt the mother of John Faldyng of Thornton Curtis, who married May 27, 1589, Mary Sergeant, and of Mary Faulding, married at the same place to Thomas Green on July 6, 1589.

8. Elizabeth Teneby, married July 22, 1582, Thomas Dalton; had two children living 1589.

Edmund Teneby of Barrow, yeoman, eldest son and heir of Geoffrey Teneby, was buried in Barrow churchyard on November 5, 1589. He bequeathed to his sons, John the eldest, and Robert, his lands in Barrow, Barton, Thornton Curtis and Burnham, which he had inherited from his father, Geoffrey. He had a third son, Edward, and a daughter Jane, who may have married Edmund Walkington, January 28, 1592-93, as Jane Walkington is named in Edward Teneby's will of 1593. He names other children some of whom were evidently his nephews and nieces.

ABSTRACT: WILL OF EDMUND TENEBY, 1589.[1]

The will of Edmund Teneby of Barrow, Lincolnshire; dated November 3, proved November 17, 1589. To be buried in the Church at Barrow. Children of William Teneby, Senior:

1. Edward Teneby, executor of his father's will; buried January 9, 1626-27.
2. William Teneby, Junior; named in Uncle Edmund's will, 1589, married Isabell ———; she died August 21, 1623. They had children: Mary, Margaret, John, Margerie, all baptized at Goxhill. William Teneby, Junior, was buried May 21, 1626.
3. James Teneby, baptized May 3, 1579.
4. Mary Teneby, married October 12, 1600, William Winship.
5. Agnes Teneby, baptized December 24, 1582; married William Harnes.
6. Rychard Teneby, baptized and died December 27, 1585.
7. Isabel Teneby, baptized April 12, 1587.
8. John Teneby, buried November 2, 1589.
9. Alice Teneby, baptized September 28, 1593.
10. Jeferay Teneby, baptized August 28, 1594.
11. Elin Teneby, baptized September 13, 1595.
12. Margaret Teneby, living 1601.

Ann Teanby, born circa 1642-1644, married at Thornton Curtis, on November 8, 1664, Robert Fulstow. They had two sons, George, baptized at Thornton Curtis August 8, 1667, and Robert, whose birth is not recorded.

George was not a Fulstow name up to this time, tho Robert, Junior, and George each had a number of descendants bearing that Christian name.

A careful and painstaking examination and check-up of all the parish registers and wills of which copies are at hand has, unfortunately, failed to yield the slightest clue as to Ann's parentage. John Teanby, born circa 1645, who married, at Barrow, June 3, 1667, Alice, sister of Robert Fulstow, was, in all probability, her brother. Very few of this surname resided in Thornton Curtis, while the Barrow and Goxhill families were most numerous. The baptism of neither Ann nor John appears upon those parish registers.

There seem to have been two John Teanbys in Barrow, each with a wife Alice. John Teanby and Alice Fulstow were married at Barrow June 3, 1667, and a John Teanby was also married there on July 28, 1670, to Alice Bacchus. One of these Johns was buried April 23, 1683, and his widow, Alice, married, October 2, 1684, Thomas Newill. The other John was buried at Thornton Curtis July 5, 1684, and this one was perhaps Ann's brother, and the husband of Alice Fulstow. No baptisms of any children they may have had are recorded at Thornton Curtis, but the Barrow register shows that John and Alice Teneby (Teanby) had: Anne, baptized April 1, 1677, and buried November 23, 1683; Alice, baptized March 17, 1679-80, buried October 5, 1680; Richard, buried August 29, 1680; a daughter, Frances, baptized July 9, and buried September 8, 1682; and Edward, baptized December 2, 1683.[1] All these Christian names appear in the descendants of Edmund Teanby of Barrow, who was the great grandfather of John Teanby whose wife was Hester Legard, and this would seem to be the logical line in which to place Ann and John Teanby of Thornton Curtis.

It is to be regretted that we must bring this book to press without establishing the parentage of Ann Teanby Fulstow. The foregoing account of the Teneby family, with copies of valuable records at hand, has been given here in the hope that future investigations may disclose her proper position in this most interesting family, to which she undoubtedly belongs.

HILL OF NORMANBY, BURTON-UPON-STATHER, WINTERINGHAM AND WEST HALTON, LINCOLNSHIRE.

Thomas Hill, yeoman, of Normanby, Lincolnshire, born circa 1538, married at Burton-upon-Stather, October 19, 1567, Alice Freeman, daughter of Thomas Freeman of Normanby. Thomas Hill was appointed a supervisor of the will of his father-in-law, Thomas Freeman, in 1578. He was buried at Burton April 24, 1587. His widow, Alice, married second, at Burton, April 28, 1588, John Fisher. The name of Thomas Hill appears on a Lay Subsidy Roll made in the 34th year of the reign of King Henry the Eighth, [1542-43] under Normanby. Also on a similar roll of 1542-44.[1] This was no doubt his father.

Normanby is in the parish of Burton-upon-Stather. "Burton-upon-Stather is situated at the edge of a bold commanding cliff, near the foot of which flows the Trent. This place has no doubt received its designation from the staith or mud, which gathers here during the rising of the tide. Burton was formerly considered as the metropolis of the Trent; and in the eighth year of the reign of Edward the second, the Earl of Lancaster obtained a charter for it to hold a market weekly, and two fairs annually. Burton at one time enjoyed a considerable trade, for which it was well adapted by its situation." The church of Burton, dedicated to Saint Andrew, "is a handsome edifice, consisting of a tower, a nave, with aisles, and a chancel."[2]

The will of Thomas Hill proved at Gainsborough May 8, 1587, directed burial in the church at Burton and mentions his children's maternal grandfather, Thomas Freeman.

6. George Hill of West Halton, baptized at Winteringham, May 9, 1697; buried at West Halton, June 2, 1755; married at Horkstow, March 27, 1728, Elizabeth Jackson.

George Hill of West Halton, Lincolnshire, son of John Hill and Anne Reader, was baptized at Winteringham, May 9, 1697. He married in Horkstow, March 27, 1728, Elizabeth Jackson, baptized at Winteringham, September 17, 1704; buried in West Halton, July 3, 1779; daughter of Thomas Jackson and Anne Parkinson of Winteringham.

West Halton is a small village distant about ten miles west of Barton; it lies on the right of the road leading to Whitton. Previously to the reign of Henry the Eighth, the parish of Halton, or Haughton, claimed the privilege of grazing cattle upon the open lands in Winterton for so many hours during the day. At this period, however, the parishoners accepted a field called the "Hallings" belonging to the former lordship, in lieu of this ancient right. The Church is a curious little old building, dedicated to Saint Etheldreda; it has a tower and three bells. The tumulus at Halton has long formed a subject of curiosity; some suppose it to have been the burial place of a Saxon warrior, others to have been that of a Roman; and a third hypothesis attributes it to the foundation of a mill; old writers unhesitatingly declare it to be a Roman barrow.[1]

George Hill was a churchwarden of West Halton in 1727 and 1747, and was buried there June 2, 1755. Their first child was baptized at Winteringham, the others in West Halton.

FREEMAN.

Freeman as a family name is one of the most ancient in England. The earliest mention we find of its use is in 1230, which was before surnames had, as a rule, become hereditary. At first it was a description of the newly acquired freedom of an individual when he was released from the condition of semi-servitude, or villeinage, and made a freeman. The title "the freeman" would therefore be added to his Christian name, and this description would be passed on to his descendants and thus eventually become their surname.

The Norman Conquest of England wrought many changes in the condition of the English people. Among these, the establishment of the Feudal System [1] was the most considerable. In accordance with this system, the title of all the land was possessed by the king, who assigned certain portions to the nobles or barons, by whom these were subdivided among the next lower class, partly consisting of Saxon thanes,[2] or franklins, as they were called by the Normans; and these again distributed them among their dependants on the sole condition of performing the duties of vassalage.[3] Thus, in each case, the title was made to depend upon the relation of the vassal to his superior.

This peculiar relation was established for the purpose of [1] Feudal Law. William the Conqueror divided all lands, with very few exceptions, into baronies. These baronies were again let out to knights or vassals. The whole kingdom contained about 700 chief tenants, and about 60,000 knights fees; none of the natives were admitted into the first rank, but were glad to be received into the second, and thus be the dependants of some powerful Norman. (Hume's History of England.) obtaining and preserving military strength. Thus, when the king needed an army, he summoned his barons, who in like manner called upon their vassals, and they at once made a similar demand upon their dependants.

[2] Thane. Originally a warrior companion of an English king before the Conquest. Later, a freeman or a ceorl (churl) who possessed some property.

[3] Every vassal was bound to do homage to his superior. Unarmed and with bare head, he knelt before him, and putting his hand in those of the lord, promised to be "his man" thenceforward, and to serve him faithfully for the lands which he held.

The most numerous class in England at this time were the Saxon churls, or, as called by the Normans, villeins. These were farmers and were obliged to place themselves under the protection of some noble, as otherwise they might be seized as robbers. They were bound to reside on the lands which they held from their lords, unless permitted to leave them. Next below these were the serfs, who were in all respects bondmen, being attached to the soil and subject to the will of their masters. When any baron or overlord disposed of any portion of his lands, all of his dependants residing upon that particular part, would be transferred, both as to his possessions and services, to the new master.

The English suffered greatly under the Norman rulers, and in time, as king succeeded king, more and more oppressive measures were adopted, until even Norman barons themselves revolted. King John came to the throne of England 1199, following the death of his brother, Richard I, Coeur de Lion. Few characters in history deserve so thoroughly the execration and contempt of mankind as this wicked king. He seems to have had not one redeeming trait to save him from utter reprobation. Yet, bad as he was, he proved an instrument for good in the hands of a beneficent Providence, since his intolerable oppression, by his insolence, tyranny and arbitrary exactions, drove the barons into rebellion, and was thus the means of securing the freedom of the people. In 1213-14, the barons determined to wrest from the king a charter of privileges, by which the royal authority should be restrained, and the liberties of the people more securely established. This John steadily refused to do, until a large army had been raised by the barons and the city of London taken, when he finally submitted and signed the famous Magna Carta (The Great Charter) at Runnymede, June 15, 1215. One of the most important articles of this instrument was that "no delay should take place in doing justice to everyone; and no freeman should be taken or imprisoned, dispossessed of his free tenement, outlawed, or banished, unless by the legal judgment of his peers.''

The following records, or charters as they are called, are of particular interest, as they yield so much, not only in the way of information upon the Freeman family of Normanby, but of the customs and rights of the common people of that time, and they are therefore given in full.

Roger Freman of Normanby by Spittal and Owmby,[1] Lindsey, Lincolnshire, living during the last quarter of the twelfth and the first half of the thirteenth century, had two sons, William and Austin. About 1230, Geoffrey, son of Hugh de Swalwecliue, released to the Lady Gobium and her heirs, the whole right in four bovates and one sixth part of one bovate of land in Normanby, which he had acquired from one William de Wahul, including two messuages and two men, namely Roger Freman and William, his son, and all their issue.

> Charter of Geoffrey son of Hugh de Swalwecliue releasing to the lady Ada Gobium and her heirs or assigns the whole right in four bovates of land and a sixth part of one bovate in Normanby which he bought of William de Wahul and which he holds of the fee of the said Ada with the appurtenances etc. within the village and without and with two messuages and two men namely Roger Freman and William his son with all their sequel.[2] Ada has given Geoffrey 30 marks. Witnesses:—Master Robert of Feriby Adam of Stauelee senescall of Kirketon [Kirton] Ralph of Neuton [Newton] Gilbert of Swalwecliue Geoffrey of Ouneby [Owmby] William of the church of Wilweton [Willoughton] John of Wadingham William of Kauneby [Caenby] John the chanter of Wilweton William the clerk of Newcastle (nouo castello) (circa 1230).[3] widowhood and lawful power[1] to Walter Beke lord of the manor, in return for his service, the same above described land with the two messuages and the two men, feudal serfs or farm servants, Roger Freman and his son William, their issue and all their chattels. In this instrument, there was also a grant of two other men of the village of Normanby, with five bovates of land, with the express restriction that it "would not be lawful to remove these two men, Henry and Richard, from the aforesaid land, except on account of their manifest misbehaviour."

> Grant by Ada Buteuilayn in her free widowhood and lawful power to Walter Beke for (i.e. in return for) his service four bovates of land and the sixth part of one bovate of land in the village and territory of Normanby those bovates to wit which Geoffrey son of Hugh de Swalecliue bought of William de Wahille with two messuages and two men who are neifs[2] namely Roger Freman and William his son with their whole sequel and all their chattels. Further grant to the said Walter of two other men who were late neifs in the vill of Normanby to wit Henry Payben and Richard de Angulo (i.e. of the corner) with five bovates of land and with their sequels and chattels. So nevertheless it shall not be lawful for Walter to remove Henry and Richard from the aforesaid land except on account of their manifest misbehaviour. To have and to hold from me and my heirs to the said Walter for the term of his life rendering therefore yearly to me and my heirs for his life two pence. Witnesses:— Sir Alexander de Monte forti Master Durand of Lincoln Gilbert de Hesel Ralph of Houneby [Owmby] Thomas of Houneby John Rigesby John Fluri of Lissington John the clerk of Lincoln Benedict the clerk of Thoutheby and others (circa 1230-1270).[3]

The next three charters yield the information that Roger Freman had another son, Aston, or Austin, and that the latter had wife Agnes.[4] [1] This was no doubt the same Ada Gobium married or remarried, and now a widow.

To all the faithful who shall see or hear the present charter Walter Bek' son of Henry of Lusceby [Lusby] greeting in the Lord. Know ye that I for myself have granted released and entirely quitclaimed to Austin son of Roger Freman of Normanby for his homage and service one toft with a croft in the village of Normanby and two bovates of arable land with the appurtenances in the territory of the same village which Roger father of the said Austin formerly was accustomed to hold. To have and to hold to me and my heirs to the said Austin and his heirs freely quietly well and in peace and by inheritance for ever, with all liberties easements belonging to the said toft with the croft and the said two bovates of land within the village of Normanby and without. Rendering therefore yearly to me and my heirs thirteen shillings and four pence at two terms of the year, namely, at the feast of St Martin in Winter six shillings and eight pence for all secular services and demands, saving the foreign service which is payable as much as belongs to so much land of the same fee. And I Walter and my heirs will warrant the premises to Austin and his heirs against all men for ever, etc. In witness whereof I have hereto set my seal, these being witnesses Thomas of Ouneby [Owmby] Master Roger of Normanby John Remay of the same Samuel Cowing of Ouneby [Owmby] John Cowing of the same John of Chartres junior of the same Martin the smith of the same Albert of the same clerk and others.

To all Christ's faithful people who shall see or hear this present writing Walter Bek' son of Henry Bek' of Lusceby [Lusby] greeting in the Lord Know ye that I have granted released and entirely quitclaimed to Austin son of Roger Freman of Normanby one toft and one bovate of arable land with the appurtenances in the village and territory of Normanby which Austin has of the gift of Gilbert' the clerk of Normanby and Mabel his wife. To have and to hold to Austin and his heirs of me and my heirs freely quietly well and in peace for ever Rendering therefore yearly to me and my heirs one pound of pepper at the Nativity of the Lord for all demands saving the foreign service when it falls as much as belongs to so much land of the same fee And I Walter and my heirs will warrant the premises to Austin and his heirs etc. for ever against all men except the heirs of Ralf of Neuton [Newton] and the assigns of the same heirs In witness whereof I have set my seal to the present writing these being witnesses Thomas of Ouneby [Owmby] William of Perham John of Paris Samuel Cowing John Cowing John of Chartres junior Martin the smith John Remay Albert the clerk and others.

At Lincoln; on the morrow of Souls, 56 Henry III, (3 November, 1271).

Between Astin Le Freman and Agnes his wife, querents, and Gilbert Attecherech of Normanby and Mabillia his wife, impedients, of 1 toft and 1 bovate of land in Normanby.

Plea of warranty of charter. Gilbert and Mabillia have acknowledged the tenements to be the right of Astin and Agnes, as those which Astin and Agnes have of their gift: to hold to Astin and Agnes and the heirs of Astin of Gilbert and Mabillia and the heirs of Mabillia for ever; rendering therefor yearly one rose at the feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist for all service; and doing therefor to the chief lords all the other services, for ever. (Warranty). And Astin and Agnes have given Gilbert and Mabillia 15 marks of silver.

Shortly after the above charters were granted, Walter Beke, or Bek, released forever from all servitude, Astin, son of Roger Freman of Normanby, and his offspring. But at the same time, Austin binds himself to serve Walter Bek and his heirs as a "free man" at their own proper call and that not outside the county of Lincoln.[1]

Charter of Freemanship.

To all Christ's faithful people who shall see or hear this present writing Walter Bek' son of Henry Bek' of Lusceby [Lusby] greeting in the Lord. Let the whole body of you know that I have granted released and entirely quitclaimed Astin son of Roger Freman of Normanby with his whole issue and his chattels from me or my assigns from all servitude of birth and servile status for ever. So that neither I nor my heirs nor anyone for us or in our name shall henceforth be able in anyway to demand or support any right or claim in the said Austin or his offspring or in his chattels. In witness whereof I have to the present writing set my seal these being witnesses Master Robert of Beningwrth rector of

To all who shall see or hear this writing Austin son of Roger Freman of Normanby greeting in the Lord Know ye that I am bound to Walter Bek' son of Henry Bek' of Lusceby [Lusby] and his heirs to serve them at their own proper charges as a free man is bound to serve his lord at Normanby or at Lincoln or at Bolingbroke or elsewhere in the county of Lincoln so that I am not bound to work outside the county of Lincoln In witness whereof I have to the present writing set my seal Dated at Lincoln on the Tuesday next after the feast of St Laurence the Martyr in the eighth year of King Edward [i].

From here on until 1300, Austin Freman signs as witness many deeds or charters granted by Walter Bek in Normanby and Owmby. One, made about 1320,[1] was signed by Roger of Normanby and Astin, his brother.[2] These were no doubt the sons of Astin and Agnes. This they could not have done unless they had been enfranchised or given their freedom. During this time, Austin himself, executes a grant or charter to Walter Bek and his wife Ellen, of three acres of farm land in Normanby near to the land of John Remay. To this deed he affixes a seal.[3]

Know ye present and to come that I Austin son of Roger Freman of Normanby have granted given and by this my present charter have confirmed to Walter Bek' son of Henry Bek' of Luceby [Lusby] and Ellen his wife and the heirs and assigns of the said Walter three

Unfortunately, these charters fail about this time, the middle of the fourteenth century, and, therefore, we have no further information regarding this family until the beginning of the sixteenth century, but upon the authority of Canon Foster, this Roger Freman was undoubtedly the ancestor of the Freeman family of Redbourne and Normanby, which flourished from 1496 on.[2] The earliest ancestor of this sur-

You will see that there are some interesting references to the Freeman family, some of which shew the origin of the name, but unfortunately these charters fail about the middle of the 14th century. There can be no doubt that they are the same family as that which appears at the beginning of the pedigree which you have, but there seems

AN ANCIENT FARMHOUSE, SUCH AS OWNED AND OCCUPIED BY A WELL-TO-DO YEOMAN

FREEMAN OF REDBOURNE AND NORMANBY.

Robert Freeman, of the parish of Redbourne, Lincolnshire, England, was born about the year 1497. Redbourne is on the great turnpike road leading from Barton-Waterside to London, and near the river Ancholm. Here are remains of what is supposed to have been an old Danish camp, called the Castle Hills. The church of Redbourne, St. Andrew's, a remarkably beautiful structure, was rebuilt in 1774; in 1785 the spire was taken down and the tower raised.[1]

Robert Freeman died in Redbourne about July 2, 1537, the date of his will, of which there is no record of probate, but as he was sick at the time of its execution, it is presumed that his death occurred soon after. He was survived by his wife Helen, who was appointed his executrix.

2. Jenet Freeman, mentioned as a legatee in her father's will; married ——— Webster. Her children, Thomas and Isabel Webster, are mentioned in the will of their uncle, Thomas Freeman, 1578.
3. William Freeman of Redbourne, an executor of his father's will, died in 1537. His will, dated October 5, 1537, proved at Waddingham October 24, 1537, appointed his wife Helen and son Christopher executors.[1]
4. Richard Freeman of Redbourne, by his will made January 5, 1532-33, proved at Appleby March 20, 1532-33, directed burial in St. Andrew's Churchyard, Redbourne.[2]

THOMAS FREEMAN, of Normanby in the parish of Burton-upon-Stather, Lincolnshire, was born about the year 1522. His wife, whose name is not known, was buried at Burton-upon-Stather, January 10, 1575-76 as "the wife of Thomas Freeman."

He was buried at Burton December 21, 1578. The parish register records the following.[3]

Although Thomas Freeman, in his will, makes bequests to a number of persons, it has only been possible to positively identify one child, a daughter, Alice, who married Thomas Hill. She and her husband and three children, William, Henry and Joysan, are named in his will. George Hill, whom he mentions, and whose wife was Margery Westaby, was the father of Alice Hill, who married the above Henry Hill.

HILL OF BURTON-UPON-STATHER AND THEALBY, LINCOLNSHIRE.

George Hill, born circa 1548-1556, may have been the son of Robert Hill, baptized July 25, 1549, at West Halton. He was of Burton-upon-Stather in Northwest Lincolnshire, when he married, on October 12, 1578, Margery Westaby. We have no positive proof of their parentage at the present writing. Margery Westaby was undoubtedly the daughter of one of the Westbys of Yorkshire, several of whom settled in West Halton, Burton-upon-Stather, Whitton, Winterton and Winteringham during the first half of the sixteenth century. These villages all lie within a radius of a few miles, either on or near the river Humber. As there was a Westobie and a Hill family in West Halton as early as 1538-39, and a George (Gregory) Hill baptized there on July 25, 1549, it is quite possible that both George and his wife, Margery, were originally of that place, he being a son of Robert Hill and second wife, Isabelle Harrison, and Margery a daughter of John Westobie and wife, Agnes Harrison, Isabelle and Agnes being sisters, hence George and Margery would be first cousins. But since she was married in Burton-upon-Stather, she may have been a daughter of Thomas Westabie, Senior, who died in Burton, 1571.[1]

WESTBY-WESTABY OF LANCASHIRE, YORKSHIRE AND LINCOLNSHIRE.

Owing to the variation in spelling, it has been impossible to prove, beyond all question, that the Westby family of Lancashire and Yorkshire was identical with the Westaby, Westobie family of Lincolnshire. Circumstantial evidence strongly points to the conclusion that they were one and the same, and the reasons for so thinking are set forth in the following.

Westby of Lancashire and Yorkshire.

The Westby family, which is of Scandinavian descent, was originally of Yorkshire, but had a settlement in Lancashire prior to the Norman Conquest. On the general survey, the township and lands of Westby are distinctly set forth as then existing in the hundred of Amounderness in the northwestern part of Lancashire and, as stated in Domesday, contained two carucates of land. Westby, with Great and Little Plumpton, are two small villages or groups of farms which constitute one township, lying close to the coast of the Irish Sea near the mouth of the river Ribble, not far from Preston. At the time of the Conquest and for some hundreds of years subsequently, it covered a very large area, as was usual with those great estates, extending over northeasterly into Yorkshire. All these lands in this part of Lancashire were once held under the great chief, Tosti, the brother of Harold, and afterwards under Roger de Poictou, the Norman.

Westby, with Great and Little Plumpton.[1]

Westbi and Pluntun are each stated in Domesday to contain two carucates. In 20 Edward I (1292), a claim was made by the King's attorney, upon the manor of Westby against William the son of Henry de Clifton under the pretext that King Richard was seized in fee > of that manor. The defendant simply denied this allegation and the jury found a verdict in his favor. In 11 Edward II (1317-1318) Win de Clifton had a charter of Free Warren in Clifton and Westby; and in the 17th of the same reign (1323-1324) he was possessed of these manors, together with cottages and lands in the hamlets of Skales, Fild plumpton, Parva and graunte Plumpton.

Some time before this, the Westbys had been deprived of their ancestral estate of Westby Manor, described above, and Alan Westby "of Westby Manor and Layton Hall in Lancashire" acquired possession of Westby Thorpe in Craven, county York. Westby Thorpe may have been part of the original Westby estate. Westby Hall, or Manor, is now a farmhouse and has undergone many changes.

During the reign of Edward III (1327-1376), the Westbys acquired the manor of Ravenfield, and that became their principal seat. It is in the West Riding of York, about four miles northeast of Rotherham, and quite some distance southeast of both Westbys. Thryberg, Ravenfield, Conisbrough and Loversall all lie on the highway leading from Rotherham to Doncaster. Ravenfield Hall is still in existence. Haxey and Laughton are quite near by. All these towns and villages are named in association with the Westbys of York.

Following is a copy of a chart of the Westby Manor, Westby Thorpe and Ravenfield Westbys as given by Foster in his Yorkshire Pedigrees.

According to Burke, the Westbys of county York, who were settled in that county time of William the Conqueror, bore for their Arms: "Argent, on a bend, three escallops of the field. Crest: An elephant's head ppr.," while the Arms of the Westbys of county Lancaster, who were originally of York, were: "Argent, on a chevron azure three cinefoils pierced of the first." These last always appear quartered with those of families with which they intermarried.

Henry Westby, of Barlborough and Whitwell, co. Derby.
Ann Westby, married 1602, George Fretwell.
Margaret Westby, married 1599, William Johnson of co. Notts.

It will be noted that the foregoing chart, while giving quite a full account of the Ravenfield branch of the Westbys, yields very little information, from about 1327 on, regarding the original, or main stem, the Westbys of Westby, and what little is given is more or less sketchy and quite indefinite.

Ralph Westby, (12) designated as "of Ravenfield and Westby", died leaving two sons to survive him, Henry, the second son, succeeding to the entailed estates of Ravenfield, while Robert, the elder brother, succeeded to the estate of Westby Thorpe.

Robert Westby, (13) who inherited Westby Thorpe in Craven, had a son James, grandson James, and great grandson Sir Robert Westby, who married a daughter of Thomas Laughton of Laughton. Sir Robert had a son, Sir Anthony Westby, who had two sons, William, who succeeded to West Thorpe and died about 1486, his descendants holding the manor until 1811, when it was sold; and Anthony, who was the father of three sons, Nicholas, Ralph and Francis Westby. Foster, in his pedigree, gives no further information regarding this family or their descendants. It is therefore most suggestive, and quite worth while considering, when we find Robert, William, James, Anthony, Nicholas, Francis, Margaret and Ciceley Westobie (Westoby) appearing as Christian names in families of that surname in northwest Lincolnshire, just over the boundary line of York, about twenty-five miles from Ravenfield, that these Lincolnshire Westobies were a branch of the Yorkshire family of Westby.

Henry Westby of Ravenfield, (22) by wife Alice Entwisle, had son Thomas Westby, of Ravenfield, who married Margaret Marshall, and their fourth son, Bartholomew Westby, was Baron of the Exchequer, London, 1509. A grandson of Henry, Robert Westby of Ravenfield, by wife, Isabel Wheatley, had sons, Robert Westby of Ravenfield, living 1485, Christopher, from whom came the Derbyshire branch, Edward and Thomas. Of these last two named, nothing further is recorded by Foster. The Christian names of Thomas, Edward, Christopher, Bartholomew, Margaret, Isabel and Jennet are also found in common use by the Lincolnshire Westobys. There seems to be no reason to doubt that these Westobys of Lincolnshire belonged to the Westbys of Westby Thorpe and of Ravenfield in county York.

When we come to the Lincolnshire family of this surname, we are faced with a difference in spelling, as here it appears most frequently, in fact almost invariably, as Westeby, Westobie and Westerby, yet circumstantial evidence is most convincing that Westby and Westeby, Westobie, Westerby, were one and the same. While one branch of the Westbys were in Westby Manor in Lancashire, Westby Thorpe and Ravenfield in York, there were other branches settled in other parts of the two counties. To quote Foster: "The Westbys have, at various periods, held lands at Westby near Gisburn, and at Ravenfield, Gilthwaite, Firsby Grange, etc., Yorkshire; at Mowbreck (which was acquired by an intermarriage) and Westby Manor, Bourn in Poulton, Much Urswick in Furness, in Alston, Balderston, Thornton, Thornton-Stano, Up Rawcliffe, and Great and Little Eccleston, co. Lancaster. The Lancashire branch were deprived of the greater portion of their lands by religious persecution and for their active zeal in support of the ill-fated house of Stuart."

The earliest noted of the name spelled as Westyby, or its variations, is in the last part of the thirteenth century, when we find John de Westyby in Laysingham in Cleveland, in the North Riding of York,[1] near the river Tees, which divides York from Durham. In 1296, William Vestiby (Westiby) of Gembling[2] and John Vestiby of "Louthrop" are named,[3] and William Westiby in Gembling, 1368,[4] in the East Riding. 1611, Robert Westebye entered suit against Timothy and Elizabeth Hutton, for a messuage and two cottages in "Butwith" (Butterwick), also near Great Driffield.[5] Still further south, Thomas Westby, Esq., 1610, was a defendant regarding certain lands in the city of York,[6] and in 1634, John Westobye of Kingston-upon-Hull had children, Samuel and Mary.

[1] Yorkshire was such a large county that it was divided into the three Ridings for convenience; each riding comprising an area that could be covered by a man riding on horseback within a given time.

[2] Gembling and Lowthorpe are about six miles east of Great Driffield, some distance south of Cleveland.

A Westiby family was in Bassingthorpe Parish, county Lincoln, as early as the reign of Henry III (1216-1265),[3] an Ernebert Westiby holding half of a bovate[4] of land in Gameslestorp (Grimesthorpe)[5] in Bassingthorpe parish, in the extreme southern part of Lincolnshire near Colby. There has been nothing found to point to this family as the ancestors of the North Lincolnshire Westobys.

WESTOBY OF LINCOLNSHIRE.

The Westobys of West Halton in the extreme northwestern part of Lincolnshire, on the river Humber, were seated in that village before 1538, where on December 1 of that year, John Westobie's daughter Margaret was buried. On October 21, 1540, Jennet Westobie was buried. This was no doubt John's first wife, as a John Westobie and Agnes Harrison were married on June 19, 1541.

Whitton is a parish and village on the river Humber, very near to West Halton, while Winterton and Winteringham are about two or three, and Burton-upon-Stather about five, miles to the southward, all quite near to the Yorkshire boundary.

Looking back over Foster's chart, we note that Edward and Thomas Westby, living circa 1475-1550, who had sisters Cecily, Isabel and Agnes, and brothers Christopher and Robert, all children of Robert (24) and Isabelle Wheatley Westby, are merely named, with no indication as to what became of them. They had an uncle Bartholomew, and aunts Ellen, Isabel, Cicely and Agnes, and a comparison of all the above names with those of the Lincolnshire Westobys strongly suggests and seems quite conclusive evidence that Thomas and Edward Westby, or some of their sons, settled in the latter county. Then, too, many of the descendants of Sir Robert Westby of Westby Thorpe are unaccounted for, and as these carried such names as Thomas, Anthony, Nicholas, Christopher, James, Francis and John, all of which are found as early residents of West Halton, Whitton, etc., the indications are that several of this branch of the family also crossed over the border of York into county Lincoln.

Margery Westaby, born about 1556-1558, who married George Hill at Burton-upon-Stather on October 12, 1578, appears to have been the daughter or granddaughter of Thomas Westaby, Senior, of Burton-upon-Stather, perhaps the Thomas Westerbie of Normanby, Burton Parish, 1542, and who was buried at Burton on September —, 1571, and "Mother Westby", buried July 18, 1588, or a daughter of John Westobie and second wife, Agnes Harrison, of West Halton. Margaret seems to have been a common name in the Westobie family of West Halton, as John Westobie had daughter Margaret (buried 1538). His wife, Jennet, was buried October 21, 1540, and he married secondly, June 19, 1541, Agnes Harrison, whose sister, Isabell Harrison, married at West Halton, November 14, 1546, as second wife, Robert Hill, and had a son Gregorie (George) baptized there on July 25, 1549. If this George Hill was identical with George Hill of Burton-upon-Stather, and Margery was a daughter of John and Agnes Westobie, then George and Margery were first cousins.

WILLIAMSON.

Robert Williamson, born circa 1505, appears upon the Lay Subsidy Roll of Winteringham, Parish of Lindsey, northwestern Lincolnshire, for the years 1545-46. Married about 1525, Jenet, whose surname is not known. His will was dated at Winteringham, October 22, 1553, and proved at Lincoln April 26, 1554. He bequeathed his estate to wife Jenet,[1] and to his son, William, when twenty-two years of age; to son, Thomas, at sixteen years; and daughters, Isabel Dyndysdale, Margery, Helen and Margaret. Jenet, his widow, also left a will, signed on October 6, 1555, and proved February 5, 1555-56.

Children of Robert and Jenet Williamson:

1. Isabel Williamson, born circa 1530; married ——— Dyndysdale.
2. Margery Williamson, born circa 1532.
3. William Williamson, born circa 1534.
4. Thomas Williamson, born circa 1538; died after 1598-99; married 1st ———; 2nd, April 28, 1583, Mary Waddingham; buried April 20, 1620.
5. Helen Williamson, born circa 1540.
6. Margaret Williamson, born circa 1542.

Thomas Williamson, the elder, was born circa 1538, as he was under sixteen in 1553. He married and had a son and a daughter born before 1563, when the Winteringham Parish Register begins, hence their baptisms are not recorded. There were two other sons, one baptized in 1564, and another in 1567. The name of his wife and the mother of these children is not known. As Thomas Williamson, the elder, he married for a second time, April 28, 1583, Mary Waddingham, and had four more children, all baptized at Winteringham. We find him on the Lay Subsidy Roll for 1588-89 and 1598-99, with his son, Thomas, Junior. Thomas Williamson, the elder, died after 1598-99. Mary, widow of Thomas, Senior, was buried April 20, 1620.

1. Agnes Williamson, born circa 1560; married June 17, 1583, Myles Luddington.
2. THOMAS WILLIAMSON, born circa 1562; buried June 3, 1614; married 1st, MARGARET ————; buried August 2, 1609; married 2nd, December 10, 1610, Elizabeth Parkyn; buried October 13, 1627.
3. Robert Williamson, baptized February 24, 1564; buried June 6, 1566.
4. John Williamson, baptized November 27, 1567; married ————; churchwarden 1602.

CHILDREN OF THOMAS WILLIAMSON AND 2ND WIFE, MARY WADDINGHAM:

5. Robert Williamson, baptized September 19, 1584; buried June 24, 1585.
6. Margaret Williamson, baptized February 7, 1590-91.
7. Margery Williamson, baptized March 31, 1596; buried June 27, 1597.
8. Marie Williamson, baptized July 5, 1598; buried August 28, 1600.

THOMAS WILLIAMSON, son of Thomas Williamson, the elder, and his first wife, was born about 1562. He is designated on the church register as "the younger", but on the Lay Subsidy Roll for 1596 to 1599, he is called "Jr." to distinguish him from his father, who appears upon the same roll as "Sr." His first wife was Margaret, surname unknown, who was buried August 2, 1609. Their children were Robert, Thomas, Elizabeth, William and Mary. None of these children's baptisms are recorded at Winteringham. On December 10, 1610, he married, as a second wife, Elizabeth Parkyn, and had two sons. Thomas Williamson, Junior, was buried on June 3, 1614, his widow, Elizabeth, being appointed his administrator.[2] She was buried on October 13, 1627, Letters of Administration on her estate being issued to her step-daughter, Mary,[3] there being two minor children, Thomas, aged thirteen, and Robert, aged eleven.

READER OF APPLEBY, WINTERTON AND WINTERINGHAM.[1]

JOHN READER, a miller of Appleby and Winterton, Lincolnshire, England, was born about the year 1560. His first wife, Faith, was buried at Appleby May 11, 1602.

A William Reder appears upon the Lay Subsidy Roll of Appleby in 1547. His wife, apparently, was Ellen Othill, daughter of William Othill of Appleby, whose will, dated March 12 and proved March 20, 1532-33, names sons William, Robert, Thomas and John Othill, and daughters Margaret Empringham and Ellen Reder.[2] William and Ellen Othill Reder are believed to have been the grandparents of Thomas Reder (Reader) of Appleby, who was born about 1556-1558, and buried January 10, 1583-84, Agnes, his wife, being interred twelve days later; and John Reader, born about 1560. One of the items in John Reader's will, 1626, reads: "I will that my sonne William Reeder must pay unto my three Children Elizabeth, Margaret and Edward Reeder the Some of three pounds which I lent unto him beinge the grandmother's gift given unto them to my sonne Robert for the behoofe of the children."

Appleby is situated on the Roman road, anciently called Hermen or Old Street, nearly eight miles northwest of Brigg and about the same distance southwest of Barton. It is supposed to have been one of the principal Roman stations. The church is a fine building, dedicated to Saint Bartholomew.[3]

John Reader married second, at Appleby, October 17, 1602, Anne Clayton, who was buried there, November 5, 1603. He married third, at Appleby, June 17, 1604, Alison Corbricke.

[1] "There does not seem to have been a clear distinction between the names of Reader and Ryder, and you will have noticed that several times in the Appleby and the other registers, these people are called Ryder." (Canon C. W. Foster, 1909.)

Between 1611 and 1619, John Reader settled at Winterton; his last child, Edward, was baptized there, as the son of John and Alice, May 16, 1619.

Winterton, formerly called Winterington, is generally considered to be of Saxon origin, probably from that race having frequently wintered there. It is bounded on the east by Hermen or Old Street, on the west by the Cliff-hills, and is eight miles west by south of Barton. This place was of much importance to the Romans, and is still a flourishing town. About the year 797, the Danes frequently overran and destroyed this part of Lincolnshire, and a numerous fleet came in that year and laid waste the whole country adjacent, and after taking much booty from the land along the Trent, returned home. This section was the scene of continued strife until the Norman conquest. The Church of Winterton, dedicated to All Saints, is a spacious edifice, in the form of a cross, with a tower at the west end, on the top of which are carved many grotesque heads.[1]

John Reader was buried at Winterton June 10, 1626. His will, made May 18, 1626, was proved at Gainsborough on October 9.

The Will of John Reader, 1626.[2]

Item I will that my sonne Wllm Reeder must pay unto my three Children Elizabeth Margaret & Edward Reeder the Some of three pound which I lent unto him beinge the grandmothers gift given unto them to my sonne Robert for the behoofe of the children. Witnesses, Thomas Miller and John Merryman.

Proved at Gainsborough October 9, 1626.

John Reader had twelve children, the first ten of whom were baptized at Appleby.

[1] A word is omitted in the original instrument.

CHILDREN OF JOHN READER AND 1ST WIFE, FAITH:

1. Robert Reader, baptized August 14, 1587; died young.
2. Beatrice Reader, baptized September 16, 1588; married at Appleby November 17, 1612, Michael Beacock. She was described in her father's will, as of Santon. Santon is a hamlet in the parish of Appleby; its name is supposed to have been derived from its flying sands, which have ruined much of the neighbouring property. The Romans had a pottery here.[1]
3. THOMAS READER, baptized March 22, 1593-94. His wife's name was ELLEN.
4. William Reader, baptized September 16, 1599; married in Winterton, June 11, 1626, Anne Baggaley.
5. Alice Reader, baptized February 15, 1600-01; not mentioned in her father's will.

CHILD OF JOHN READER AND 2ND WIFE, ANNE CLAYTON:

6. John Reader, baptized November 1, 1603.

CHILDREN OF JOHN READER AND 3RD WIFE, ALISON CORBRICKE:

7. Robert Reader, baptized June 8, 1605; appointed executor of his father's will.
8. Mary Reader, baptized February 8, 1606-07; not mentioned in her father's will.
9. George Reader, baptized November 24, 1608.
10. Elizabeth Reader, baptized October 5, 1611.
11. Margaret Reader, mentioned in her father's will.
12. Edward Reader, baptized at Winterton, as the son of John and Alice, May 16, 1619.

THOMAS READER, son of John and Faith Reader of Appleby and Winterton, was baptized at Appleby, March 22, 1593-94.[2] He settled in the neighboring town of Winteringham, where his children were baptized. There Thomas Reader was buried October 2, 1640, and Ellen, his widow, on January 10, 1656-57.[3]

CHILDREN OF THOMAS AND ELLEN READER:

1. George Reader, baptized September 12, 1630. He was of Kingston-upon-Hull when appointed guardian of his niece Anne, by the will of his brother Edward, 1679, and signed bond of guardianship September 8, 1679.
2. Anthony Reader, of Winteringham, baptized February 6 or 10, 1632-33; was appointed a supervisor of the will of his brother Edward, 1679. Churchwarden of Winteringham 1688, and buried there November 4, 1708. His wife's name was Jane.
3. John Reader, of Winterton, baptized March 15, 1634-35; appointed a supervisor of the will of his brother Edward, 1679.

4. Faith Reader, baptized March 5, 1636-37; married May 4, 1664, William Shankster.
5. Edward Reader, of Winteringham, baptized July 7, 1639; married in Winteringham, May 4, 1664, Anne Hurd.

Edward Reader of Winteringham, Lincolnshire, son of Thomas and Ellen Reader of the same place, was baptized there, July 7, 1639. He married in Winteringham, May 4, 1664, Anne Hurd, sister of John Hurd of Horkstow,[1] who

[1] John Hurd of Horkstow married first, January 8, 1656, Alice Cotton, who was buried January 11, 1679; married second, 1681, Anne ———, and had issue: Dorothie, bap. Aug. 20, bur. Oct. 2, 1682; John, bap. Aug. 31, 1684, bur. Nov. 1 or 10, 1686; Anne, bap. Mar. 9, 1680, bur. June 11, 1684; Mary, bap. Oct. 31 or 17, 1686; Ann, bap. Jan. 18, 1687; Hannah, born and bap. Apr. 27, 1689; Henry, bap. Aug. 16, 1691. John Hurd was churchwarden 1661, 1680, 1682, 1683; sidesman, 1681. He was buried Nov. 26 or 27, 1694, and Anne, his widow, married Nov. 30, 1699, Richard Cooke. (Horkstow Parish Records.)

The Hurd family has been most difficult to trace, owing largely to the many variations of the surname as it appears upon records. It has been found as Heward, Haward, Hawd, Hoorde, Hirde, Hide and Hurd. There was a George Hoorde, or Hurde, in West Halton, who married, May 13, 1618, Ann Odling, and had a daughter, Fayth, baptized May 25, 1619, and a son, John, baptized December 1 and buried February 28, 1621-22. Ann Odling was perhaps the daughter of Peter Odling, buried June 2, 1621. (West Halton Par. Reg.) And then, in Burton-upon-Stather, there was a George Hurd, who married Jane Thorpe in 1662, was churchwarden 1664, and was buried January 10, 1666. An Isabel Huard was born July 1, 1670. (Par. Reg. Burton-upon-Stather.)

In Winterton, 1562-63, we find William and Elizabeth Hawd, Hawed, and a Christopher Hide who married Phillis Dunderdale, 1629. (Winterton Par. Reg.)

From St. Peters Parish, Waddingham, we glean the following: Thomas and Ann Hurd had a daughter, Ann, baptized and died November, and a son, Thomas, buried in December, 1643; another daughter, Anne, was baptized December 25, 1644; a son, William, on December 10, 1648; and a daughter, Elizabeth, on June 2, 1651. Thomas Hurde married, August 23, 1653, Alice Steeper, perhaps a second wife. Robert Heward was churchwarden 1669-1670. Robert and Elizabeth Heward had a daughter, Isabell, baptized November 28, 1670, and Jemima on May 17, 1674. (Waddingham, St. Peters, Par. Reg.) Waddingham is hardly more than four miles south of Winterton. There was a George Hurd at Bottesford, close by Winterton, whose wife, Eme, was buried there in 1599. (Bottesforde Par. Reg.) It is quite possible that Anne, daughter of Thomas and Ann Hurde of Waddingham, was the same who married Edward Reader in Winterton, 1664. She was born circa 1644.

evidently died before her husband as she is not mentioned in his will. His sister, Faith, was married the same day.

He was buried in Winteringham, August 5, 1679. His will was made August 5, and proved at Lincoln, September 8, 1679.

JACKSON.

Ralph Jackson,[1] of Winterton, Lincolnshire, born circa 1570, was married at Winterton July 1, 1593, to Agnes Kempe. He was buried October 14, 1601, and Agnes married, for a second husband, July 19, 1607, John Pearson. Ralph and Agnes had three sons, Richard, Robert and Anthony, all baptized at Winterton.

Children of Ralph Jackson and Agnes Kempe:

1. Richard Jackson, baptized April 14, 1594.
2. Robert Jackson, baptized February 12, 1596; may be same who married Ursula ———, and had a son John buried at Winterton, March 1616-17. An Ursula Jackson, widow, was buried at Winteringham March 18, 1639.
3. Anthony Jackson, baptized February 2, 1599; buried April 19, 1634; married July 11, 1627, Elizabeth Mitchell, baptized December 9, 1604.

[1] Canon Foster affirms that this Ralph Jackson is the father of Anthony Jackson of Winteringham, therefore it is upon the following letter, received from Canon Foster in the spring of 1932, that we start the Jackson pedigree with Ralph and Agnes. "I have had the Jackson wills at Lincoln re-examined and notes in the form of pedigrees made of those which I could not find and had abstracts. These notes do not add to the pedigree sent by me to Mr. R. Winder Johnson 29 October, 1910. * * * That pedigree shows the following descent. Ralph Jackson of Winterton, buried at Winterton 14 October, 1601, married at Winterton July 1, 1593, Agnes Kempe. They had son Anthony, of Winteringham, baptized at Winterton February 2, 1599, married at Winteringham July 11, 1627, Elizabeth Mitchell, baptized at Winteringham December 9, 1604." The following, taken from Winterton parish register, might seem to throw some doubt upon the above.

1624 June 6 Antonie Jackson & Susanna Hallowell mar.
1625 Aug. 24 Rebecca, dau. of Antonie Jackson and Susan bap.
1627 Aug. 12 Tho. son of Anto: & Susanna Jackson bap.
1628 Sept. 10 Wm son of Anto. & Susanna Jackson bap.

However, as Canon Foster is very careful and most particular in tracing pedigrees, we have no reason to question his accuracy in this particular case. Anthony was a most common name in the Jackson families of Yorkshire and Lincolnshire.

BARTON STREET
BARROW-UPON-HUMBER

ANTHONY JACKSON, yeoman, baptized at Winterton February 2, 1599-1600, youngest son of Ralph and Agnes Kempe Jackson, removed to Winteringham and married there, on July 11, 1627, Elizabeth Mitchell, baptized at Winteringham, December 9, 1604, daughter of Robert Mitchell and Margaret Lindley, of the same place. The children of Anthony and Elizabeth Mitchell Jackson were baptized at the Winteringham parish church.

"The village of Winteringham stands on the summit and declivity of an elevated situation, which is washed at its base by the river Humber. It is a long, straggling place, about eight miles west of Barton. Upon a rising ground at the east of the present village, where the Roman road from Lincoln to the Humber terminates, has been a town called Old Winteringham, with a beach for ships. The place was considered by Doctor Stukeley to have been the Ad Abum of the Romans. The manor of Winteringham was anciently in the possession of the Marmions, one of whom, in the second year of Edward the second, obtained a charter for a weekly market at this place. The church is of early English architecture, containing lancet arched windows."[1]

Anthony Jackson was buried at Winteringham April 19, 1634. Letters of Administration on his estate were granted to his widow, Elizabeth,[2] April 30, 1634. George Michaell, alias Mitchell, was surety.[3] Elizabeth, the widow, probably married, July 20, 1635, Brian West.

CHILDREN OF ANTHONY JACKSON AND ELIZABETH MITCHELL:

1. Robert Jackson, baptized September 11, 1628; mentioned in the will of his uncle, George Mitchell, in 1638; married 1st, at Winteringham, June 4, 1651, Judith Malton; buried there January 13, 1660-61. Robert Jackson married 2nd, at Winteringham, May 2, 1663, Judith Snawden; buried at Winteringham May 27, 1667. He married 3rd, at Winteringham, November 12, 1667, Mary Robinson. Issue, seven children.

3. Thomas Jackson, baptized at Winteringham February 19, 1631-32.

Anthony Jackson, of Winteringham, son of Anthony Jackson and Elizabeth Mitchell, was baptized at Winteringham, December 1, 1629; buried there, August 29, 1698. He married first, at Winteringham, November 18, 1657, Elizabeth Akrod, buried at the same place, March 21, 1666-67. Anthony Jackson married second, at Winteringham, July 11, 1667, Catharine Chapman. His children were all baptized at Winteringham.

Children of Anthony Jackson and 1st Wife, Elizabeth Akrod:

1. Thomas Jackson, baptized April 23, 1659; buried February 4, 1661-62.
2. Robert Jackson, baptized September 15, 1661.

5. Thomas Jackson, of Winteringham, baptized April 19, 1668; buried July 12, 1709; married November 28, 1693, Anne Parkinson.
6. Jeremiah Jackson, baptized July 25, 1675; buried October 23, 1684.
7. Elizabeth Jackson, baptized May 26, 1678.

Thomas Jackson, of Winteringham, son of Anthony Jackson and Catharine Chapman, was baptized at Winteringham, April 19, 1668. He married at Winteringham, November 28, 1693, Anne Parkinson, daughter of John and Anne Parkinson, of Burringham.

Thomas Jackson was a churchwarden of Winteringham in 1697 and 1698. He was mentioned in the will of his brother-in-law, Jonathan Parkinson, in 1698. Thomas Jackson was buried at Winteringham July 12, 1709. The children were baptized at Winteringham.

CHILDREN OF THOMAS JACKSON AND ANNE PARKINSON:

1. Anne Jackson, baptized January 1, 1694-95.
2. Thomas Jackson, baptized November 22, 1696.
3. Alice Jackson, baptized February 6, 1697-98.
4. Catharine Jackson, baptized May 5, 1700.
5. ELIZABETH JACKSON, baptized September 17, 1704; buried at West Halton, July 3, 1779; married, at Horkstow, March 27, 1728, GEORGE HILL, of West Halton.

CHAPMAN.

CHAPMAN is quite an ancient surname in Lincolnshire. It was no doubt derived from the Anglo Saxon "ceap", trade—thus tradesman, merchant. It is very difficult to trace families that moved about frequently, especially so if those moves were accomplished before it became compulsory to keep parish registers. There was a Chapman family in Kirton in Lindsey, a village twenty miles south of Winteringham, Winterton being two miles distant from the latter place, of whom we have records dating from 1484. Many of this family removed from Kirton about the middle of the next century, and since we find the Chapmans of Kirton and those of Winterton-Winteringham carrying identical Christian names, without doubt they were all related, yet which of the two, the Kirton or the Winterton, was the original stock is merely a matter of conjecture. The following Kirton records are found in the churchwarden's account of the parish.

From then on until 1659, the following of this surname appear as tenants or churchwardens of Kirton Parish: Alexander, Thomas, Margaret, Henry, John, William and Robert. Thomas Chapman, tenant, 1627-1656; George Chapman, overseer of the poor, 1631; Matthias Chapman, church warden, 1643; Silvester Chapman, church warden, 1645; Edward Chapman, church warden, 1647; Thomas Chapman, the younger, was a tenant 1586-1623. Those of the Chapman family buried within the church were: Alexander Chapman, 1596; Margaret Chapman, 1600; Thomas Chapman, Sen., 1601; Thomas Chapman, Jun., 1601; Henry Chapman, 1602; Agnes Chapman, 1603; Henry Chapman, 1604; John Chapman, 1616; William Chapman, 1616; Robert Chapman, 1617; Thomas Chapman, 1617; Susanna, wife of Gilbert Chapman, 1625; Agnes Chapman, widow, 1625; Gilbert Chapman, 1632; Thomas Chapman, 1633; Ellenor Chapman, 1633; Robert Chapman, 1637; Anne Chapman, widow, 1640; Jenett Chapman, 1649; George Chapman, 1659.

The Chapman wills yield the following:

Three brothers, John, Robert and Thomas, all died in Kirton within a year of each other. Their father was Thomas

Chapman, of 1584. He was then designated as "the younger", but after his death there were still his son and grandson Thomas, the latter of whom was given eventually the title of "younger". The ancestor of this family was evidently Richard Chapman, Senior, living 1484.

———— Chapman, of Kirton in Lindsey, died prior to 1615. Had three sons:

1. Robert Chapman.
2. Thomas Chapman.
3. John Chapman.

John Chapman died unmarried in 1615. Will dated October 6, proved the 20th, 1615,[2] in which he appoints his brother, Robert, executor, and names Robert's children, William, Silvester, Richard, Elizabeth, Isabel and Margaret; his brother Thomas; and names William Burrill and Francis Newton supervisors.

Thomas Chapman, brother of John and Robert, left a will dated October 2, and proved November 18, 1616.[3] He, too, was a bachelor, as he left all of his estate to his sister-in-law, Joan Chapman; nephew Thomas Chapman; to the six children of his brother Robert, as above named. Other legatees were William Burrell, wife and children, and Francis Newton's wife and children.

Robert Chapman, named as executor of his brother John's will, 1615, died intestate, Letters Testamentary being issued November 8, 1616, to his wife, Johanne, alias Jenette, Chambers, the sureties being William Burrell, yeoman, of Kirton, and Francis Newton, of Kirton, husbandman. Jenett, widow of Robert Chapman, was the only child and heir of Hugh Chambers. Her will of January 20, 1648-49, names children, Silvester, Richard, Elizabeth, Margaret, wife of Ralph Chapman, and Isabel, wife of Thomas Stanley.[1] She was buried in the church.

George Chapman died at Kirton, 1658, leaving a wife, Elizabeth, and issue: John, William, George and Mary,[2] while a John Chapman, designated as "gentleman", died 1693-94, who, by his will, names mother, Elizabeth, only child Robert, and brothers and sisters, George, Mathias, Anne Walker, Katherine Cooke and Marie.[3]

The Lay Subsidy Rolls show that in—1542–46 William Chapman was in Winterton.

1542–44 Edward and William Chapman were in Winteringham.
1545–46 Richard and Thomas Chapman were in Kyrton.

CATHERINE CHAPMAN, born circa 1645, was married at Winteringham, July 11, 1667, to Anthony Jackson, but neither this church register nor that of Winterton show any one of the name of Chapman as parishioners for many years prior to and after her birth, 1645, nor do we find any of the name as residents of Winteringham parish at the time of her marriage, hence we have been unable to identify her parents.

From 1606 to 1618, there was a Chapman family in Althorpe, the parish seat of Burringham, but unfortunately the church records are missing from 1619 to 1660, after which we find many entries of this name. Evidence, however, is conclusive that Catherine Chapman was a descendant of this Chapman family of northeastern Lincolnshire. For issue, see Jackson Sketch.

MITCHELL OF WINTERINGHAM.

Thomas Mitchell, webster, of Winteringham, Lincolnshire, England, died in Winteringham in 1565. The name of his wife has not been preserved.

Child of Thomas Mitchell of Winteringham:

1. John Mitchell, buried May 31, 1595; married, Winteringham, October 13, 1566, Agnes Tooe; died 1628. No clue to her ancestry has been discovered.

John Mitchell, of Winteringham, son of Thomas Mitchell of the same place, married there, October 13, 1566, Agnes Tooe. She was evidently the daughter of Agnes Tooe of Winteringham, a widow, who married Henry Lindley, also of Winteringham. Henry Lindley died in March or April, 1562, devising by will " to Annas (Agnes) my wife all such now remaining as she brought with her when we were married

[1] Old Lindley, or Lindley, is in Thornley in the township of Stainland, southwest of Halifax, near Bradford, Yorkshire. On January 9, 1333-34, John de Lynley was one of the witnesses to a grant in Sowood, and of a plot in Rawroyd, both in Stainland lying near a brook called Elland (Eland).

In 1365, Henry, son of Helyas de Lynleye was a witness to a grant in the territory of "Lynleye lying in a place called Thornlyley." This family bore for arms: Argent, on a chief sable, three hawksheads erased. There are several memorial windows to these Lyndleys in the Halifax Parish Church. (Yorkshire Arch. Soc. Pub., Vol. XXIX, pp. 8, 106, 107, 156, 159.)

June 30, 1383, there was a grant by Robert Lynlei and William Lister to Henry de Sotehill, of all their lands and tenements in Ardeslowe and Haya. Witnesses, Sir John de Kendall, Adam de Morlei and others. Ardeslowe (Ardsley) is close to Morley and Rothwell, all three not far from Leeds in Yorkshire. The Rothwell parish registers begin in 1538, and here we find the names of Richard, Robert, William, Alys, Francis, Thomas and John Lynley, Lyndley. One Richard Lyndley was baptized at Rothwell Church March 11, 1542-43. (Yorkshire Arch. Soc. Pub., Vol. XXIX, pp. 106, 107; Rothwell Parish Register.)

The names of the other children of Richard Lindley appear in the wills quoted below. The name of his wife, who predeceased him, is not known.

CHILDREN OF RICHARD LINDLEY:

1. Henry Lindley, of Winteringham, married the widow, Agnes Tooe. His will dated February 7, 1561-62, was proved April 4, 1562. He made bequests to the mother church of Lincoln and to the church of Winteringham. He devised "to Annas my wife all such now remaining as she brought with her when we were married and I will that she my said wife shall pay unto Esabell Too and Annas Too her daughters their child's portion which is 26s 8d also I give to my said wife a swine," etc. To his son Anthony he gave ten quarters of barley, one of which was in the hands of Edward Ledes gentleman of Winteringham. If Anthony died before of age, then one half to testator's wife and half to his daughter Margaret. He mentioned as legatees: Thomas Crosby and Isabel Crosby, children of John Crosby of Winteringham; John Lynley, son of Francis; Sander Wright; Esabell Barley; Catheren Pape; Jane, Matthew and Margaret Lynley; Edward Crust; Francis, James and George Lynley; Henry Dods and Jenett Lawmer. Residue to daughter Margaret who was appointed executrix; brother, Francis Lynley to be supervisor of daughter, Margaret. "I desire my father Richard Lynley & John Crosby to be supervisors & for their pains to have 20d each." Witnessed by Sir John Toft, my curate, Richard Lynley, Anthony Ledes and William Bilton, with others.[1]
2. Matthew Lindley, of Winteringham, married there, October 6, 1577, Alice Wright. He was buried at Winteringham, December 24, 1589. His will[2] dated December 21, 1589, was proved at Lincoln, February 11, 1589-90.
3. Francis Lindley, of Winteringham, was buried there, December 22, 1603. His will, dated December 14, 1603, proved at Lincoln January 6, 1603-4, mentioned children, John, Thomas, William and Joan, and was witnessed by Thomas Maultbye, George Watson and others.[3]
4. GEORGE LINDLEY, of Winteringham, yeoman; buried there April 1, 1614; married at Winterton, May 10, 1572, ELIZABETH COOKE.

COOKE OF WINTERTON.[1]

Richard Cooke, yeoman, of Winterton, Lincolnshire, England, born about 1487, was a witness to the will of Thomas Cooke of the same parish, May 13, 1537.[2] He died in Winterton between March 2, 1537-38 and August 9, 1540, the date and probate of his will. His wife, Maude, was appointed executrix.

The Will of Richard Cooke, 1540.[3]

[1] "It is difficult to know what to do about the certificates from Winterton because I find that about half the dates in the register before 1600 are wrong by one or two years. The scribe who made the copy of the original register in 1599 got the entries into wrong years. By comparing the register with contemporary wills I have settled the right dates. The vicar of Winterton, however, can only certify the entries as he finds them in the register."

"The mistakes are accounted for by the fact that in 1599 all parish registers were ordered to be copied into parchment books, and the early registers which exist now are those copies. I have frequently found in other cases that the copyist of 1599 has failed to understand the way in which the years were reckoned in the older register from which he copied, and this has no doubt been the case here. The transcripts before that date are really a better authority than the registers themselves and frequently contain details which do not appear in the registers.

"The more I search both the register and the transcript of a parish the more I am struck with the importance of searching both records. There are quite a number of cases in which an entry is omitted from one record or the other. Also, as I have mentioned before, almost all the existing parish registers that go back to the 16th century are copies made about 1599 from still older registers. In the period before 1599 the differences between the registers and the transcripts are often very numerous. The transcript is generally the fuller record of the two." (Canon C. W. Foster, Lincolnshire, 1909.)

PARKINSON OF SCUNTHORPE AND BURRINGHAM.

John Parkinson, of Dedithorpe in the parish of Althorpe, Lincolnshire, died intestate, Letters of Administration on his estate being issued August 24, 1587, to his son, Robert Parkinson, and son-in-law, Anthony Harrison.[1] He may have been John Parkinson, the elder, of Gunness, who, with John Parkinson, the younger, on April 18, 1571, received a charter from Richard Stampe,[2] and who, as John Parkinson "of Gonasse, agricola", with wife Agnes, by indenture dated May 18, 1572, deeded lands in " Burryngham and Thorneknowle, to John Healey, of Burringham." Robert Parkinson, of Burringham, son of Robert Parkinson of Scunthorpe, with wife Anne, executed a deed to George Healy of Burringham, which he signed by a seal, a lion rampant.[3]

Frodingham and Scunthorpe lie about six or seven miles northwest of Brigg, while Gunness is co-extensive with Glanford-Brigg, in Brigg. Burringham and Althorpe lie about the same distance a little to the southwest of Frodingham, on the river Trent.

Children of John Parkinson:

1. Robert Parkinson, buried November 20, 1613; married 1st, Joan ————; buried December 8, 1599; married 2nd, Elizabeth ————.
2. ———— (daughter), married Anthony Harrison and had two sons, Nicholas and Robert Harrison.

Robert Parkinson, yeoman, of Scunthorpe in the parish of Frodingham, Lincolnshire, was assessed for goods valued at £3, and taxed eight shillings, in the 39th year of Queen Elizabeth's reign (1596-97), and in the 41st year of her reign, (1598-99).[4] His first wife, Joan, was buried at Frodingham December 8,

CHILDREN OF JOHN AND ANNE PARKINSON:

1. Jonathan Parkinson, of Burringham; married at Bottesford, November 18, 1691, Clementia Popple. His will, dated December 5, 1698, proved at Lincoln December 21, 1698, appointed his wife executrix. No issue.
2. Ellen Parkinson, not named in her father's will, but in the will of her brother, John Parkinson, 1705.
3. John Parkinson, of Burringham, mariner. His will, dated August 23, 1705, proved at Gainsborough, October 27, 1708, mentioned his father, mother and sisters, Ellen Parkinson and Anne Jackson, the father then being dead, and appointed his wife, Ruth, executrix. His son, John Parkinson, of Burringham, in his will of October 2, 1715, is termed "gentleman".
4. ANNE PARKINSON, married, November 28, 1693, THOMAS JACKSON of Winteringham.

RYDER FAMILY.

THOMAS RYDER,[1] (Rither, De Ryther), and his two brothers, Lawrence and William Ryder, were residents of the Isle of Axholme,[2] Lindsey, Lincolnshire, England, during the first half of the sixteenth century. Their father was living in 1533 when Lawrence made his will, but his name has not been discovered.[3] A Sir Thomas Ryder was witness to the will of William Morse, of Friskney, on the east coast of Lincolnshire, in 1516,[4] and since the Ryders of Epworth and Burringham apparently belonged to the gentry, Sir Lawrence Ryder[5] having been one of the witnesses to the will of Katherine, the wife of Lawrence Ryder of Epworth, 1543, and Robert Ryder of Burringham-Althorpe, the husband of Anne Hall, signed his will, 1599, with a seal bearing a lion rampant, and still another Robert Ryder, an adjoining neighbor to Anne Ryder Parkinson at Althorpe, is designated on the Lay Subsidy Roll of Althorpe, 1609-1610, as Robert Ryder, Esquire,—he died in 1638,—Sir Thomas Ryder might well have been the ancestor of Thomas Ryder of Epworth. All of the above named villages are in the Isle of Axholme. Lawrence Ryder married Katherine, her surname unknown, whose death

[1] This surname is so often confused with that of Reeder that it is sometimes difficult to discriminate.

[2] A flat and formerly marshy tract eighteen miles long and about five miles broad in the extreme northwest of Lincolnshire, encircled by the rivers Trent, Don, Torne and Idle.

[3] The following pedigree of Ryder has been compiled from notes and data found among the late Mr. Johnson's papers. These notes are far from complete. For instance, in the abstract of the will of Thomas Ryder, 1531, two sons "John" are named. No explanation is made of this. It may be that one of these Johns should have been William. Ryder, Rider, is the English form of the French De Ryther, one of that surname having settled in England about the time of the Conquest.

occurred in 1543. She left a will dated November 30, and proved January 25, of that year, which was witnessed by one Sir Lawrence Ryder. She bequeaths certain of her property to Lawrence Ryder, who was the son of Thomas, and requested that she be buried in the church of St. Andrew in Epworth. Lawrence Ryder's will, dated December 3, 1533, was probated twenty years later, February 23, 1553-54. He named wife Katherine, who died ten years later, and Lawrence and Thomas Ryder, his nephews, sons of his brother, Thomas Ryder, as legatees, his brother William being a witness to the testament.[1] Lawrence and Katherine Ryder had no children. We have no further information regarding William Ryder. Thomas Ryder, the third brother, was the ancestor of the Epworth, Haxey and Burringham-Althorpe family.

Thomas Ryder, of Epworth, had wife Joan and four children, Thomas, Lawrence, John and Joan, all of whom he appointed executors of his will. He died between July 21, 1531, and January 25, 1531-32, the date and probate of his will, having directed that he be buried in the churchyard of St. Andrew's Church, Epworth.[2]

CHILDREN OF THOMAS AND JOAN RYDER:

1. THOMAS RYDER, of Haxey, died 1559; married MARGARET ————.
2. Lawrence Ryder,[3] who was no doubt the Lawrence Ryder, Vicar, who witnessed the will of Thomas Ryder, Junior, of Haxey, 1550.
3. John Ryder, of Epworth, died 1583, (will dated May 28, 1582, proved April 20, 1583);[4] married Julyan ————. Besides naming his wife and children in his will, he makes bequests to John and Ann Ryder, children of his brother Thomas.
4. Joan Ryder, named in father's will, 1531.

THOMAS RYDER, of Haxey, son of Thomas and Joan Ryder, of Epworth, died 1559, and was buried, at his own request, in [3] It might appear at first reading that it was this Lawrence who died in 1553, but we have had to eliminate this possibility. That Lawrence had no brother William and the notes indicate his father was living when Lawrence made his will in 1533.

St. Nicholas' Church at Haxey. One of the witnesses to his will, (February 1550-October 3, 1559) was Sir Lawrence Rider, Vicar. He appointed his wife, Margaret, co-executor with his son John, and names his sons, John, Thomas, Lawrence and William.[1]

CHILDREN OF THOMAS AND MARGARET RYDER:

1. Thomas Ryder, Junior, of Haxey, died unmarried 1589.[2] Mentions by will his brother, William Ryder and his two sons, Thomas and David.
2. Lawrence Ryder.
3. John Ryder, of Haxey, executor of his father's will.
4. WILLIAM RYDER, of Burringham, in Althorpe Parish, 1572; married ————.

WILLIAM RYDER, of Burringham, in the parish of Althorpe, appears upon the Duchy of Cornwall Court Roll, 1572. While we have no exact proof upon which to base the claim, circumstantial evidence points to this William as being identical with William, the son of Thomas Ryder, Junior, and wife Margaret, of Haxey. Thomas and Margaret Ryder had a son Thomas, and a son William, the latter seeming to disappear from Haxey about the time we find a William Ryder in Burringham, a village not many miles away. Lawrence Ryder, a sailor, made his will January 31, 1600-01, perhaps when on a voyage, for he names his brother Robert, although the latter had died in September 1599. He evidently had not yet learned of his brother's death. He also names three children of his sister Jane, whose husband, John Watson, had died in 1576, and she was in all probability deceased by 1600, and it was Lawrence's nephew, John Watson, Junior, who was named as supervisor of his will and acted as one of the witnesses. Robert Ryder, the brother, also of Burringham, in his will, names his brother, Lawrence Ryder, and daughter, Anne, or " to either of the other children ", Katherine and Marie being the other two children of Lawrence. Robert also bequeaths to John and Edmund, sons, and the two daughters of his sister, Jane Watson, directing that his brother, Lawrence Ryder, and the above John Watson should "have the tuition of his children", also naming them as supervisors. John Watson, Senior, in his will, leaves his wife and family in the care of Thomas Ryder, making bequests to Lawrence Ryder and his daughter, Marie. All the above seems undeniably to tie these families together. We have nothing further of William Ryder.

CHILDREN OF WILLIAM RYDER:

1. ROBERT RYDER, born circa 1565; buried September 20, 1599; married ANNE HALL.
2. Lawrence Ryder, of Burringham, died 1601; married Barbara ————. He was a sailor.

CHILDREN OF LAWRENCE AND BARBARA RYDER:

i. Anne Ryder, named by her uncle, Robert Ryder, in his will, 1599.
ii. Katherine Ryder.
iii. Marie Ryder.

3. Thomas Ryder, perhaps same named in the will of Thomas Ryder of Haxey as a son of William Ryder, 1587, and may be the same who died and was buried in the Haxey churchyard in the winter of 1630, leaving wife, Mary, sons Robert and John, and daughter Mary Townsend.[1] Robert Ryder, of Haxey, died 1661; had wife Ellena, and children, Thomas and Marie.[2]
4. Davye Ryder, named in Thomas Ryder's will, 1587.
5. Jane Ryder, born circa 1566; married John Watson, Senior, son of Lyon Watson, both of whom were named in the will of Robert Hall of Burringham, 1535. John Watson's will of May 1, 1576, names his wife, Jane, and sons, Lyon, Edmund and Rychard Watson. Bequeaths to Thomas Ryder, one kedle, etc., on condition that "he be good to my wife and children so long as he remain with them." He also makes certain bequests to Lawrence and Mary Ryder.

In his will, he directs that he be buried in the churchyard at Althorpe, devising his property to his wife, Anne, and children, Anne and Helen. He bequeathed certain of his belongings to his niece, Ann, daughter of his brother Lawrence; to John Watson, Junior, and Edmund Watson, his nephews; and names his brother, Lawrence Ryder, and nephew, John Watson, supervisors. The will reads in part as follows.

HALL OF BURRINGHAM.

A family of the surname of HALL was living in Burringham, Parish of Althorpe, Isle of Axholme, Lincolnshire, England, during the first part of the sixteenth century. There were three brothers, Robert, Thomas and Roger, and a sister Jenett. This family appears to have been of Bottesforde, a nearby village, as Robert, in his will, requested that he be buried at " St. Peters Bottesforth ". This will, dated July 18, 1535, names wife, Ann, and three children, Elizabeth, Mary and John, all under age when the will was proved March 6, 1535-36. He also names his brothers, Thomas and Roger, and sister Jenett, and mentions Lyon Watson and his son, John Watson, the latter being one of his witnesses.[1]

We find nothing further of this family until the beginning of the next century, when a Thomas Hall of Burringham died unmarried between November 30, 1600, the date of his will, and February 13, 1600-01, the date it was probated. He asked to be buried at Althorpe, and named a number of legatees, among whom were Robert Hall, the elder, who was made executor, Robert Hall, the younger, Thomas Hall and George Hall. The supervisors designated were Thomas Healey and John Watson, the latter acting as one of the witnesses.[2]

Of Roger and Jenett we know nothing beyond the mention of their names by their brother Robert in 1535. Thomas Hall, the other brother mentioned by Robert Hall, in all probability was the father of Thomas Hall and Robert Hall, Senior, the latter being named as executor of Thomas's will, 1600-1601, and Robert Hall, the younger, was no doubt the son of Robert, Senior, having been born about 1570, hence about thirty years old when Thomas died. The above were all of Burringham, and from 1600 on, the only ones of that surname found in this village are Robert Hall, born about 1570; George Hall, married Jane Reeder; Anne Hall, wife of Robert Ryder; Jane Hall; and Mary Hall, wife of Edward More. George, Anne, Jane and Mary are known to have been brother and sisters.

[1] Stow Archidiaconal Court. See Ryder Sketch.

[2] Stow Archidiaconal Court.

The Althorpe Parish Register does not begin until 1599, and then a break comes at 1621, there being none between the last named date and 1660, and there are no Hall wills between Robert's of 1535 and Thomas's of 1600.[1] We must therefore start this pedigree with Robert Hall, Senior.

Robert Hall, of Burringham, living 1600, was named executor of the will of Thomas Hall, perhaps his brother, and both sons of Thomas Hall of Burringham, living 1535. Neither the name of his wife, nor the date of his death is known. It is believed that he was the father of the following children.

Children of Robert Hall, Senior:

1. Anne Hall, born circa 1568; died 1645; married 1st, Robert Ryder, born circa 1565; buried September 20, 1599; married 2nd, April 13, 1600, Edmunde Younge.
2. Robert Hall, the younger, so designated in the will of Thomas Hall, 1600, was born about 1570; was living in 1639 when his son, George, died. His wife was no doubt the Anne Hall buried at Burringham March 29, 1616. His children were George, Roger, Thomas, William, Anne and Ellen. George Hall also names his uncle, George Hall, and aunt, Mary Hall More, and her daughter, Mary More.

Children of Robert Hall, the younger, and Anne, his Wife:

i. Thomas Hall, of Burringham. Will dated 1648, witnessed by George Watson and Matthew More. Widow, Esther, died 1658, leaving a will. Issue: George, the eldest, and Robert, only child of wife Esther.

[1] The Will of Thomas Hall of Burringham. Dated Nov. 30, 1600; proved Feb. 13, 1600-01. Desires to be buried at Althorpe. Legatees named were: Robert Johnson, Wm. Lambe's children, Katherine Robinson, John Robinson, Jane Marram, Robert Hall, the younger, Margerye Lackenfield, Thomas Hall, George Hall, Jane Johnson. Robert Hall, Sen., Executor. Thomas Healey and John Watson, Supervisors. Witnesses: John Watson and Laurence Hinchclyffe. (Stow Archideaconal Court.)

The Thomas Hall named in the above list of legatees is the same who had a son Lawrence baptized at Althorpe August 31, 1600, and was son of Robert Hall, Junior, or of George Hall, Senior.

ii. William Hall, of Burringham. Will 1647-1649. Had issue: George, Albern, Roger, William and Elizabeth.
iii. George Hall, of Burringham, mariner; bap. May 12, 1606; died between Jan. 24, 1639 and Mar. 18, 1639-40, the date and probate of his will. Wife, Elizabeth, who was named executor. No issue.
iv. Ann Hall, bap. June 19, 1608; bur. Sept. 12, 1608.
v. Helen Hall, bap. Sept. 8, 1610; mar. George Watson.
vi. Roger Hall, bap. Dec. 13, 1612; bur. July, 1614.
vii. Roger Hall, bap. Dec. 1, 1615.

3. George Hall, of Burringham, born circa 1580. Will dated 1648 and proved 1650. Married 1st, ————; 2nd, June 4, 1615, Jane Reeder, sister of William Reeder of Burringham.[1] He was named by his sister, Anne Hall (Ryder) Younge, in her will of 1644, who called him "husbandman of Burringham".

Children of George Hall and Jane Reeder:

i. John Hall, bap. Apr. 21, 1616.
ii. Robert Hall, bap. Sept. 21, 1617; had daughter Jane.
iii. Ann Hall, bap. Nov. 12, 1620; mar. William Popple; issue: Mary, Hannah and Margaret.
iv. Thomas Hall, of Burringham; born after 1621; died 1671, leaving a son George, under twenty-one.

4. Mary Hall, married October 6, 1606, Edward More, and had Mary and Matthew More.
5. Jane Hall, named by her sister, Anne Hall (Ryder) Younge, 1644.

CLAYTON.

CLAYTON (Cleton, Cleaton, Cleyton) was a very common name in Lindsey, North Lincolnshire, from at least the middle of the sixteenth century, but very little except in the way of parish registers is obtainable, as the family, for the most part, held no leased lands, hence very few wills and no inquisitions or land settlements upon heirs are on record. We therefore have to depend almost entirely upon parish registers, and these only too frequently contain gaps impossible to bridge at this late date, particularly when families moved from one village to another as the Claytons frequently appear to have done.

The earliest mention of this surname in Lincolnshire we have so far discovered is that of Thomas Clayton, who appears upon the Lay Subsidy Roll of Bilsby in 1545, a village near the coast of the North Sea, about six or seven miles southeast of Louth; Edmund Clayton, his son Thomas, and a George Clayton in Broughton, 1545-46; Richard Clayton in Appleby, 1545-50; and Agnes Clayton in Harbrough, 1545-56. These villages lie considerably inward in the northwestern, rather than the northeastern, part of the shire. Some of the Bilsby or Appleby, Claytons seem to have migrated, before 1552, northeastward to Great Grimsby, now the great seaport town of Grimsby, of which fishing is the principal industry, situated at the mouth of the river Humber, less than fifteen miles northeast of Louth.

The same Christian names were common to all of these families, such as John, Gilbert, Thomas and George, who were all householders in Great Grimsby, 1552-1564. Of these, Thomas married July 22, 1562, the name of his wife not being given, and this, together with the fact that we find no further record of this Thomas at Grimsby, leads to the conclusion that he must have lived elsewhere. Then, too, the Christian name of James appears quite frequently in this Grimsby family later on in the eighteenth century, one having been born about 1695, and died sometime after 1760. There were several James Claytons to follow him, but a list of his children has not been found.

At Grainthorpe, which is not far from Grimsby, being only a few miles to the south and near the coast, was a Clayton family in which the Christian names of Thomas, William, Matthew, Francis and James were most common, and all of these were repeatedly used by the East Halton Claytons, the earliest appearance of this name in that village being in 1652; and what is most interesting, Thomas, Matthew and Francis are especially noted as in use by the Appleby Claytons as early as 1588-1596, this family having been seated in Appleby as early as 1545.

An Anna Clayton was buried in East Halton in 1683, a Francis in 1689, and a Matthew in 1705. Thomas Clayton and Mary Moore were married at East Halton, October 29, 1672, and he was buried January 10, 1692-93. Another Thomas, also of East Halton, whose wife was Rosamunde, was buried September 7, 1771. He was churchwarden in 1724, and had issue: Elizabeth, born 1717; Thomas, born 1723; and Rosamunde, born 1731. Then a William Clayton was married at East Halton, May 19, 1705, to Elizabeth Cooke, and had a daughter baptized March 26, 1717, and another daughter, Anna, on December 30, 1722. He was buried May 15, 1724. He was administrator of the estate of his brother, Thomas, a bachelor, November 11, 1715, whose death was not recorded at East Halton.

Although William and Elizabeth Cooke Clayton were married in East Halton in 1705, the first recorded baptism in that parish of any children born to them was in 1717. It is, therefore, quite possible that there were other children, one of whom may have been the Francis who was baptized there March 9, 1713, whose parents are not named; another, perhaps, was the Thomas born about 1712 and buried November 9, 1752, and there may have been a third, James, born circa 1714-1718, ancestor of Ann Clayton Johnson.

Thomas Clayton of Grainthorpe was married there on May 23, 1692, to Frances Watson. He was buried March 31, 1720, and his widow, Frances, on December 26, 1731. Their children were all baptized in Grainthorpe.

Children of Thomas Clayton and Frances Watson:[1]

1. Elizabeth Clayton, baptized April 11, 1699.
2. Mary Clayton, baptized April, 1701; buried October 13, 1721.
3. Frances Clayton, baptized October 10, 1705; buried March 15, 1707-08.
4. Frances Clayton, baptized January 18, 1708-09.
5. James Clayton, baptized July 9, 1710; buried August 25, 1710.
6. William Clayton, baptized September 14, 1712.
7. James Clayton, baptized October 25, 1713.
8. Arthur Clayton, baptized August 7, 1715; buried August 26, 1719.

The above James Clayton, baptized October 25, 1713, may have been the James Clayton of East Halton, born circa 1714-1718, the grandfather of Ann Clayton Johnson.

All efforts to find proof of the parentage of James Clayton of East Halton have proved unavailing.

7. Mary Clayton, baptized December 28, 1755.
8. William Clayton, baptized November 5, 1758.
9. Elizabeth Clayton, baptized February 22, 1761.

James Clayton, Jr., of South Kelsey, Lincolnshire, son of James and Eleanor Clayton of East Halton, was baptized in East Halton, October 20, 1745. "On 16 May 1771 Appeared personally James Clayton of the parish of East Halton aged 26 years, & alleged that he intendeth to marry Ann Crow of the same parish, aged 24 years, &c. & prayed a license to solemnize such marriage in the Parish Church of East Halton aforesaid the usual place of abode of the said Ann Crow for the space of Four weeks last past, of the Truth of which he made Oath. Sworn the day & year above written before me, Chris. Epworth, Surrogate." The usual bond was given by James Clayton, on the same day, to which William Richel of Keelby was surety.[1]

In the register of East Halton Church appears this entry: "No. 74. James Clayton Batchelor of the Parish of South Kelsey and Ann Crow Spinster of this Parish were Married in this Church by License this sixteenth Day of May in the Year One thousand Seven Hundred and seventy one by me

[1] Marriage License in the custody of the Registrar of the Bishop of Lincoln.

CROW FAMILY.

William Crow of Trusthorpe, Lincolnshire, was churchwarden there in 1681. He had wife, Mary, and four children, two of whom were baptized at St. Peter's Church, Trusthorpe, and two whose births were not recorded. The Trusthorpe parish register begins in 1561, but many parts of it are either illegible or missing. However, evidence seems to point to the assumption that the two eldest, Mary and William, were born and baptized before the parents settled in this village. Trusthorpe is on the North Sea in the extreme eastern part of the county, while other nearby towns or villages on the seacoast or a short ways inward are Sutton-on-Sea, Mablethorpe, Theddlethorpe and Riston.

While 1674 is the earliest we find this name on the Trusthorpe parish register, there was a family of this surname in Mablethorpe as early as 1561, who were seated there at least several years earlier. The Mablethorpe Register begins in 1561, and records that John Craw (Crow) was then churchwarden. He held the same position the following year, when his son, Robert, was buried, March 12, 1562-63. There was also a Thomas Craw (Crow), perhaps brother of John, whose son, Thomas, was buried March 29, 1563, and a daughter, Isabel, was baptized January 20, 1565-66, and his wife, Isabel, was buried June 25, 1588. A Thomas Crow, churchwarden 1565, was buried December 13, 1572, and he may have been the father of John and the first named Thomas. There was still another Thomas Crow in Mablethorpe, who married Elizabeth ———— June 12, 1587. Her maiden name is not given. He was churchwarden in 1592-93, and was buried August 13, 1616. A second John Crow, possibly son of the first mentioned John, had a son, John, baptized June 19, 1597, and a son, Richard, on March 24, 1600-01.[1]

Mablethorpe is a town of considerable size, lying directly on the coast, about ten or twelve miles east south east of Louth.

[1] Mablethorpe Parish Register. These records are very incomplete.

It is now a watering place, and has a Coast Guard Station. Trusthorpe is hardly more than a mile directly south of Mablethorpe, and Sutton about the same distance south of Trusthorpe. Theddlethorpe lies two or three miles inland and not more than five miles northwest of Mablethorpe, and it is here, in this last described village, that we find the earliest mention of this surname, Isabel, William and Johan Crowe all appearing upon the Lay Subsidy Roll of Theddlethorpe, 1545-1546. These were undoubtedly the ancestors of the Mablethorpe and Trusthorpe families of Crow, as well as those of that surname who lived in a number of nearby parishes and villages.

William and Mary Crow of Trusthorpe had a daughter, Elizabeth, baptized there August 9, 1674, who was buried on October 29, 1677, or on September 1, 1679, and a son, John, baptized on September 13, 1678. They had a daughter, Mary, born circa 1670, who married, May 9, 1690, at Trusthorpe, Richard Goodbarne, or Goodborne, and a son, William, born circa 1672, whose records of baptism are yet to be found. A William Crow, designated as " Junior ", was living in Trusthorpe at the same time as William, son of William (the elder) and Mary, and, as the name "Thomas" appears among the children of this William, Junior, it is quite possible that his father was also Thomas, and a brother of William Crow, the elder, as William, born circa 1672, son of William, the elder, was a cousin to this William, Junior. The latter, designated "labourer", married as "Junior", November 16, 1708, Mary Shaw, and had issue: a daughter, Mary, baptized September 1, and buried September 20, 1709; William, baptized November 12, and buried November 15, 1710; Thomas, baptized September 8, 1716. William Crow, labourer, was buried December 29, 1718.

There was still a third William Crow, also related to the other two Williams, who was also living in Trusthorpe at this time. His wife, Ann, was buried February 8, 1696-97, having had issue: William, baptized March 12, 1692-93, buried August 25, 1693; Johanna, baptized July 5, 1694; and Thomas, baptized October 11, 1696. Johanna, or Joan, married June 29, 1713, Joseph Draby of Trusthorpe, and had issue: Anne, baptized January 3, 1713-14; John, baptized February 18, 1715-16; Mary, buried February 5, 1717-18; Mary, baptized and buried October 18, 1719; and Johannah, baptized January 28, 1721-22. Joseph Draby was buried May 18, 1721, and on August 6, 1726, Johanna, the widow, married Daniel Cook.[1]

William Crow, son of William Crow, the elder, names in his will, 1717, William Crow, Junior, Mary and Elizabeth Goodborne, and "Joney" wife of Joseph Draby, thereby indicating a close relationship between the several William Crows of Trusthorpe, and the close proximity of Mablethorpe, coupled with the repeated use of the same Christian names, points conclusively to William and John Crow of Theddlethorpe, 1545-46, as the ancestors of the Crows of this particular part of Lincolnshire.

CHILDREN OF WILLIAM CROW, THE ELDER, AND WIFE, MARY ————:

1. Mary Crow, born circa 1670; married at Trusthorpe, May 9, 1690, Richard Goodborne, and had a daughter Elizabeth. Mary and Elizabeth Goodborne were named in the will of William Crow, grazier, 1717.
2. WILLIAM CROW, born circa 1672; died 1717; married 1st, Elizabeth; buried January 25, 1705-06; 2nd, MARY, living 1717.
3. Elizabeth Crow, baptized at Trusthorpe, August 9, 1674; buried October 29, 1677, or September 1, 1679.
4. John Crow, baptized at Trusthorpe, September 13, 1678.

WILLIAM CROW, son of William Crow, the elder, and wife, Mary, was born about 1672 or 1676. He was a grazier, and married first, Elizabeth ————, and had four children, William, George, Francis and Elizabeth. His wife, Elizabeth, was buried January 25, 1705-06, and he married, for a second wife, about 1707, Mary ————. The surnames of his wives are not known. By his second wife, he had William, John, Mary and Ellen. Of the above children, only Elizabeth, the second William, John and Mary were living when he made his will, April 27, 1717. To his son William, he bequeathed lands in Sutton, Wesson, (Riston?) Foulsthorpe and Rossa, all in the parish of Trusthorpe, when he came of age, William to pay to his sister Mary Crow the sum of £50 when she attained the age of twenty-one. To his son John, he left his lands in Trusthorpe and Niddick, when he became of age, and to his eldest daughter Elizabeth, he devised a house and ten acres of land in Trusthorpe then in the possession of Francis Johnson. He appointed his wife, Mary, executrix. To Mary and Elizabeth Goodborne he left ten shillings each, £3 to Joney, wife of Joseph Draby, and ten shillings to William Crow, Junior.

William Crow was churchwarden of Trusthorpe 1705-1710, and was buried there May 6, 1717, in the churchyard of St. Peter's. His will, dated April 27, 1717, was proved at Horncastle, May 8, 1717.

STOKER OF WAITHE.[1]

Robert Stoker, of Waithe, Lincolnshire, England, was born about 1660. He was a churchwarden of Waithe in 1705. The Stoker name has been an extremely difficult one to trace, owing to the many forms in which it appears upon records, one of its variations being Stoke', which might be either Stokes or Stoker, two entirely different surnames.

Waithe is a very small village, six miles south of Grimsby, about midway between that town and Louth. A Robert Stoker of " Calsbia " (Calceby), also a hamlet, was married at Withcall on May 15, 1592, to Janet Clayton.[2]. These two villages lie within a few miles of each other between Alford and Louth, while Ulceby cum Fordington, (so called to distinguish it from another Ulceby near Barrow), is situated three and one-half miles southeast of Alford, hence quite near to the sea, and Winthorpe is directly on the coast, only a few miles to the southward. All of the above named villages are within an area of less than fifteen miles.

The Ulceby cum Fordington Parish Register records the baptisms of "Marie Stoker", on June 7, 1600, and "Robert Stoker", on December 5, 1602,[3] but unfortunately their parents are not named. No other of this surname appears upon this record.

A John Stoker, of Winthorpe, left a will dated April 10, 1652, in which he calls himself "yeoman", and names his wife, Margaret, a son Robert, and a daughter, married to a Mr. Chapman, and her two children, John and Thomas. He also mentions "my brother, John Stoker".[4]

It was not unusual for a man to have had two sons of the same Christian name. It is to be regretted that the Winthorpe

[1] The name of this village, now Waithe, was, in ancient times, written Waith. In the present volume, the original form has been retained in quoting old records.

Parish Register has not been examined, for this will is of particular interest, since John, son of Robert Stoker of Waithe, is described as "Junior" on the Waithe register, which implies that he had an uncle, or an older cousin, of the same Christian name. Winthorpe and Waithe are only about twenty-five miles distant from each other.

There are no wills, or inquisitions to aid us in connecting the Calceby-Winthorpe family of Stoker with that of the village of Waithe.

Robert Stoker was buried in the churchyard at Waithe on February 22, 1727-28, and his widow, Elizabeth, at the same place, on May 14, 1730. Their three children were baptized in the parish church of Waithe.[1]

CHILDREN OF ROBERT AND ELIZABETH STOKER:

1. Elizabeth Stoker, baptized February 13, 1686-87; buried at Waith, June 21, 1687.
2. JOHN STOKER, Junior, of Waith, baptized January 14, 1688-89; married ANNE ———.
3. Susan Stoker, baptized March 29, 1692.

JOHN STOKER, JR., of Waithe, Lincolnshire, son of Robert and Elizabeth Stoker of the same place, was baptized there January 14, 1688-89. The maiden name of his wife, Anne, is not known. Their children were baptized in Waithe.

CHILDREN OF JOHN AND ANNE STOKER:

1. Susan Stoker, baptized July 30, 1713.
2. Anne Stoker, baptized March 19, 1714-15.
3. Elizabeth Stoker, born September 23, 1716; baptized September 27, 1716.
4. Jane Stoker, born July 11, 1718; baptized July 20, 1718.
5. HANNAH STOKER, born June 12, 1724; baptized June 14, 1724; buried at East Halton, May 20, 1769, aged 45 years; married April 15, 1745, JOHN CROW, of Waith and East Halton.

[2] Among the certified records sent to Mr. Johnson in 1909 are two, which are identical in wording, but one states that "Robert" was buried on February 22, 1727, while the other says it was "John". The former is believed to have been the correct one.
